Virginian Seized As Torch Slayer Of Own Family

Burned Home, Killing Wife, 2 Daughters Police Charge.

Heavy Insurance Is Held Motive

Grand Jury Today Will Be Asked to Indict U. S. Worker.

Philip J. Wise, 43, a toolmaker at the Washington Navy Yard, was under arrest in Fairfax, Va., last night charged with murdering his wife and two daughters by setting fire to their home.

The warrants in the case—one charging murder and the other charging that he fired the house—were sworn out by Wise's father-in-law, Harry Javins.

The tragedy took place in Franconia, Va., late on the night of October 23.

Since then Sheriff E. P. Kirby, of Fairfax, and Commonwealth's Attorney Wilson M. Farr have been conducting an investigation. Last week they felt that they had sufficient evidence to lay the crime to Wise, and they had Mrs. Wise's father swear out the warrants.

Heavy Insurance.

Sheriff Kirby said last night that one of the suspicious circumstances in the case was the heavy insurance on the Wise home and on the mother and two daughters who were burned to death.

Wise, he said, was administrator of the estates and collected this insurance.

Sheriff Kirby, Commonwealth's Attorney Farr and various witnesses will appear before the grand jury today and ask that Wise be indicted.

Wise was arrested Saturday night in Alexandria, where he had been living since the fire. At the time of the tragedy he claimed that he had made a futile attempt to rescue his wife and two daughters.

The wife, Nellie, 40, and the daughters, Beatrice, 19, and Frances, 12, were asleep on the top floor. A son, Woodrow, 21, was on the ground floor. He escaped.

Wise said he told his wife and daughters to climb out on the roof of the porch because the fire was raging on the stairway. They did this, he said, and he went to get a ladder.

When he came back, he said, they had left the porch and gone back into the burning house.

Said He Attempted Rescue.

He attempted to get into the house to rescue them, he said, but was driven back by the flames. Neighbors who were attracted by the blaze found that Wise was severely burned about the hands and arms. Later he was taken to the Alexandria Hospital.

At the time of the fire the story was told that the women reached the porch roof safely when Frances remembered her canary and crawled back through the window for it. When she did not return immediately the older sister and then the mother followed her. They did not reappear.

Beatrice Wise was graduated from the Lee-Jackson High School near Alexandria in 1932 and was employed at a department store in Washington. The youngest daughter was a freshman in the Lee-Jackson school.

'Bloody Angle' Camper Killed

CCC Member Is Dead of Blow on Jaw; Fight Involved Girl.

The pall of death hung over Bloody Angle again last night.

In the Civil War, Bloody Angle—about 11 miles from Fredericksburg, was the scene of slaughter, which historians say, never was equaled in a fight at close quarters.

Bloody Angle is now a CCC camp.

Yesterday one of the CCC men, John M. Sinclair, 42, a World War veteran, went to Fredericksburg on liberty. With him was Leonard H. McGhee. They had a fight with two other men, and Sinclair was killed by a blow on the jaw.

Police arrested Paul Noblett, 30, and William Calhoun, 20, who, according to Commonwealth's Attorney W. B. F. Cole, told this story:

Gladys Calhoun, sister of one of them and sweetheart of the other, was crossing the street when the two CCC men "made a pass" at her. Reaching home, she told about it, and Noblett and Calhoun whne out to avenge her.

Leftists, Nationalists Clash in French City

Chartres, France, Jan. 20 (AP).—A gun battle between Nationalists and Leftists, in which one manifestant was shot, terrorized street crowds here today.

Thirty shots were exchanged when members of the Anti-Fascist "Common Front" mobbed the "Patriotic Youths" as the latter started back to Paris after attending a meeting of their organization.

Memel Seeks Reich Rule, Reports Say

Plebiscites in Austria and Danzig Also Seen Possible.

Geneva, Jan. 20 (AP).—Renewed Nazi activities in Austria and the reported bristling of Lithuanian defences around the autonomous city of Memel partly confirmed today the impression here that the German landslide in the Saar may have radical repercussions in other German-speaking regions of Europe.

The pronounced pro-German attitude of Nazi leaders from the free city of Danzig at Geneva was noted in this connection, leading to the belief in league quarters that there might be a new plebiscite demand in Austria, Danzig and Memel even if unprovided for in existing treaties.

(Reports in the German press that Lithuanian troops were massing at Taurow, near the German frontier, were accompanied by reports that Memel, a mandated territory, favored restoration to the Fatherland.)

Difficulties Feared.

A review of the league council membership this week indicated the conviction that negotiations with Germany on equality rights will be difficult.

France and Russia probably will concentrate on obtaining an eastern Locarno pact and getting Germany and Poland to sign it. If they fail the belief is that they will make an accord among themselves and try to draw in other powers, beginning with Czechoslovakia.

France, statesmen believed, will make disarmament concessions to Germany conditional on Germany's adherence to the Locarno pact. Poland continues to raise objections to the pact. A Polish spokesman said, "We particularly do not like the idea of Russian troops running over Polish territory, for that is what a mutual assistance would imply."

Soviet Influence Grows.

With Russian influence in the League of Nations steadily increasing, two Soviet representatives were appointed yesterday to the financial and economic committee and a Russian has been made secretary general. It was felt here that Britain especially is keen on getting Germany back as a full-fledged league member.

Anthony Eden, under secretary of foreign affairs for Britain, said that European statesmen now will concentrate on four points: Extension of the Roman accords with France; an eastern Locarno pact; rebirth of the disarmament conference, and the return of Germany to the league.

Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 20 (AP).—Gendarmerie reinforcements were rushed to the cantons of Eupen and Malmedy today and a number of agitators for the return of the section to Germany were arrested.

The possibility of Belgium's protesting directly to Berlin or lodging a complaint with the League of Nations concerning the campaign of the German sympathizers was seen in political circles today.

Nazi sympathizers, inspired by the result of last Sunday's Saar plebiscite which returned the basin to Germany, paraded several days ago to make plain their desire to have the cantons reannexed to the fatherland. They were taken from Germany under the Versailles treaty.

Although the press has not emphasized the incidents, it was learned that the Belgian authorities have been active in trying to ascertain the identity of the leaders of the agitation.

Pamphlets, said to have been printed in Germany, and widely distributed in Eupen and Malmedy, invited the cooperation of the population in overriding the provisions of the treaty by obtaining the return of the cantons to the Reich.

Boys' Term Stirs Storm Of Criticism

Judge Bentley Under Fire for Sentences of Joy Riders.

Decision May Be Appealed to Roosevelt, Her Critics Say.

The action of Miss Fay Bentley, judge of the Juvenile Court, in sending two 15-year-old school boys to a reformatory until they are 21 because they took a "joy-ride" in an automobile not their own, caused something of a furore in Washington yesterday.

Hermann Hagedorn, author of "The Boys' Life of Theodore Roosevelt," and other works, expressed his feelings in a letter to The Post.

"Who is Judge Fay Bentley?" he asked. "And where does she get her authority to send boys for six years to the reformatory practically without trial? The lady—who, I understand, is unmarried—may know the law but she does not know much about boy-nature if she imagines that by sending to the reformatory those boys who went joy-riding, she is helping to make them useful citizens."

Presidential Appeal Promised.

Attorney Ralph A. Cusick, who was retained after the boys had been banished to the National Training School, was overwhelmed with telephone calls yesterday.

The callers, many of them prominent, said they would bring the case to the attention of President Roosevelt, Attorney General Homer Cummings and members of Congress.

The boys, William F. Fanning and Arthur T. Penn, were sentenced by Judge Bentley Friday. The hearing, according to the parents, lasted only a few minutes and no witnesses were called.

Father Protests.

Frank Fanning, a contractor and father of William, charged last night that he went to the reform school yesterday, but was denied a chance to see his son, who is in the hospital with the grippe.

Attorney Cusick will appear before Judge Bentley this morning and formally move that the verdict be set aside. Failing in that he will carry the case to the Court of Appeals.

Cusick pointed out Saturday that the penalty for adults charged with "joyriding"—which means to "take" an automobile, not "steal" one—is less harsh than the six-year sentence imposed on the boys.

The maximum jail sentence for adults is five years, with the probability in cases of a first offense that they will be placed on probation.

Had Played "Hookey."

The two boys had been playing "hookey" from school early in December when they were notified to appear in Juvenile Court and answer to a truancy charge. Frightened, they decided to run away. They took an automobile owned by Policeman George Maghan and drove to Roanoke, Va., where the Fanning boy's grandmother resides.

They were arrested in Roanoke and returned here.

Mr. Hagedorn, in his letter to The Post, said that if it is true that neither the parents nor the owner of the automobile were called, it meant that the boys were "railroaded" to the reformatory.

"Exactly what is a Juvenile Court for?" he asked. "Isn't it to mitigate the rigors of the law for youngsters who don't quite understand what law is about? Isn't it to find out through informal talk, freed from the harshness of ordinary court procedure, what lies behind the child's mishap? These boys are not criminals. They are children who 'played hookey' and were scared of punishment and ran away to grandma in someone else's car.

Investigation Suggested.

"They didn't try to sell the car. When they reached their destination, they deserted it. That was all. But they are to be sent up for six years. It's their hard luck that there is a Juvenile Court. In an adult court they would have gone up only for five years. And if they had been half as lucky (or legally safeguarded) as hold-up men, burglars or murderers, they would probably not have been punished at all.

"Everybody knows what reformatories are and what they do to boys. Does Miss Bentley pretend that any reformatory is better for a boy than the influence of his own home when that home (as seems to be the case with both these boys) is decent and self-respecting?

"One wonders, what other boys and girls has Miss Bentley been sending to the reformatory and for how long and for what reasons? Isn't an investigation in order? 'A boy's will is the wind's will,' said a great poet. It can be harnessed and made useful, but not by harsh sentences or reformatories."

5 Carolinians Killed In Train-Auto Collision

Union, S. C., Jan. 20 (AP).—Five persons were killed today at Carlisle, near here, as their automobile was struck by a Southern Railway freight train.

They were identified as J. H. Shumpert, of Newberry; Mr. and Mrs. Walter McCardy, Miss Thelma McCardy and Miss Happy Hazel, all of Saluda.

President for Garner As '36 Running Mate

White House Whisper Dashes Hopes of Several Rivals.

(Associated Press.)

Word was quietly given yesterday that President Roosevelt wants Vice President Garner to team up with him again for the 1936 presidential election.

This information dashed cold water on the aspirations of half a dozen prospective candidates. There had been talk among pronounced Liberal Democrats in the Administration about deposing Garner and naming either Ickes or Wallace in his place. To clear up the matter, some Democratic leaders sought the President's attitude. Any doubt that Mr. Roosevelt wanted Garner to be his running mate has been definitely dissipated.

With this development, political interest turned to the prospects of leading Senators of both parties to return in 1936. Besides the floor chieftains, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democrat, and Senator McNary, of Oregon, Republican, many of the best known members of that branch—32 in all—will be up for reelection.

Senator Borah, Idaho Republican Independent, who has seen the longest service in the Senate, and Senator Carter Glass, Virginia Democrat, who recently celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday anniversary, are veterans whose terms expire at the end of this Congress. Borah entered the Senate in 1907. Already Gov. Ben C. Ross, of Idaho, has indicated that he would seek the Democratic nomination to run against Borah. Glass apparently will have little opposition.

Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, is making his plans to seek the Presidency in 1936, having definitely broken with the Roosevelt Adminis-

Leaders Drive To Pass Relief Bill This Week

To Speed $4,880,000,000 Program to Forestall Opposition.

(Associated Press.)

Pulling party reins taut, Democratic leaders prepared yesterday to drive President Roosevelt's $4,880,000,000 relief program through Congress this week and then concentrate on the social security legislation.

Top speed on these two vital phases of the Administration's program was ordered. The strategy was adopted to prevent disgruntled blocs from gaining sufficient strength to increase either the relief outlay or social security benefits contemplated by the Administration.

While the Senate resumes debate today on the World Court, the House will turn to the $4,880,000,000 relief appropriation with passage under a "gag" rule scheduled not later than Wednesday.

Set to press consideration of the social security program, the House Ways and Means Committee probably will hear the first Administration witness today.

A two-barreled blast at the munitions industry and war profits will be leveled this week by Congressional committees.

Having received an additional $50,000 from the Senate, the Nye committee will pursue its inquiry into the munitions industry today. The House Military Committee will begin hearings on a universal draft bill tomorrow.

Members of the cash bonus bloc brought additional pressure on Speaker Byrns for an early vote in the House. Set to force a vote unless the Democratic leaders yield, Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, said it had been indicated the measure would come up after the social security program is disposed of by the House.

Only brief hearings were scheduled before the House Appropriations' Committee by Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, on the $4,880,000,000 relief fund. Under the plan, both the $4,000,000,000 work-relief and $880,000,000 emergency relief funds will be dumped into one measure in a lump sum to be expended under the direction of the President. The bill is to be reported by the committee without any part of the fund earmarked for certain projects.

To expedite the social security bill, the Senate Finance Committee will open hearing tomorrow with

Fight on Ickes As Relief Head Due in House

Foes' Action Is Reprisal for Secretary's 'Lack of Courtesy.'

(Associated Press.)

A move to insert a provision in the pending work relief measure which would bar Secretary Ickes from administering its four-billion-dollar appropriation has strong support in the House.

Ickes is the public works administrator. The President, however, has not indicated whether he will name him to direct the new expenditures depended upon to put the unemployed to work.

There has been no reflection upon the Secretary's honesty or the work he has done and some of the feeling by the House members is personal. Many of them and some Senators, too, resent what they feel to be a lack of courtesy due themselves from the present public works administrator.

The feeling against Ickes is strong enough, one House Democratic leader said, to provide a good chance for success for the proposed "spanking" under discussion.

However, Representative Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, which will handle the work relief bill, said he would have nothing to do with such a proposal.

"The proposition is to give this lump sum to the President," Buchanan said, "and to hold him responsible for its expenditure. Since he is to be responsible, I don't see why he shouldn't be allowed to pick

Fireman Overcome Fighting Bank Blaze

Silver Spring Company Answers Night Alarm.

Fire broke out in the two-story brick building of the Silver Spring National Bank, Georgia and Oak avenues, Silver Spring, Md., at 10:30 o'clock last night. Firemen still were fighting the blaze half an hour later.

One of the flame fighters, Ernest Brandt, of the Silver Spring Fire Department, was felled by smoke, and colleagues rushed him out to the street where he received first-aid.

The blaze appeared to be just over the bank vault on the second floor, where Drs. Claude W. Mitchell and Gerald Scully have their offices.

Slush Soaks Streets as Rain Melts Season's Biggest Snow

Washington sloshed around in the dripping remnants of the season's heaviest snowfall yesterday.

While scores of residents called police headquarters to complain that, despite the emergency parking ban, main thoroughfare streets remained filled with slush and snow, motorists and pedestrians moved slowly and perilously.

In the city and in nearby Maryland and Virginia counties, snow and rain gave highways a glass-like covering and police were kept busy throughout the day and night handling accident reports.

Washington, accidents failed to develop serious injuries, but in Chevy Chase, D. C., an auto attempting to stop for a street car skidded instead into Ethel Jennings, colored, of 53 R street northwest, who was taken to Emergency Hospital with a fractured collar bone. The accident occurred at Connecticut avenue and Williams lane and authorities said the car was driven by C. H. Severance, of 1636 Connecticut avenue.

More than 5 inches of snow fell during Saturday night and yesterday morning, and after it came rain, temperatures slowly rising from a low of 27 to 35 early last evening.

The rain was at once a boon and a handicap to an army of 300 workmen who were sent out early Saturday night to clear the streets and free snowbound traffic and who worked all night and through the day. The rain melted a considerable portion of the night's fall, but what was left the street cleaning department found impossible to handle.

No attempt was made, according to Thomas L. Costigan, street cleaning superintendent, to haul away snow

2 Witnesses Intimidated, Reilly Vows

Pair Received Threats by Phone, Hauptmann Counsel Charges.

State to Resume Drive to Link Money and Ladder to Bruno.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Attempts have been made to intimidate defense witnesses in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, it was charged today by Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel.

"Within the last 24 hours," he asserted, "one important male witness for the defense, whose name was mentioned in Flemington the other day, has received phone calls and messages threatening harm to his wife and children if he dares to testify for the defense.

"This man was first called to my attention by another man who was to have been a witness, and who also was told to keep away from Flemington."

Reilly asserted he would produce a witness—whose identity he refused to disclose—who would testify that on the day of the kidnaping he (the witness) directed two motorists to the Lindbergh estate.

"Hauptmann," he sai. "was not one of the two motorists."

Jersey to Trace Funds In Brokerage Accounts

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 20 (AP).—The State of New Jersey will carry its fight to convict Bruno Richard Hauptmann of the Lindbergh baby murder along two distinct lines tomorrow.

While it pounds away at the money angle, seeking to prove that the money Hauptmann had in brokerage and bank accounts was part of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom money, it will break this course of action now and again to link Hauptmann more directly with the actual crime through testimony relating to the ladder and to his actions the day of the crime.

Hauptmann spent the week-end in Hunterdon County Jail pouring over photostatic copies of his brokerage accounts to aid his counsel in the defense.

Will Link Money to Fisch.

His possession of so much money will not be an easy thing to explain to the jury of eight men and four women, but the defense attorneys, it has been disclosed, will call three responsible persons to testify that the late Isador Fisch, the little German-Jew furrier, asked them to take care of the shoe box which Hauptmann says Fisch left with him before he sailed for Germany and in which Hauptmann found the ransom money. Fisch died in Germany in 1933.

The State will call only two witnesses to get its evidence relating to the bank and brokerage accounts into the record. One of these witnesses will be a Federal agent, the other a certified public accountant. At a conference in Trenton yesterday, attended by Assistant Attorney General Richard Stockton, and Federal Agents Edward Hill and William Frank, the accounts were studied and it was decided to eliminate eighteen of the witnesses scheduled to appear.

The State intends to prove, if it can, that Hauptmann, a carpenter not steadily employed between the dates of April 2, 1932, when the Lindbergh ransom was paid, and September 19, 1934, when he was arrested, managed to get $49,960, only $40 less than the total ransom.

Through the presentation of this testimony, the prosecution hopes, it will offset any defense charges that Fisch committed the kidnaping, collected the ransom and left part of the money with Hauptmann, in whose garage $14,000 of the ransom money was found.

When he was arrested, Hauptmann had a credit balance of $888 in his account with Steiner, Rouse & Co. In his wife's maiden name, Anna Schoeffler, he had a credit balance of $5,017. In the Central Savings Bank, New York, the Hauptmanns had a joint deposit account of $2,578, and they held two mortgages worth $7,000 on houses in Brooklyn.

Stock market losses of Hauptmann's totaled $7,000, the State will try to show. It will account for $7,500 by quoting Hauptmann himself that he lent Fisch that amount. Before he was arrested more than $5,000 ransom money turned up.

To Stress Money Angle.

Among the pieces of evidence the State will produce as it stresses the money angle of the case will be a $400 radio which Hauptmann bought shortly after the ransom collection date. Hauptmann's hunting trips and his wife's 1932 trip to Europe will be introduced to show that Hauptmann possessed more money than his working capacity warranted, and that he had this money long before he met Fisch.

To offset the damaging effect of this testimony, the defense will hammer away at the point that some $31,000 of the ransom money has never been accounted for, and that none of that which has been recovered turned up in the Hauptmann brokerage or bank accounts. The defense will stress that Hauptmann and his wife were hard working people and always lived frugally, and will remark also that Mrs. Hauptmann went to Germany in

Karpis' Volleys Blast N. J. Trap; Bullet Fells Girl

Machine Gun of Public Enemy No. 1 Scatters Hotel Cordon.

Harry Campbell Also Flees in Car

Florida Tip Results in Futile Bluecoat Raid at Atlantic City.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 20.—The Nation's latest ace of bad men, the 25-year-old Alvin Karpis, shot his way out of Atlantic City early today.

With him, triggering a machine gun, was another of the Middlewest's hunted criminals, Harry Campbell.

Behind them they left their women, one of them wounded and an expectant mother.

Trapped just before dawn in a hotel room to which they came only yesterday, the two desperadoes—wanted for crimes ranging from robbery to kidnaping and murder—answered with gunfire the police demand to surrender.

Head Their Auto South.

Fighting their way from their fourth floor quarters to an alley, blazing so close to policemen that one officer's cap was shot from his head, they stole an automobile and then, pursued by 20 policemen and with every traffic light in the city flashing on and off—a general police alarm—they drove toward Camden, distancing pursuit.

There was a report, unconfirmed, that Campbell—who was in his underwear when he was surprised by detectives—had been wounded.

Karpis' "girl friend," known both as Dolores Delaney and as Louise Graham, was slightly wounded in the leg. She is soon to bear a child, the police surgeon said.

The other woman, arrested with the 21-year-old Delaney girl, is Winona Burdette, also known as Mrs. Louise Campbell. She is 22.

Twice Shoot to Freedom.

A chase through the city's streets during which, on two occasions, the fugitives drove their car down blind streets, wheeled about and shot their way anew through the pursuing police forces, added to the sensationalism of the escape.

Police Capt. Sam Wheatley said he did not believe it possible the two men had been able to get clear of the city. With Mayor Harry Bacharach taking personal charge of the police department, a thorough search was instituted.

The word that the notorious Karpis—hunted as the master mind of the Edward Bremer kidnaping in St. Paul, Minn., last year—was in Atlantic City followed a telegraphed tip from Florida to be on the watch for a car bearing Florida license D5-306.

"Be careful," the information said. "These are two bad men, heavily armed."

Car Found in Garage.

Detectives checked garages and found the car parked in the Coast garage at the foot of South Kentucky avenue, close to the boardwalk.

They traced Karpis and Campbell to the Dan-Mor Hotel, close by.

They learned that the two men had arrived the day before and had taken a fourth-floor room adjoining that occupied by the two women, who arrived a week ago Friday.

With surprising bravado, Karpis had gone shortly after his arrival to the police surgeon, Dr. Carl Surran, and had made arrangements with him for the delivery of the baby the Delaney girl is expecting.

"We've got plenty of dough, and we want the best for the little girl," said "Public Enemy No. 1" with a record of terms in the penitentiaries of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Detectives, tracing the occupants of the stolen car with the Florida license, arrived at the hotel about 5 a. m. today. Two of them went to the fourth floor. The door of the room occupied by Karpis and Campbell was ajar.

One of the officers poked a pistol through the opening and cried out: "Stick 'em up. We're officers."

The response was immediate, Karpis shouted back:

Plan to Center Crime in City Spurs Roundup; 3 Women Held.

An elaborate gangland plot, apparently designed to make Washington a center of holdup, robbery and kidnaping activities, has been smashed by police in the last 24 hours and late yesterday 14 persons, including three women, were held on open charges pending a complete investigation.

Throughout Saturday night and yesterday's early morning hours, members of the new police "pick-up" squad, armed with rumored reports of the widespread plot, descended on poolrooms, rooming houses and known underworld haunts to round-up nearly a score of suspected gangsters.

The prisoners were grilled until daylight. Several were released after establishing alibis.

Held as Ringleaders.

With confiscated evidence of planned violence, officials finally singled out four men as suspected ringleaders. In their possession, police reported, were weapons and implements adequate to aid in crimes from safe-cracking to kidnaping. These suspects are held incommunicado.

They were arrested in a downtown restaurant. Lying beside one of the men seated at a table, police said, was a small leather bag. It contained four revolvers, a large roll of adhesive tape, sheets of sandpaper, a pair of cloth gloves with the fingers and palms lined with soft leather; an assortment of bullets and several keys.

Inspector Frank S. Burke, detective chief, described the four suspects as "dangerous and up to no good." He said that all except one were from Baltimore.

"Shake Down" Suspected.

"It is our belief," the detective chief declared, "that these four men were planning to 'shake down' a well known Washington gambler and possibly to start other criminal operations here."

First reports were the suspects would be questioned in connection with a recent alleged extortion plot against a Tennessee judge. This was later denied and police professed ignorance of such a plot.

Although the prisoners have refused to talk, officials pointed out that possession of the adhesive tape indicated a possible kidnaping attempt. The gloves, revolvers and ammunition, police declared, led to a belief that safe-crackings and holdups had been planned.

Among others held, several, it is expected, will be released after further questioning. All, including the three women, Inspector Burke said, will be quizzed regarding recent crimes in Washington.

The wholesale round-up followed announced intentions of "cleaning out" Washington crime and ridding the city of "undesirables." Several suspects, arrested in the newest drive, were released on their promise to leave town.

Six in Brooklyn Die As Gas Leaks in Flat

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Leaking gas was blamed by police today for the deaths of six persons in a Brooklyn flat.

The dead included three generations of the family of Dominico Figueroa, a Puerto Rican. Besides Figueroa, his son and daughter, a grandchild, a son-in-law and a brother of the latter were found dead.

Veterans Seek Pensions at 65 In Latest Move

Secret Drive by World War Group Will Shortly Make Appearance.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

An undercover campaign to pension World War veterans probably will be brought out into the open on Capitol Hill within a few weeks, it was learned yesterday.

Proponents of the plan, including influential Democrats, were known to have submitted their proposal to high-ranking Government officials. They hope to amend the old-age pension section of the Administration-championed economic security bill to drive the opening wedge in their program.

Another important development along the veterans' legislation front was news of a possible compromise under which advocates of an immediate full cash bonus would be satisfied with payment at once to needy former service men and satisfaction of other claims within 18 months. The agreement would involve cancellation of interest on bonus loans.

The pension scheme, it was reported, would provide special treatment for American veterans of all wars and their wives or widows. The plan would be closely linked with old-age pensions for nonveterans already contemplated in the Wagner-Lewis bill.

$10 a Month Asked.

Advocates of the broadening of the annuity program want veterans who have reached 65 to receive $10 a month more from the Federal Government than will be paid to those without a service record. War service would be the only test for the extra compensation.

Another dispensation for veterans, under the plan, would be payment of the pensions beginning at the age of 55 to those veterans suffering nonservice connected total and permanent physical disabilities.

As the Wagner-Lewis bill now reads, all persons in need at 65, irrespective of war service, would be paid $15 a month by the Federal Government and a like amount by the State in which they live.

Compromise to Wait.

Uncle Sam already pays pensions to veterans of the Civil and Spanish Wars. It has long been recognized that sooner or later efforts would be made to put through pensions for World War soldiers, sailors and marines.

Meanwhile, the bonus bill compromise talk was heard on all sides. Influential members expected such negotiations would not materialize until a cash bonus bill without any strings tied to it has been passed by the House and Senate, if at all. There is little doubt of House passage, but outcome of the fight on the other side of the Capitol is more uncertain.

The House Ways and Means Committee will conduct hearings on bonus legislation sometime after it disposes of the Wagner-Lewis bill. Outstanding bonus bills, introduced by Representatives Patman (Democrat), Texas, and Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, call for immediate cash payment. The Patman proposal would provide for printing of the necessary money, while the Vinson measure would involve issuance of bonds to raise it.

Patman said yesterday he would withhold any attempt to force his bill out of committee until the security legislation is reported out. He indicated he did not expect to circulate a petition to blast the bill out of committee.

"I feel sure the committee will report it out in a reasonable time," he said.

President Favors Garner as Mate

Long Fixing Up His Fences.

At a special session of the Louisiana Legislature recently, Long had a bill passed which permits him, if he receives the votes, to obtain the Democratic senatorial nomination in his State next January. This would leave him free to strive either for the Democratic Presidential nomination, or to campaign as a candidate on the "share-the-wealth" ticket.

Some Democratis elected in 1930 will be confronted by opponents for their party's nominations. Already there is talk that Gov. Henry Horner, of Illinois, may be one of several to oppose Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Democratic whip, for the nomination.

Represenative Disney, of Oklahoma, has been mentioned as a prospective candidate for the Democratic nomination for the seat of Senator Gore, who has not been friendly to some of the Administration's policies.

Senator Morris Sheppard, Texas Democrat, who fathered the eighteenth amendment, may have strong intra-party opposition. Representative Patman, of Texas, leader of the cash bonus group, has been urged by friends to run. Friends of Representative Fred Vinson, Kentucky Democrat, have urged him to run against Senator Logan for the party nomination.

Two of the severest Roosevelt critics, Senators Dickinson, of Iowa, and Hastings, of Deleware, Republican leaders, will be centers of attack by "New Dealers." Unless the situation changes, they may have strong opposition.

Turner Elected Head Of Newspaper Guild

Richard L. Turner, of the Associated Press, was elected president of the Washington Newspaper Guild during a meeting at the National Press Club yesterday.

Turner succeeds the late Dan de Souza, of the Washington Evening Star, who was killed in an automobile accident December 23.

Between You and Me

Borah and the Idaho Potato; The Happy Judge Pecora; Ancient Mariner on Hill.

By Raymond Clapper

SENATOR BORAH has made himself one of the chief challengers of the New Deal. His fight on NRA made the Senate rafters ring and brought Clarence Darrow back into the headlines for several fast rounds with Gen. Johnson. Last summer Borah rode all over Idaho like a modern Paul Revere, warning his constituents that AAA and other New Deal measures like the Bankhead act were throttling their liberties and regimenting them like Fascist schoolboys.

Now Borah is weakening. Potatoes are responsible. Prices took a tailspin and growers appealed to AAA for help. Sentiment leaned toward amending AAA to include potatoes as a basic commodity or puting potatoes under compulsory restriction control like that provided by the Bankhead act over cotton or the Kerr act over tobacco. Chester Davis, of AAA, called a conference to discuss action.

Who should come into this conference but Senator Borah in person. That in itself was an event. He seldom leaves Capitol Hill. He goes from his dark cavernous office to the Senate chamber to speak on the World Court or some other broad question of Statecraft and returns to his office to study and meditate. Rarely does he concern himself with the petty errands which keep most Senators busy. There are two kinds of Senators, office boy Senators and Statesmen Senators. Borah always has been considered a Statesman Senator. Executive officials go to him. Almost never does he go to them.

So there was much salaaming when the eminent Senator walked into the potato conference at AAA. He listened to the description of the potato growers' plight, and to pleas that they be allowed to share in the benefits of AAA. There was great suspense when Senator Borah cleared his throat. He spent a few moments describing the big potato's prominent role in Idaho's husbandry.

"My people want to cooperate," he said, "and I feel in that mood myself."

So when Gov. Ben Ross runs against Borah for the Senate next year, he won't be able to say that Borah stood in the way of Idaho potato growers who wanted to get in on the New Deal.

A little more than two years ago there was anxious trembling in high places in Wall Street when a short, stocky, swarthy lawyer was appointed chief counsel for the Senate Banking Investigating Committee. Ferdinand Pecora brought the biggest figures in finance before the committee table and for weeks on end sensational disclosures rolled out. Skeletons were hauled out and shaken under Pecora's klieg lights in the big Senate marble caucus room. It was a show such as Washington has seldom seen. Even J. P. Morgan, who came to testify, remained to look on and to become friendly on a gossipy basis with dozens of newspaper reporters and unexpectedly to hold a midget on his lap.

The investigation laid the foundation for the securities control legislation and its driving figure, Pecora, was given a one-year appointment on the SEC.

Over the week-end he left Washington. On his last night he called in a few friends, one member of S. E. C., James Landis, and gave them a dinner. The party broke up with a round of warm farewells and Pecora, who had come to Washington amid such sensational clamor, quietly departed for New York to put on judicial robes. They are strange garments for a restless person who has led the stormy life of a prosecutor. Pecora has always wanted to be a judge. His friends say he has never been happier.

One of the most familiar figures around the halls of Congress now is Dr. Townsend, the old-age pension man. Tall, gaunt, deadly serious, he paces the corridors, like the Ancient Mariner, buttonholing all who can be persuaded to listen to his story. One Representative has a petition for the plan signed by a woman who gives her age as 102 years old. Though they don't admit it publicly, Townsend advocates are beginning to feel the hand of doom upon them for this session and they are saying privately that Congress may turn them down this time, but that they will be back stronger than ever next year. They are beginning to split among themselves over details of the legislation. Not all who profess to be for the Townsend plan regard the McGroarty bill as the best form for it.

One story comes back from the field that FERA agents installed refrigerators in warehouses for storing perishables, but made the mistake of fastening them to the floor, and the building owners are now objecting to their removal, insisting that they are permanent fixtures.

AAA economists have exploded one theory, that prosperity would bring heavier food consumption. As between the boom years ended in 1929 and the subsequent depression years, the total consumption of food remained practically constant. The only thing is that prosperity might cause some shifts with vegetables and fruits replacing cereals to some extent in the mass diet. The economists figure that a prosperity diet might call for a decrease in the number of meat animals and an increase in dairy cattle.

The big effect of increased business activity would be on non-food farm products, such as cotton, consumption of which depends upon the volume of industrial production.

When they add it up, they see no prospect of acreage expansion in wheat or other food crops with returning prosperity unless export demand should increase.

Most of the Labor Department has moved into its new building opposite the Department of Commerce. But Miss Perkins delayed moving her office until workmen walled up one door of her private pastel-tinted shower bath. Under plans drawn under the Old Deal, the bathroom was to have been shared by the Secretary and the solicitor of the department. Mme. Secretary refused to move until the door on the other side was bricked up.

Bar Association To Be Reorganized

Prince Georges Lawyers Meet Tuesday Night.

A "reorganizing and revitalizing" of the Prince Georges County Bar Association will take place at a meeting at the Beaver Dam Country Club tomorrow night, it has been announced.

The object of the reorganization meeting will be to compose a "model bar association" in honor of T. Howard Duckett, president of the Maryland Bar Association, who is a member of the county organization.

The meeting, scheduled for last Tuesday, was postponed to allow members to attend the District of Columbia Bar Association meeting. H. Winship Wheatley, sr., of Hyattsville, another member of the county association, was elected president of the Washington unit.

$4,880,000,000 Aid To Pass This Week

Senator Wagner (Democrat), Kentuckey, coauthor with Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, explaining the measure.

Congress has been in session nearly three weeks, but not one piece of major legislation has yet been passed. However, both branches have approved the $777,400,00 annual supply bill for independent offices with the exception of a minor disagreement. This probably will be cleared away this week to send it to the White House for the President's signature.

Quadruplets

Ewe Delivered of Four Lambs at Walkersville.

Walkersville, Md., Jan. 20 (AP). The birth of quadruplets to a Hampshire ewe on Ernest Fogle's farm near here was announced today.

Fogle said the lambs were normal in every respect.

Since January 1, a Baltimore County cow has had triplets, a sow in Mount Pleasant 18 healthy pigs, and another ewe, 3 miles from Easton, triplet lambs.

Rev. Tayloe Quits FrontRoyalChurch

Episcopal Clergyman Will Serve in Florida.

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.) The Rev. Tucker Watkins Tayloe, rector of Calvary Episcopal Church here for the past eight and one-half years, has presented his resignation to the vestry to become effective March 1. The resignation was accepted with regret.

The Rev. Mr. Tayloe has accepted a call to St. Mark's Episcopal Church of Palatka, Fla., and will assume his new duties following the close of his pastorate here.

He came here from Martin's Brandon Parish of the diocense of Southern Virginia.

Mrs. Rosa Tashof Claimed by Death

Funeral Services to Be Held Tomorrow.

Mrs. Rosa Tashof, widow of Louis Tashof, who for many years was a well-known merchant of this city, died at her residence, 4211 Sixteenth street, northwest, on Saturday night. Mrs. Tashof was a lifelong resident of Washington, where she was born 68 years ago. She was affiliated with various civic and religious organizations, and was an active member of the Adas Israel Congregation.

She is survived by three sons, Ivan P. Tashof and Leon A. Tashof, attorneys of this city; J. Julian Tashof, a member of the bar of the State of New York; Sophie P. Tashof, of this city, and two sisters, Mrs. Helen Anthony, of New York, and Mrs. William Weinberg, of this city.

Funeral services will be held at the residence tomorrow at 11 a. m., interment following in the family plot of the Adas Israel Cemetery. Rabbi Solomon H. Metz and Cantor Louis Novick will officiate.

P.-T. A. to Hold Reception.

$35,000 Fire Destroys Church.

East Newark, N. J., Jan. 20 (AP).—Fire destroyed St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church early today and spread through the rectory to an adjoining two-family dwelling before checked. Damage was estimated by fire officials at $35,000.

Labor Parley Visions Spread Of Mill Strikes

Miss Perkins Addresses Regional Conference at Nashville.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 20 (AP).—A regional labor conference today "warned" the National Administration of impending unrest and strikes unless Congress "outlaws" company unions, provides for majority rule in collective bargaining and enforces the labor provisions of the NRA.

Delegates from 14 Southern States attending the conference heard Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins outline the Administration's economic security program as the climax of a day of resolution making which included verbal assaults on those opposing labor policies.

Troops Condemned.

Resolutions adopted at the opening of the two-day session for formulation of a program of State labor legislation struck at the use of National Guard troops during strikes, urged ratification of the child labor amendment, requested a Department of Justice investigation into the Southern States industrial council and asked President Roosevelt to see that Harlan County, Kentucky, "be made a part of the United States of America."

The labor situation at Rossville, Ga., where 600 employes of a hosiery mill recently went on strike, and in Harlan County, Kentucky, where it was asserted the United Mine Workers of America are not permitted to function, were the themes of addresses at the morning session.

Secretary Perkins Speaks.

Secretary Perkins, in outlining President Roosevelt's economic security program, said this move to assure jobs to those able to work, to provide unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, security assistance for dependent and crippled children and to aid the sick can be "worked out democratically along lines which are consistent with the competitive industrial system." She expressed the opinion that it would further the recovery program.

The Secretary planned two other speeches during her stay in Nashville, an appearance tomorrow before the Tennessee Legislature, and another address to the labor conference before her departure tomorrow afternoon.

Hotel Spokesman Calls Codes Dead

T. D. Green Declares NRA Subordinates Radicals.

Thomas D. Green, president of the American Hotel Association, said yesterday the NRA is dead so far as the restaurant code is concerned, according to the Associated Press.

He criticised the NRA for what he termed "the communistic tendencies" among subordinates and warned that the hotel industry would not subject their restaurants to the restaurant code authority.

Executives of the NRA, he said, "must necessarily depend upon the judgment of subordinates who, dressed in a little brief authority and inspired by the magic and power of Government backing, do not hesitate in presuming to dictate the business policy of men whose whole lives and fortunes are bound up in the enterprises."

"Frankly speaking," he added, "there are no such things as a restaurant or hotel code. They are dead."

Priest Stricken Fatally at Mass

Rev. Prendergast Studied at Georgetown U.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Rev. Father Jeremiah M. Prendergast, 66, nephew of the late Archbishop John Ireland, of St. Paul, Minn., died today from a heart attack suffered while he was conducting mass at the Church of the Nativity, wheer he was assistant parish priest.

Despite his sudden attack, Rev. Mr. Prendergast finished mass. He was helped into the rectory of the church where he died a few minutes after the service.

Born in Le Sueur, Minn., Rev. Mr. Prendergast was ordained as a priest in the St. Poul diocese in July, 1894. He was a graduate of Georgetown University, Washington, and continued his studies at Rome and Louvain, Belgium. He taught at Georgetown, Holy Cross and other colleges and served as assistant parish priest at St. Ignatius Church, New York, and in Baltimore.

Winchester Officials Seek Relief Increase

Winchester, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—A sudden increase in the number of applications for work relief has resulted in city officials, including Dr. C. R. Anderson, mayor; Lee Coble, chairman of the welfare committee of city council, and City Manager Arthur M. Field writing to VERA officials in Richmond asking that a larger grant be made to Winchester for this purpose.

Prior to the first of the year, approximately 100 persons were carried on the roll, it was said. Since the advent of cold weather, however, the applications have increased and based on an estimate by Miss Margaret Hurst, welfare director, it is believed relief will have to be provided for twice this number through April.

"The Two Opposites."

Denton, Md., Jan. 20 (AP).—Dr. George W. Humphries, of Salisbury, will deliver a lecture on "Washington and Lincoln, the Two Opposites," at the Methodist Episcopal Church here on Lincoln's Birthday, February 12.

Canines on Relief Arouse Kentucky Officials' Wrath

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 20 (AP).—The Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration took a firm stand today against carrying dogs on relief lists.

Relief workers found that in a section of one Kentucky County 84 families on relief owned 105 'coon dogs, many of them fat and sleek.

Into these families 63 babies were born last year.

The KERA ruled that it was all right to toss scraps and left-overs to the dogs but that it drew the line at writing the dog's name on the relief lists. Seeing that the babies are nourished is a big enough task, families owning dogs were informed.

House May Ban Ickes as Relief Fund Director

Foes' Action Is Reprisal for Secretary's 'Lack of Courtesy.'

anybody he wants to administer it—a Cabinet member or anybody else."

But others said they planned to punish the Cabinet member if they could.

Two means have been considered for carrying out the plan to express this displeasure.

One would call for insertion of a clause in the bill which would prohibit a Cabinet member from becoming the chief spending officer of the Administration during fiscal 1936. The other would require the President to submit to the Senate for confirmation the name of the man he selects to administer the work relief fund.

"Secretary Ickes has not been courteous to Congressmen," said one House leader, who did not want his name used. "He has taken the attitude that all Congressmen are trying to do the Government out of something. The resentment against him personally is very strong, both in the House and in the Senate.

Ickes' Difficulties.

"Even when a Congressman is pleased with a decision made by Ickes as public works administrator, he often holds a resentment as a result of the treatment he has received.

"There is a strong possibility that some action will be taken by Congress in an effort to prevent Ickes from continuing as administrator of the Government's work relief program."

Democrats, who feel they should have more patronage, have reported that they got little consideration from the Secretary of the Interior.

Ickes has had difficulties in other official quarters of late. He and James A. Moffett, Federal housing administrator, aired opposing views over the housing program. Mr. Roosevelt made them patch up their row.

Only a few weeks ago a report from the White House itself said a suggestion had been made to the Secretary that two of his principal assistants should quit.

Both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt said they did not make this suggestion. Its source has not been revealed.

Widow Commits Suicide By Burning Self in Oil

Hollywood, Jan. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Ida Maria Reh, 53, committed suicide today by wrapping her head in a kerosene-soaked towel and setting it on fire, Police Detective Frank Ryan reported.

Despondency over the death three months ago of her husband, Otto E. Reh, apparently was the motive.

Paul Whiteman Plays At Dance for Negroes

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Paul Whiteman, most famous of white jazz leaders, played for a Negro dance up in Harlem today and 2,000 dancers roared their approval.

Between his pulsing, swinging rhythms played as he almost never does for white audiences, his "uptown" admirers presented him with a large silver loving cup in recognition of his contributions to the development of their native jazz.

Liberty League Offers 6-Point 'Guide' to NRA

It Opposes Any Legislation to Continue Agency Permanently.

Continuance of NRA should be for a limited period, the American Liberty League said yesterday in laying down six guiding principles for any future program.

"Until the emergency passes," the league's statement said, "there should be no attempt to enact permanent legislation for the control of American industry. The national industry recovery act is a temporary measure designed to deal with the emergency. Any legislation by the Congress extending its life should contain a definite time limitation."

That was one of the guiding principles suggested by the league.

Guiding Principles.

The others follow:

The Congress should guard zealously its prerogatives under our plan of government in which there are three coordinate branches, the legislative, the executive, and the judicial. Lawmaking by executive order is a step toward dictatorship.

Undue encroachment upon the sovereignty of the States should be avoided. It should be kept in mind that our Constitution set up a dual form of government in which the States were intended to be supreme over such commerce as was not of an interstate character and over matters affecting the private lives of the people.

Self-government of industry should be the goal in any plan for concerted action in promoting recovery. There should be a minimum of bureaucratic regulation. Production control, price fixing and other devices which tend to interfere with the normal play of economic forces and to restrict individual initiative should be eliminated so far as possible. Interference with the liberties assured by the Constitution should be guarded against.

Rights of Both Parties.

Provisions of law respecting the relations of employers and employes should be fair to both parties. While the workers are entitled to every consideration, the rights of the employers also must be preserved. Requirements as to hours and wages should not be carried to such an extreme as to impose excessive burdens upon industry.

Emergency recovery legislation should not be susceptible to use as a vehicle for experimentation with untried theories.

In opposing permanent legislation to continue NRA, the league cited three arguments. First, it said, the American people may be willing to confer emergency powers upon the Chief Executive, but they hesitate to write these powers into permanent law; second, the experience thus far under NRA has not been such as to make possible a decision as to just what features should be retained permanently, and, third, there are still cases pending that will test the constitutionality of the NIRA.

Labor Opposition To30-Hr. WeekCited

Steel Institute Says Workers Oppose Proposal.

Steel mill employes, as well as consumers of steel, are declared opposed to legislation for a 30-hour week in industry, according to a statement issued yesterday by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Employe opposition is based upon the fear that it will result in reduction of weekly wages or in freezing those wages at existing low levels, the statement declared.

Steel industry management is fearful that "the difficulties attendant upon six-hour-day operation would be insurmountable," according to the release. Consumers look upon the proposed legislation as a measure that would cause steel prices to rise.

Brief Illness Fatal To Maj. Hernandez

Retired Officer Was Editor of Service Magazine.

Maj. R. J. Hernandez, U. S. A., retired, and for more than five years editor of the Quartermaster Review, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital after a brief illness.

Maj. Hernandez retired from the Army about five years ago after 30 years of service. He entered the service as a bandmaster, a post long held by his father, and frequently in recent years conducted the Army Band on special occasions. In France he served as the Brest quartermaster.

He lived with Mrs. Hernandez at 742 Van Buren street northwest.

Maj. Gen. Hase, Artillery Chief, Dies in Hospital

Appendicitis Operation of Last Week Followed by Complications.

Maj. Gen. William F. Hase, 61, chief of the Coast Artillery, died early yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital following an operation for appendicitis.

The operation was performed last Wednesday. Death followed major complications which set in early Saturday.

Gen. Hase lived with his wife and daughter, Hilda, at 1868 Columbia road. Surviving also are another daughter, Mrs. Harold Brusher, wife of Lieut. Harold Brusher, a grandchild, and two brothers, Henry and Frank Hase, of Milwaukee.

Gen. Hase was born in Milwaukee in 1874, graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1897, and after practicing law for a year, entered the Army during the Spanish-American War, serving as a second lieutenant of artillery.

He was in command of the Forty-fifth Coast Artillery in France and received the Distinguished Service Medal. Since the war he has been in charge of harbor defenses in San Francisco and Manila and has served as executive officer in the office of the chief of Coast Artillery. He was appointed chief of Coast Artillery in March, 1934.

Military rites will be conducted in Arlington National Cemetery at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Report Calls States Lax in Utility Control

State regulation of public utility companies was said yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission, according to the Associated Press, to have failed adequately to protect the public.

"In the granting of charters without proper safeguards, most of the States have competed in what Justice Brandeis has called a race 'not of diligence but of laxity,'" the report said.

The commission found that many States have little regulation either as to control of actual operations of holding companies, or to regulation of the security issues of such companies.

Experts Doubt Court Will Rule On Gold Today

Possibility Stirs Excitement in Financial World, However.

(Associated Press.)

The knowledge that the Supreme Court may rule today on the gold cases revivified speculation last night on the decision itself and the possible consequences.

There was no certainty, however, that an opinion would be handed down today. Sufficient time apparently has not elapsed since the oral arguments for the customary carefully written opinion.

But the court, could, if it chose, announce its decision today and file the written opinion later. Those most familiar with the procedure of the tribunal look for a ruling on February 4, or later. After meeting today the court recesses for two weeks.

The point at issue in the pending cases is whether the Government had the right to invalidate the gold payment clause in contracts.

Result of Adverse Ruling.

An adverse ruling would not directly affect the devaluation of the dollar but it would force payment of billions in currency equal to the value of the gold called for in the contract.

Predictions as to the decision itself are of necessity surmises, but observers expect to find the ancient conservative-liberal division recorded once the ruling is known.

If the past is any indication, Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Butler might be less inclined to uphold abrogation of the gold clause than Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo, for example.

Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts have come to be regarded as the two whose attitude is in doubt where the familiar cleavage occurs.

The Chief Justice perhaps has sided with the three liberals more often than Justice Roberts, but both have joined them frequently enough to put the four conservatives in the minority in many important cases.

Tremendous Pressure.

But the Chief Justice during argument asked Government counsel sharp questions which Attorney General Cummings and his aids are still recalling with uneasiness.

Veteran attorneys reflected also that one never is certain when the pattern that has prevailed in past court rulings will be broken under the tremendous pressure exercised by a case such as the one that is pending.

The gold cases have been compared to the Dred Scott action, which involved the issue of slavery, in importance.

Economically, the pending suit overshadows the Dred Scott case. Various estimates have been made of the increase in value of gold clause contracts if payment in the yellow metal's value is directed. Almost all are more than $50,000,000,000.

Were it not for gold, attention would be centered on the Thomas Mooney case.

Mooney, convicted for participation in the San Francisco preparedness day bombing in 1916, has asked the court for permission to file habeas corpus proceedings to obtain his release.

The court probably will give him its answer today.

Miss Earhart Given Bracelet at Dinner In Honor of Flight

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 20 (AP).—Amelia Earhart Putnam wore a bracelet of California gold nuggets today as a souvenir of a banquet at which her Honolulu-Oakland flight received the plaudits of President Roosevelt and his predecessor, Herbert Hoover.

The bracelet, bearing the likeness of a small airplane set with a diamond, was presented the flier by a women's committee which arranged the reception in her honor last night.

Miss Earhart and her husband, George Palmer Putnam—called the "forgotten man" by Gov. Frank Merriam as he and other officials joined in his wife's praise—visited friends here today while her plane was made ready for a return to Los Angles.

President Roosevelt's message to the flier congratulated her "for showing "the• 'doubting Thomases' that aviation is a science which can not be limited to men only."

Mr. Hoover, in his address, said:

"In June, 1932, it was my great privilege to confer on Miss Earhart the Distinguished Service Medal for the American people in recognition for her great flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

"At that time I said 'Mrs. Putnam has made all mankind her debtor in overcoming the barriers and dangers of the Atlantic.' Now she has again won the obligation of the whole American people.

"For her combined courage and modesty she deserves a place with the great race of pioneer women who cheerfully have contributed so mightily to the work of the world."

Election Slaying Trial Defense Opens Today

Pottsville, Pa., Jan. 20 (AP).—With the Commonwealth's charge of malice and premeditation its first target, the defense tomorrow will offer additional testimony in the murder trial of Joseph J. Bruno, former Schuylkill County detective and political leader, indicted for five election-eve slayings at Kelayres last November.

In an efffort to throw doubt upon the testimony of four men who said they heard Bruno in the street "about 8 o'clock" uttering a threat to "get" his political foes, three defense witnesses have testified Bruno was at a Republican election-eve meeting at the time of the slaying.

Rain continued to fall intermittently through last night, and more will fall today, the Weather Bureau said. Last night's lowest temperature, was 36, but tomorrow a subzero wave now sweeping across the Middle West is expected to hit the Capital.

With New York temperatures hovering about the 40s and a dismal drizzle falling, Washington appeared to be the storm center of the East. But west of Chicago temperatures ranged from 20 above to 22 below and highways perilous with ice brought death to ten persons, the Associated Press reported.

The cold wave spread into California where frost or freezing temperatures prolonged winter's occupation of the Far West. Snow and rain bore down on Washington and Oregon.

Snow lined the mountainous horizons east of Los Angeles and San Francisco and covered the streets of Seattle, all of which was "unusual." Below-zero temperatures congealed the wide spaces of the inland northwest and the high Sierras.

Spokane reported 22 below and Denver and Baker City, Oreg., 10 below, according to the Associated Press, and sub-zero temperatures settled over most of Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota.

Robber Relents As Victim Says, 'I'll Bring Ducks'

Chicago, Jan. 20 (AP).—Conrad Prenger not only talked a robber out of a holdup but sent him away a more sympathetic and satisfied man.

Prenger, his arms loaded with groceries, was on his way home last night when the robber stopped him. "Times have been tough with me," Prenger pleaded, "and if you take what little I have left, my wife and kiddies will be hungry all next week."

The robber let it be known he was hungry, too.

"Come up to my house for dinner," Prenger suggested. The robber accepted and together they went to Prenger's home. Mrs. Prenger fed the strange guest liberally as he engaged the two Prenger children in conversation.

When he had finished he reached into his pocket and gave each of the children a nickel, advising them to stay on the "straight and narrow."

Then he went away.

Private Funds May Facilitate Work of HOLC

$1,500,000,000 in Loans Is Plan of Building and Loan Head.

Chicago, Jan. 20 (AP).—A plan to provide $1,500,000,000 of private capital to 500,000 families who now have applications on file with the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and who can not expect to receive loans because theirs are not distress cases, was outlined here today by I. Friedlander of Houston, Tex., president of the United States Building and Loan League.

Friedlander, en route to Washington to preside tomorrow at a meeting of the Advisory Council to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said his plan involved close cooperation between the HOLC and the Federal Housing Administration, and would dispose of half the cases now on file with the HOLC.

He suggested that if the FHA will examine those HOLC applications where the applicant offers sufficient security and has a capacity to repay, "private capital will be quick to respond to this program by rearranging the terms of the notes which are eligible for insurance under FHA terms."

To facilitate immediate working of the plan, in case it is approved by the Federal agencies concerned, the 4,000 member Building and Loan Associations of the United States League were urged in a communication sent out by Friedlnader today to lose no time in applying for approved mortgagee status under title II of the housing act.

"Federal Government spokesmen have indicated that the Government will clean up its present HOLC applications and get out of the money lending business if private capital will function," he said. "We can accept this challenge if the two great Government agencies dealing with the home financing problem coordinate their activities on this practical basis."

Probation Officer's Wife Is Found Slain

Los Angeles, Jan. 20 (AP).—Hidden by underbrush near the lonely intersection of Laurel Canyon and Mulholland drive, the body of Mrs. Celia L. Holmes, wife of Edward E. Holmes, county probation officer, was found today. She had been slain.

The body was found by Mr. and Mrs. D. C. McComb, who had gone to the canyon on a hike. Their small dog led them to the scene. Mrs. Holmes, reported missing since January 11 by her husband, had been shot.

County School February Class Graduation Set

15 Will Receive Diplomas at Washington-Lee Ceremonies.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Graduation exercises for the February class at the Washington-Lee High School will be held in the school auditorium Friday evening, February 1. The address to the 15 graduates will be delivered by Dr. T D. Martin, dirctor of membership of the National Education Association. The diplomas will be presented by County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp.

The exercises will open with the invocation by the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the Clarendon Baptist Church, followed by an address of welcome by John M. Stewart, chairman of the county school board.

Miss Dorothy Sampsell will deliver the valedictory address and Miss Margaret Yost the salutatory.

Tracing their tracks through the snow, County Officers H. E. Mason and Hugh Jones early yesterday arrested Charles Sneed, 24, and Frank Davis, 55, both colored, of Douglas Park, at their home on charges of chicken stealing.

Police said the two men had entered the hen house of Frank Allen, of Arlington, where they had taken 15 of his chickens. The police recovered 12 of them. The men will be given a hearing today before County Judge B. M. Hedrick.

Election of officers and delegates to the Arlington County Civic Federation will feature the meeting of the Ballston Citizens Association tonight in the auditorium of the Firemen's Hall on Ballston avenue.

The honor roll for the month at the Henry Clay School in Lyon Park as announced by Superintendent Fletcher Kemp includes the following pupils:

First grade—Beverly Bauer, Janice Bayles, Wilbur Dodd, Robert Farmer, Betty Jones, Jean Melnick, Gertrude Sterling, Shirley Ann Underwood, Dorothy Volker and Richard Wilson, jr.

Senate Ready Today to Rush New Oil Bill

Remodeled Measure Held Air-tight Against Action of High Court.

(Associated Press.)

A remodeled oil bill—air-tight in the view of its sponsors—arose yesterday from the ruins of the invalidated section 9(c) of the national recovery act to challenge "hot oil" operators.

Blessed with Administration approval, the measure likely will be rushed through the Senate and then to the House in an effort to give oil authorities grounds on which to carry on their work of keeping illegally produced crude out of interstate commerce.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, author of the new legislation, hopes to be able to start the campaign for passage in the Senate today.

Fears Trouble in House.

Connally, also author of section 9(c), predicted that no opposition of consequence would be encountered in the Senate, but foresaw a possibility of trouble in the House.

Representative Disney (Democrat), Oklahoma, already has introduced one new bill, seeking a rather definite form of Government control and may propose another. Representative Josh Lee (Democrat), Oklahoma, has introduced a companion bill to the original measure of Senator Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, in the House, but it may now need revision.

Connally's new bill contains several features of Gore's proposal. As approved by the Senate Mining Committee, it refers to "contraband oil" instead of "hot oil" and makes the act apply to "petroleum and its liquid products" only, eliminating several other derivatives.

Seeks to Bar "Defects."

Connally said his measure, the second he has introduced since the Supreme Court held section 9(c) invalid, seeks to remedy what the highest court termed as defects of the previous measure.

In the first place, the new legislation specifically prohibits transportation in interstate commerce of oil or its liquid products produced in excess of State allowables and also declares the policy of Congress to be "to cooperate with the several States to conserve deposits of crude oil situated within their limits and on the public domain."

Section 9(c) delegated authority to the President to stop interstate shipments of "hot oil" but failed to declare a congressional policy.

U. S. Prevented Trial Of Kaiser, Files Show

Tacitly Consented to Allies' Arraignment of War's 'Arch Criminal,' Then About Faced After Senate Rejected Treaty.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Revelation that the trial which promised to be the most dramatic in history—the arraignment of Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany as the war's arch criminal—probably was forestalled by the United States came yesterday from State Department files.

Hitherto unpublished diplomatic correspondence in the department's archives showed that the Senate apparently caused the Government to withdraw from efforts to stop Wilhelm's wood-sawing and put him before an international jury.

Largely because of a comparatively small group, called the "irreconcilables" by President Wilson, the Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles. The Administration then did a quick about face and the one-time German emperor remains unmolested to this day.

President Wilson, Col. E. M. House, Secretary Lansing, Clemenceau and Balfour tell the story in confidential cablegrams and notes exchanged between November, 1918, just after the armistice, and December, 1919.

Gave Tacit Consent.

The United States, by signing the Treaty of Versailles and approving Clemenceau's note to the Dutch government, had given tacit consent to the allied plan to extradite the kaiser and charge him with major responsibility for the death of 10,000,000 men.

But after the Senate had rejected the Versailles Treaty—the correspondence reveals—Secretary Lansing informed the American Charge d'Affaires at The Hague that "the United States will not at present support any demand for the extradition of the former Kaiser ro participate in any way in his trial shold it occur."

That pronouncement was made on December 13, 1919, more than a year after the allies had made the first overtures for American support of their plan to try the kaiser, and was—as shown by the correspondence—a direct reversal of the position previously assumed.

The allies nevertheless went ahead, but the Dutch, considering the kaiser a political refugee entitled to sanctuary, stubbornly refused to yield. The allies gave up, but with America's support they might have brought strong pressure on the Netherlands.

President Wilson in a cablegram to Col. House on November 21 said:

"It is my own feeling that there are many serious disadvantages in having the kaiser so near his former kingdom and so near also to the centers of intrigue. I am at a loss to suggest what course ought to be taken, but I think that Holland will find him an exceedingly inconvenient and even dangerous guest."

Lloyd George Responds.

The allies, spurred on by Lloyd George, responded to Wilson's view with a proposed demand for the kaiser's trial.

A telegram from Balfour to the State Department said that France, Great Britain and Italy "had agreed to recommend that a demand ought to be presented to Holland for the surrender of the person of the kaiser for trial, by an international court to be appointed by the allies, on the charge of being the criminal mainly responsible for the war and breaches of international law by the forces of Germany by land, air and sea."

Negro Masons Organize In Drive for New Home

With a view to stimulation of interest in the purchase of a home for the Masonic craft, a Masters and Wardens Association was formed yesterday at Scottish Rite Temple by the Acacia Grand Lodge of Colored Masons, Grand Master Louis W. Roy presiding. James E. Cobb, junior warden of Pythagoras Lodge, was elected president.

A program committee for semi-monthly meetings was named, to consist of all senior wardens of the jurisdiction. Arrangements were perfected for launching a financial drive at the next meting of the association. Other officers elected included Clifford O. Lyles, Corinthian Lodge, vice president; E. R. Johnson, Warren Lodge, secretary; Arthur Brown, Hiram Lodge, treasurer. Cicero E. Lee, Charles D. Freeman and Jeremiah Scott, grand lodge officers, also participated in the organization meeting.

William I. Traeger Dies in California

Former Representative Had Held Many Post.

William Isham Traeger, a Republican who represented California's Fifteenth Congressional District in the Seventy-third Congress, died in Sawtelle, Calif., yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

Mr. Traeger was born in Porterville, Calif., on February 28, 1880. He attended Stanford University as a member of the class of 1902, playing tackle on the football team. Later he was football coach at both Southern California and Pomona Colleges.

An attorney by profession, he served at times as deputy United States marshal for the Southern District of California, deputy sheriff and sheriff of Los Angeles County, and deputy clerk of the California State Supreme Court.

Precinct Court Plan Pondered By D. C. Heads

Minor Judges Might Speed Handling of Crime, Prettyman Says.

Creation of a system of police precinct magistrates to handle the thousands of minor cases which now clog the minor courts of the District is under consideration, E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, disclosed yesterday.

First-hand investigation of the operation of such a system is to be made by Mr. Prettyman in Baltimore soon. Arrangements for his tour of observation were discussed last week with Baltimore officials and attorneys. Actual observation of the magistrate courts in operation, the opinions of lawyers and officials based on past experience with the system, the number and character of cases handled and other matters are to be inquired into, Mr. Prettyman said.

The study is a part of efforts by the corporation counsel to improve the District machinery for handling the more serious crimes brought into the lower courts of the District. These, he believes, are seriously interfered with by the thousands of minor cases which clog the courts to such an extent that neither prosecutors nor judges can give adequate consideration to the more important cases.

Sub-Committee to Meet.

Meanwhile, the House District crime sub-committee headed by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, will meet tonight at 7, p. m. Composed of seven members, Representatives Randolph, Jenckes, Schulte, Werner, Dirksen, Reed and Brewster, the committee is to meet in executive session in the House District Committee room in the old House Office Building.

No witnesses are to be heard at the meeting, which is to be devoted to going over plans for the hearings designed to uncover actual crime conditions here.

When hearings will be begun has not been determined. Representative Reed, of Illinois, who is a member of the Illinois Bar Association studying crime and criminal law revision in that State, said the committee might take another week to prepare its program.

Would Give Congress Powers.

The full authority of Congress would be put behind the committee's investigation under terms of a resolution which has been prepared for introduction by Representative Randolph in the House today or tomorrow. The resolution would authorize the committee to subpena witnesses from beyond the borders of the District, but its inquiry would have to do with crime conditions in the Capital only. Should facts be developed showing conditions in contiguous political divisions are directly contributory to conditions in Washington, those facts will be pursued, it was said.

Under tentative plans agreed on by the committee's first witnesses to be called will be persons having direct knowledge of crime and the underworld of the District. Representative Schulte is confident he can develop through such witnesses definite information. Some of the other committee members, however, are waiting to be shown that result.

Washington newspapers have been invited to submit to the committee such information as they have on crime conditions here. After the committee has heard the witnesses called in executive hearing to give them the first-hand information on the underworld, the committee plans to call District police and court officials, the District attorney, the parole board, bondsmen, and other officials and get from them whatever recommendations they may submit for improvement of conditions. Later, representatives of District civic and business and welfare organizations will be called. Federal narcotics officials are likely to be called for what information they can supply, Mr. Randolph said.

Silent Carillon Awaiting Funds

Bells at Richmond Need Action by Legislature.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—Capt. Bolling H. Handy, chairman of the Virginia War Memorial Commission, said today that until funds are appropriated by the legislature "there is little hope that the silence of the bells" in the $325,000 carillon here will be broken."

"We haven't any money to give concerts," Capt. Handy said. "The few times the carillon has been heard was through private subscriptions by individuals interested. The commission has just decided to ask for an appropriation to provide appropriate programs on the bells.

"Until the assembly meets, then, there is little hope that the silence of the bells will be broken."

Lexington Presbytery Will Meet on Jan. 28

Staunton, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—The Lexington Presbytery will meet in Lexington, Va., Monday, January 28, at 10 a. m. in the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Holmes Rolston, moderator, of Rockridge Baths, having issued the call.

The purpose is to dissolve the associate pastoral relationship between the Rev. John H. Grey, jr., and the Lexington church, and to grant him a letter of dismission to the Presbytery of Greenville, Synod of North Carolina.

A roll of adhesive tape, held by Inspector Burke, was believed part of a well-planned kidnaping plot.

Modern 'Fagin' Says He Once Was Politician

Ran for Governor, Says Man Accused With Boys in N. Y. Slaying.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Accused of being a "modern Fagin," Nelson B. Clark, 62-year-old companion of Newman Raymond, Alexandria, Va., and three other youths charged with the murder of a Manhattan patrolman, told police tonight "I once ran for Governor of Massachusetts."

Other questions he refused to answer, maintaining stubborn silence in his jail cell. Clark is held on charges of receiving stolen goods.

"You can thank this old hag here," said Capt. Daniel Curtayne, of Clark as he stood nervously in the police lineup, "for sending these four boys on their way to the electric chair."

Denies Inspiring Robbery.

Clark has denied he was the inspiration for the Fifth Avenue robbery in which Patrolman James M. J. Killion was slain. The youths, police said, have admitted a series of robberies.

Clark would not inform police when he was a candidate, nor would he give them details of his life in Massachusetts. He would only say, "I once ran for Governor * * *"

He was, he said, a retired "chemical businessman," formerly of Los Angeles, who had befriended the boys.

"My boys" had even given him a watch. He did not know, he asserted, that the watch has been stolen.

Found in Apartment.

Clark was sitting beside a radio in an uptown apartment Friday night when the "boys" were making their bloody foray in the fashionable Fifth avenue shopping district. Detectives found him there when they hurried to an address given by the captured bandits.

He calmly admitted, police said, that the boys lived with him and that Ray Orley, identified by police as the youth who shot Patrolman Killion from a hiding place, was his nephew. Later, police said, he denied this relationship.

The youths told police they had planned to leave New York for a vacation trip to Florida after the Fifth avenue robbery. In the apartment where clark was arrested were found several pieces of luggage, packed with clothing.

Held with Orley for the robbery are Thomas Gilbride, Raymond and Americo Angelini.

New Turkish Language Gets First Approval

Angora, Turkey, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—President Mustapha Kemal Ataturk today placed his seal on the first 1,000 words in the new simplified Turkish language.

Karpis Blasts Trap in Jersey; Heading South

He and Harry Campbell Slip Police Net; Girl Companion Shot.

"Stick'em up yourself, coppers! We're coming!"

Campbell was in his underwear, but Karpis was fully clothed. Campbell whirled, a pistol in his hand. He was either carrying it at the time or snatched it up quickly at the approach of the officers.

Karpis grabbed a machine gun, and the hotel echoed with gunfire.

The detectives sought the protection of a turn of the corridor, firing all the time. As Karpis and Campbell came out, the fire from the officers' pistols drove the desperadoes toward the back of the hall, then down a rear stairway to an alley.

Waiting there were three officers, and Karpis and Campbell raced for the garage where they had left their car, exchanging more than 200 shots with the police as they ran.

Balked in Girls' Rescue.

Their car had been taken over by police, but the gunmen piled into another and wheeled down the street.

Twice they circled the hotel, apparently seeking to rescue the women. Balked in this effort, and with several cars of police pushing them hard, the men headed out of the neighborhood.

Twice their unfamiliarity with Atlantic iCty thoroughfares—many of which end in blind alleys at the board walk—appeared to have them cornered. Eac htime, however, they spun their car around and, with the underwear-clad Campbell standing up behind and pulling the trigger of the machine gun, shot their way free. They finally were lost to their pursuers.

Almost from the first moment of gunfire, however, the city's traffic lights had been switched to blink on and off red, which is the manner in which a general police alarm is given here. This spread a warning to the farthermost sections of the city, leading the police to believe it would have been next to impossible fo rthe men to have got out of town.

Chicago police expresse dthe belief that if Karpis got out of Atlantic City he would head west to a Chicago hideout.

"Shoot to kill" was the warning broadcast by Detective Chief John L. Sullivan, of Chicago. "If identity is established, shoot first and talk afterward."

The Delaney woman was taken to a hospital. She had been struck by a shot from Karpis' weapon, police said. The wound was superficial, and she was later taken with the Burdette girl to Philadelphia, in custody of Federal men.

Seven suitcases were found in the girls' room. One of the girls told police questioners that they had been in Florida recently, and that while there they had seen and talked with Fred and "Ma" Barker, who were killed as they resisted a Federal agents' siege last week. Barker has been coupled by Department of Justice agents with Karpis as co-leader of the gang blamed for the Bremer kidnaping.

The girl told police, they said, that while in Miami they had talked with a man identified as "Duke," and that "Duke" had directed them to the Atlantic City hotel where they were found. He had given them a letter of recommendation, the girls said, to the proprietors of the place.

"Duke" was described as an employe at the Little Club of Miami and also of the Biscayne race track.

A report that Federal men had asked that "Duke" be questioned brought the statement from Miami's police that they knew nothing of such a request.

The girls came to Atlantic City by train.

Only two days ago, in Chicago, the mother of Karpis appealed to her son, through the newspapers, to surrender.

She urged this course rather than death for him at the hands of the law's huntsmen.

As quickly as possible, the State's elaborate, anti-criminal machinery was thrown into gear.

Troopers throughout the State, and police in the cities, were ordered to watch for the fugitives and to be extremely cautious because of the desperate character of the men.

Philadelphia and New York police swung into the hunt, and crack men of the Government's criminal hunting force were dispatched here.

Police back-trailed Karpis to Miami and thence to Chicago, from which latter city he fled when his designation as the new "public enemy No. 1" served notice on him that he was marked for the same relentless treatment as befell his predecessors, John Dillinger and George "Baby Face" Nelson.

The Department of Justice has indicated that it blames them for the Bremer snatch—one of the few unsolved abductions that have occurred since the Federal Government actively entered the war against crime.

In a broadcast to all New York City police radio cars, police headquarters of that city tonight ordered all officers to take "every precaution" if Karpis and Campbell were encountered.

Karpis and Campbell have probably changed cars, the New York police were told, and may have separated. The fugitives were riding in a green coach with Jersey license plates when last seen.

Among crimes for which Karpis is held responsible or in which it is believed he participated are:

The kidnaping of Edward Bremer, St. Paul banker, January 17, 1934.

The murder of Sheriff C. R. Kelly at West Plains, Mo., in December, 1931, when the sheriff attempted to arrest Karpis and Fred Barker.

The murder last summer of John Lazia, Kansas City Democratic factional leader.

Numerous forays in Oklahoma, Missouri and Texas.

Dr. Carl Surran told police he was called to the Dan-Mor Hotel yesterday to make arrangements for the birth of a child expected within the next few days by one of the women in the Karpis party.

Lookout Broadcast By D. C. Police

Warned that the fleeing desperadoes, Alvin Karpis and Harry Campbell, were headed South in a green sedan, Washington police last night were on the alert should they attempt to enter the city. A lookout, flashed by radio on orders from Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, detective chief, read:

"Look out for and cause the arrest of Alvin Karpis, white, 25, 5 feet 9 inches tall, slender build, brown hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, and Harry Campbell, white, 30, 5 feet 5 inches tall, medium build, brown hair, blue eyes, ruddy complexion.

"These men are driving a Pontiac sedan, pea green color, New York license No. A 3075. They are wanted for larceny of the above automobile, murder and kidnaping. They left Atlantic City about 7 a. m., supposedly headed South. Both men are heavily armed and are very dangerous."

Hospitals and physicians were also asked to be on the lookout. It was believed that one of the men was wounded and might apply for medical aid.

Shortly before dark the gunmen's car was reported seen near Connecticut avenue and Q street northwest. Police, responding to an alarm, reported the call was apparently false.

N.Y. Penal Code Revision Urged By Grand Jury

Parole System Strengthening, Leniency in Penalties Asked.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Complete revision of the State penal law and code of criminal procedure was urged by the New York County grand jury tonight on the ground it is in a state of "indescribable confusion and inconsistency."

In a 52,000 word presentment, the grand jury called for a lessening of the severity of existing laws and a strengthening of the parole system. The presentment covered the results of an investigation undertaken last May.

A revamping of prison administration to help in the rehabilitation of offenders was another of the jury's 49 recommendations, which wound up with the suggestion that Gov. Lehman and Mayor LaGuardia appoint a commission formulate a "constructive and lasting" program to deal with the crime problem.

Asserting that every new law adds to the present confusion, the grand jury said:

"Rather than any further piecemeal legislation, the task of rewriting the criminal law should be given to the newly created law revision commission, and sufficient time and funds allowed them for this work.

"Laws related to sentencing should be written from a modern point of view and with a complete new evaluation of the meaning of different types of crime."

Long sentences, the grand jury found, do not act as a deterrent or a curative.

Since the rigid life-imprisonment-for-fourth-offenders law was passed in 1926, the presentment said, prison population has increased 118 per cent and civilian population 17 per cent.

Continuing, it said:

"If this condition of growing crime continues, a prominent warden of a State institution testified, one out of every three persons will be in prison."

Sentences passed in New York State were found to be twice or three times as long as the aggregate sentences of other States, or of the Federal Government.

Urging discontinuance of the "prevalent practice" of accepting guilty pleas for lesser offenses than those covered in the indictment, the grand jurors said:

"Seventy per cent to 75 per cent of all men in prison are not there for the crimes they probably committed. They have 'copped a plea.'"

Fire Auxiliary Plans Card Party.

A card party will be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Branchville (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department tonight in the firehouse. There will be prizes and refreshments.

Girl Artist Seizes Would-Be Robber

Surprised at N. Y. Home, She Turns Tables.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—A hand reached out of the dark and clutched Marion Miller by the throat when she returned to her Greenwich Village apartment last night.

Instead of fainting, the diminutive, 24-year-old artist let go with a right cross that brought a grunt of pain from her unwelcome guest. Then she seized him by the throat and yelled.

Charles Mahig, waiting outside with Miss Miller's mother and stepfather while she went in to turn on the lights, sprang to her aid. He pummeled the intruder and was sitting on the prostrate man's chest when police arrived. Today John W. Smith, 28, was arraigned on a charge of burglary and held without bail.

State to Claim 70 Loopholes In Bruno Alibi

Hauptmann Must Explain Many Alleged Fallacies if He Testifies.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 20 (AP). When Bruno Richard Hauptmann takes the witness stand, if he does, the prosecution in the Lindbergh kidnap-murder trial is prepared to confront him with 70 alleged discrepancies in his explanation of his possession of ransom money.

The defense is given the difficult choice of either exposing Hauptmann to a bitter attack on cross-examination by the State's attorneys or saving him from the possible pitfalls of this expected assault by not bringing him forward as a witness. Should the defense fail to call the defendant as a witness, the State, and the presiding judge, in his charge, are permitted to comment on the fact in their addresses to the jury.

The prosecution, in the development of its case, has examined Hauptmann's statements to the New York police authorities after his arrest with close attention to possible contradictions. The examination disclosed 70, Anthony M. Hauck, jr., Hunterdon County prosecutor, said. Each, he said, will be pointed out to the defendant, if opportunity to cross-examine him is given by the defense, and his answers will be cited specifically to the jury.

Hauptmann First Witness.

Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, has announced that Hauptmann will be the first witness called to attempt to refute the State's case. Should a reversal of that plan occur, the State's attorneys are prepared to make capital of the failure of Hauptmann to come forward.

The State has held secret most of the alleged contradictions in Hauptmann's story of how he came by the ransom bills, found in his garage and in his wallet. Discrepancies already evident, however, include his original assertion that the certificate presented to the gasoline station attendant shortly before his arrest was one of a small cache of $300 saved over a period of years. He told also of having only a small amount of gold coin in addition to the few bills.

The police diggings in his garage brought a new story from the defendant injecting a little German furrier, already dead, into the picture as the original possessor of the larger amount of money. The State proposes to clear Isador Fisch, the impecunious furrier, who Hauptmann said owed him $14,000.

To Stress Tax Reports.

The State was prepared to confront Hauptmann with his explanation that some of his sudden assets after April 2, 1932, the day of the ransom payment, came from stock-market profits. These profits never were declared, the State contends, in Hauptmann's income tax reports.

The prosecution is prepared to offer 80 witnesses, if necessary, to tell that Hauptmann did not work at the Majestic Apartments on the day of the kidnaping to contradict his statement that he was engaged there on March 1, 1932.

Further, should the defense seek to fasten the crime on Isador Fisch, the State is ready to present two or three handwriting experts in rebuttal to say that the little furrier's writing in no way resembled that on the ransom notes or Hauptmann's.

24 Stock Reports Become Effective

Industrials, Commercials Lead Registration.

Twenty-four stock registration statements became effective during the month of December, the Securities Exchange Commission announced yesterday. Of these 24 registrations, 12 were for industrial or commercial issue, 4 were for financial issues, and 8 were for reorganizations.

Industrial and commercial issues totaled approximately $20,600,000, the financial issues totaled about $15,300,000, and the total amount of revaluations was slightly less than $12,000,000, the statement said.

The amount of fees paid by these registrants was nearly $5,000,000, according to the statement.

Home Mishaps Kill Army of Children, Statistics Reveal

The Children's Bureau yesterday urged that homes be inspected for accident hazards in order that the high death rate to youngsters from mishaps be lowered, the Associated Press reported.

Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, bureau expert, quoted statistics which showed fatal accidents to be most frequent among children under the age of five. "The total number of deaths among children from accidents exceeds the combined number due to measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria," she said.

She blamed "dangers that lurk in the home," as well as the "obvious hazards of automobile-crowded streets."

200 Feared Trapped In Factory's Collapse

Hong Kong, China, Jan. 20 (AP).—Twoh undred men were believed today to have been caught in the collapse of a new government munition factory at Parkiang, near Canton, and there were seven known dead.

Two German engineers narrowly escaped with their lives when the first floor of the three-story structure gave way under the weight of three stone-crushing machines. Five hundred men were working on the building.

Scientific Data To Back State's Ladder Claims

Molds of Nails, Plane's Nicks on Wood to Be Used in Trial.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 20 (AP).—The prosecution in the Lindbergh kidnap-murder trial is saving what it considers some of its strongest evidence against Bruno Richard Hauptmann—startling results of scientific exploration of the crime—until the last.

Not only will Arthur J. Koehler, Federal wood technicologist, tell of allegedly tracing the kidnap ladder wood to Hauptmann's home and a nearby lumber yard, but he will endeavor to show that the contrivance was built with the German carpenter's tools, found after his arrest in the Hauptmann garage.

Stanley M. Keith, metallurgist, who made a study of each nail in the ladder, probably will tell tomorrow, when he takes the stand, of trailing each one from its manufacture to Hauptmann's garage work shop.

Used in Garage, claim.

Keith allegedly determined that nails of identical make were used in the ladder and in construction by Hauptmann of his garage and were found in his overalls, hanging in the little building, and in a keg in a corner.

All the nails were made, according to Keith's account, from eight stamping dies, each of which imposed distinctive markings. The eight dies, he planned to point out, were worn out after nails to fill 16 kegs were made. Hauptmann, the State will maintain, had one of the 16 kegs of nails.

The distinguishing marking of the eight dies appeared, Keith's testimony is to show, on the nails in the kidnap ladder; those in the boards and beams of the garage; those in Hauptmann's overall pockets, and those in the keg.

Fight Ladder as Evidence.

The defense has persistently fought against introduction of the ladder as an exhibit, contending that the State must prove first a connection to Hauptmann and restoration of the contrivance, after the police study of it, to the condition in which it was found 70 feet from the Lindbergh home.

The State abandoned its first effort to obtain admission of the exhibit and reserved the next offer until near the end of its case.

Koehler allegedly is prepared to show that the plane, found in Hauptmann's shop, bore nicks in its blade which made distinctive markings on the wood of the ladder as well as on pieces of board discovered in the garage. The State planned to have him demonstrate before the jury the distinctive marks the plane made.

Stewart McDonald Is New Moffett Aid

Stewart McDonald, formerly of St. Louis, has been appointed assistant administrator of the Federal Housing Administration by Administrator James A. Moffett, the Associated Press reported.

McDonald had been a special assistant to the administrator since his induction into office August 29, 1934. In his new position he will be chief executive officer of the organization under Moffett.

McDonald formerly was a manufacturer of automobiles, farm implements and electrical apparatus. At one time he was police commissioner of St. Louis.

Morrows' Ex-Maid Is 'Not Convinced' Of Bruno's Guilt

Colon, Panama, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—Mrs. Marguerite Junge, housekeeper in the Morrow home in Englewood from 1930 to 1933, here on a visit, said tonight she was "not at all convinced" that Bruno Richard Hauptmann was guilty of the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Mrs. Junge, who said she was in the Morrow residence the night the infant was kidnaped, commented:

"It is very strange that Hauptmann had the ransom money, but I am not at all convinced he is guilty. The strangest part is how he could face the Lindberghs and not go crazy if he were the kidnaper.

"It might be that Hauptmann bought the ransom money very cheap from someone else to pass it. If so, he was very stupid because he was running a big risk every time he passed a bill."

Economy Urge By Trade Body

Cost of Government Rising Steadily, C. of C. Report Points Out.

Alarmed by what it calls the increasing cost of State and local Government, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday issued a report containing proposals to bring about "far reaching reform in the interest of efficiency and economy." The report, made to the chamber's board of directors, will be made public today.

The necessity of balanced budgets is emphasized in the report, which asserts that many current deficits of State and local governments are due to faulty planning, particularly with reference to revenue estimates.

Attention is directed to the success of a number of governmental units in avoiding deficits throughout the depression as a result of good budgetary procedure.

Centralized budgetary control is urged as a measure to insure efficient expenditure of public funds and eliminate wasteful administration. "The budget should be prepared in a finance department directly responsible to the Chief Executive," says the report.

The report, urging that the budgetary process should be continuous, sets forth a plan for preparation, adoption, and carrying out of local budgets in relation to the State budget.

Threats Made On 2 Witnesses, Reilly Charges

Intimidation Attempted by Phone Calls, Hauptmann Counsel Alleges.

1928, four years before the kidnaping.

As the State moves swiftly toward a conclusion of its case this week, it will call witnesses to place Hauptmann in the area of the Lindbergh Hopewell home on March 1, 1932, it will try to trace the wood and the construction of the ladder directly to his Bronx garage and workshop, and it will try also to show he hurt his leg on the night of the kidnaping when a rung of the ladder broke, throwing him to the ground.

Already Linked to Scene.

Amandus Hochmuth, 87-year-old former bank porter and watchman, has already testified he saw Hauptmann near the Lindbergh home on the day of the kidnaping, driving an automobile of a "dirty green" color.

There was a ladder in the car, he said.

Millard Whited, Sourland Mountains lumberjack, who testified in Bronx Supreme Court, where Hauptmann fought extradition to New Jersey last October, that he saw the carpenter near Hopewell a few days before the kidnaping, also will be called. The defense, however, will attack Whited's credibility.

Arthur Koehler, Federal foresty products expert, will be called to the stand shortly to testify that the wood of the kidnap ladder came from a Bronx lumberyard to which Hauptmann had access.

The wood trim panel, found in a closet of Hauptmann's home, and bearing the Bronx address of Dr. John F. Condon, ransom negotiations, intermediary, and his telephone number, is one of the greatest worries to the defense. Hauptmann admitted he wrote the number and the address, but explained he was "interested in the case." He was probably putting paper on the shelves of the closet, he said an saw the numbers in one of th papers.

Japan Masses 4,000 Soldiers On Jehol Line

Chahar Chinese Government Scores Nipponese 'Invasion.'

Kalgan, Chahar Province, China, Jan. 20 (AP).—A spokesman from the Chahar government said today that 4,000 Japanese and Manchukuoan troops were concentrated on the western Jehol border ready to invade this territory.

The spokesman accused the Japanese army of unwarrantedly "invading" Chahar by their recent penetration of the Changliang district, near the border.

"It is regrettable," he said, "that Japanese should invade this province on the flimsy excuse that the area belongs to Jehol.

"All Chinese and foreign maps showed the area concerned comprises the district of Kuyuan, in eastern Chahar."

It was stated the forces gathered on the border consisted of 3,000 Manchukuoan troops and 1,000 Japanese.

"Adequate" Force Gathers.

Shanghai, Jan. 20 (AP).—Threats of a Japanese invasion of broad Chahar province, north of Peiping, stirred the Chinese government today, but little information was given out concerning the seriousness of the move.

Japanese military forces here said an "adequate" military force was gathering in western Jehol, in answer to alleged infringment of Jehol border areas by Sung Chen-Yuan, provincial chairman of Chahar.

"We will clear the district within a reasonable period unless the Chinese withdraw," said a Japanese military spokesman.

A recent Japanese communique asserted that on January 15 a squadron of Sung's cavalry raided a Manchukuoan outpost near Tatan, not far from the Chahar border, and carried off 40 Manchukuoans.

Jehol Province is claimed by the Japanese conquerors of the former Manchuria as a part of the new Manchukuo. Chahar is the province adjoining Jehol to the westerward, so marked on recent official Chinese maps.

Gen. Huang Fu, the Nationalist government's representative in north China, who recently arrived from Peiping, said he did not expect the situation to become serious.

Troops Clash.

Peiping, China, Jan. 20 (AP).—An official Chinese spokesman revealed today that a clash resulting in several hours' fighting had occurred several days ago between Manchukuoan and Japanese combined forces and Chahar provincial troops in the vicinity of Changliang, near the Jehol-Chahar border.

After several hours' fighting, the spokesman said, the Manchukuoans withdrew after scattering leaflets demanding the immediate withdrawal of the Chinese militia.

Emanuela de Dampierre, of American Descent, Will Be Bride.

Rome, Jan. 20 (AP).—The second marriage this year in which American blood will join with that of the royal family of Spain here in this Old-World setting was announced today for March 4.

The wedding is that of Emanuela de Dampierre, descendant of illustrious Americans, and Don Jaime, son of former King Alfonso of Spain. Their nuptials follow closely upon those of Prince Alessandro Torlonia, grandson of an American industrialist, to the Infante Beatriz, Don Jaime's sister.

Beautiful 21-year-old Emanuela, daughter of the French Count De Dampierre, traces her parentage on her mother's side to Princess Suasa Poggio, the former Josephine Curtis of New York, her grandmother. Her husband-to-be is a deaf mute.

Officals at the king's household in Rome say Don Jaime's wedding, like that of the Infanta, will be held as quietly as possible.

Roman society, however, is preparing to outdo itself in courtesies despite the official staidness of the actual wedding.

Orientals' Unity May Oust U. S. Asia Influence

Sino-Japanese Cooperation Seen as Diet Session Development.

Tokyo, (Monday), Jan. 21 (AP).—What the Japanese call "closer Sino-Japanese cooperation" in Asia, crowding out American and British influence, was being freely predicted today as a forthcoming development in the annual session of the imperial diet which resumes business tomorrow after the long New Year holiday.

The public was expecting important announcements of policy in the speech of Foreign Minister Koki Hirota opening the diet, predicting through the press that he will shortly seek a Sino-Japanese political connection increasing Japan's hegemony in eastern Asia through further domination of China.

"It is highly desirable for Japan to take the initiative and free China from a position of colony of the foreign powers," said the newspaper Asahi today. The newspaper Chugai Shogyo chimed in with "if China can free herself from United States and British influence, Sino-Japanese amity can be restored."

The legislators of Japan were reassembling in Tokyo today for formalities connected with the resumption of the Diet, or Parliament, which recessed on December 28. Tomorrow morning in the House of Peers, in addition to Hirota's address, the aged finance minister, Korekiyo Takahasik, and the premier, Admiral Keisuke Okada, will make their formal addresses on the state of the empire, its foreign relations and its finances.

There has been a significant change since Foreign Minister Hirota last addressed the Diet on November 30. On December 29 Japan notified the United States of her denunciation of the Washington naval treaty, the foundation stone of naval limitations.

The Japanese, furthermore, are looking forward with some trepidation to next March 27, the day on which Japan's two-years' notice of secession from the League of Nations will become effective.

1935 'Crisis' Year.

The Japanese people long have foreseen that this year would be for them a year of crisis—the first year of the "crisis of 1935-36" they have called it—and they have entered 1935 in a spirit of tension toward other people.

The international "crisis" which the Japanese insist is upon them is strongly reflected in the budget for the forthcoming fiscal year, the passage of which will be the principal legislative task of the present session of the Diet. The navy is demanding the largest appropriations on record, 529,683,000 yen. The army has been allotted 492,958,000 yen, making total defense estimates of 1,022,641,000 yen, nearly 47 per cent of the whole budget.

Reserve Officers Hear Maj. Gillem.

Starhemberg's Support Given Hapsburg Rule

Says Heimwehr Soon Will Decide When Otto Shall Mount Throne.

Vienna, Jan 20 (U.P.).—Vice Chancellor Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg announced tonight that his powerful Heimwehr (Home Guards) would decide shortly when young Archduke Otto of Hapsburg is to ascend the throne of Austria.

The vice chancellor, addressing Heimwehr leaders, clarified his attitude on the vital issue of the monarchist restoration. Return of the monarchy has been threatened often under the democracy by internal strife led first by Socialists and now by Nazis.

The prince warned legitimists clamoring for the immediate return of Otto and his mother, the former Empress Zita, exiled in Belgium, that they must not endanger their cause by haste.

Need for Caution.'

He said that while many favored restoration of the monarchy as the best form of government for Austria, there still was need for caution.

Monarchists hailed the prince's announcement as one of their most significant recent gains. Von Starhemberg's attitude on restoration heretofore had been doubtful.

His statement now brings the government leadership into the open for Otto. Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, an ardent monarchist, has been working in sympathy with restorationists, ever since he rose to power following the assassination of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss last July.

The main obstacle remains the opposition of the little entente—Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania—to revival of Hapsburg rule in Austria. They fear this will mean eventually a demand for return of territory seized from Austro-Hungary when the dual monarchy was broken up at the end of the World War, and the nations of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Greater Rumania created or enhanced.

"Non Meddling" Pact.

Pressure is being brought to bear on these nations to enter a "non-meddling" pact with Italy and France, which Austria, Germany and other powers will be asked to sign. This would check their efforts to dictate to Austria or any other signatory to the projected treaty.

Former Empress Zita meanwhile has brought her intrigue in Paris and Rome to a point where she is understood to have aligned powerful personages behind her scheme to place her young son on the throne of the Hapsburgs.

Her plans, emerging from years of underground maneuvering from Zita's "court" in Belgium, are believed nearing fruition. Always popular, Zita's return as Empress Dowager doubtless would be hailed by a majority of the populace.

Girl Arrested By Hitlerites Back in U. S.

Elsa Sittel Calls Self 'Woman Without a Country;' Won't Return.

New York, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Elsa Sittel, who spent ten days in a German jail for making indiscreet remarks about Chancellor Hitler, returned on the President Roosevelt with the statement that she had no wish to revisit the Reich.

While reluctant to discuss her incarceration, the girl, a former stenographer in a New York law firm, replied with an emphatic "No" when asked if she ever would rejoin her parents in Germany.

Describing herself as "the woman without a country," she refused even to concede she had relatives in Germany, saying she did not want "my family or anyone else involved."

"I have no home," she said.

She was born in Alsace-Lorraine, now French but formerly German, and speaks with a decided accent.

A slim, young figure who looked the typical American secretary, Miss Sittel denied she had received instructions either from the German government or from American diplomatic representatives to keep quiet about her imprisonment.

"Are you glad to be back in the United States," she was asked.

"Yes, I am," she answered, without any noticeable enthusiasm.

She was hustled through the immigration routine and was met at the dock by her sister, Clara, and another woman who refused to give her name.

With a man escort, the party was whirled off in a taxicab.

Use New Funds To End Slums, Parley Pleads

Housing Conference Also Asks PWA Power Be Decentralized.

Immediate expenditure of the proposed $880,000,000 PWA fund on housing and slum clearance projects, and allocation of the "major portion" of the proposed $4,000,000,000 works appropriation to the same channels, was asked of President Roosevelt yesterday in a memorandum drafted by the second annual Housing Conference in its final session in the Willard Hotel.

As the second and third items in its White House memorandum, the conference asked decentralization of the housing division of the PWA "to allow increasing latitude to local authorities," and suggested legislation to make housing a "permanent and integral part of the Government structure."

"We believe that this local responsibility, coupled with the weight of presidential and congressional approval, will act as a spur to those cities still without power to initiate their own programs, to secure such power from legislative bodies," the memorandum stated.

"Recognizing the slum as a continuing problem overshadowing the future and deeply rooted in the past," the memorandum appealed for extension of the housing division "so that its work may no longer be limited by purposes or relief, recovery, or by other emergency factors."

State Governments were urged to adopt legislation enabling them to take advantage of housing subsidies by Langdon Post, chairman of the New York housing authority, in a conference address yesterday.

"Too long have we delayed in this country our attack on the greatest shame of our present civilization—the slums," he said. "They have grown up over the past 100 years into a condition of obsolescence which at the present moment threatens the whole economic structure of our large cities."

Existence of slums was blamed upon "the miserable low wage that the working people of our country have had forced upon them," by J. W. Williams, president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

All Policemen In County Face Loss of Jobs

Montgomery Fusionists Plan 'Housecleaning,' Says Reports.

A virtually complete turnover in the Montgomery County police department is imminent, according to authoritative word circulated throughout the county last night.

Reliable informants intimated that the Fusionist majority on the board of county commissioners would fire practically every man on the police force this week. New men would be appointed from the ranks of Fusion supporters, it was added, with only four of the present force likely to retain their places.

The word spread rapidly throughout the county last night. Several residents of fashionable Chevy Chase and prosperous Bethesda expressed concern over whether a green police department could adequately protect costly homes and property.

Resolutions have already been adopted recently by the Montgomery County Civic Federation and the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, urging that the police force be kept intact and that it be placed under civil service. Other organizations have taken similar action.

First of the men to go is Policeman Gassaway W. Linthicum, of the Rockville Police Headquarters. Linthicum resigned, the resignation becoming effective tomorrow, to take a post at the Washington Navy Yard.

The charge being levied against the apparently doomed police is that they were "politically active."

Citizens rallied yesterday, however, to say that the department's record in major cases has been highly successful. Of four important cases of recent years that remain unsolved, two were said to be the result of Washington criminal feuds, the county being merely the locale where the feud had its climax.

A policeman yesterday recalled that men of the Bethesda substation cleaned up a recent criminal attack case in Chevy Chase with a footprint left in the mud as the lone clew. For that outrage, one Negro is under sentence of hanging. Another is being hunted. Sergt. Leroy Rodgers and Policeman James S. McAuliffe led the investigation which broke this case.

In the same substation, Desk Clerk James Nichols has been frequently commended by insurance adjusters and others who said he kept remarkably fine records.

DIED

TASHOF—On Saturday, January 19, 1935, ROSE TASHOF, beloved mother of Ivan P., Leon A., Jacob JuKan and Sophia Tashof, aged sixty-eight years. Funeral from her late residence, 4211 Sixteenth street northwest, on Tuesday, January 22, at 11 a. m. Interment Adas Israel Cemetery.

WHITEHILL—On Friday, January 18, 1935, SANTIAGO, beloved husband of Clara Whitehill and father of Nelson Whitehill and Mrs. Edith M. Reedy and Mrs. Ila Helvestine. He is also survived by nine grandchildren. Funeral services at the W. W. Chambers Co. funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest, on Monday, January 21, at 1:30 p. m. Relatives and friends are invited. Interment Arlington National Cemetery.

WILKINS—On Saturday, January 19, 1935, at the residence of her son, 2411 Woodley road northwest, ANNIE M., of Lincoln, Mass., wife of the late Joseph Wilkins, of Philadelphia, Pa., and beloved mother of Joseph Wilkins, of New York City, and John H. Wilkins, of Washington, D. C. Services and interment private.

WINTERS—On Friday, January 18, 1935, JACK WINTERS. Funeral from the W. W. Chambers Co. Southeast funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast on Tuesday, January 22, at 10 a. m. Interment Arlington National Cemetery.

Creative Church Held Vital Need by Clinchy

Conquering Faith Necessary in Unsettled Conditions of World Today, Pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Says.

Conditions which confront the world today demand the functioning of a church which can create a conquering faith, according to the belief of the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, as expressed in a sermon on "The Creative Church," at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church yesterday morning. It was the fourth anniversary of Mr. Clinchy's service as minister of the Mount Pleasant Church.

"The only hope we have ahead of us is to discover plans and agencies of social and economic security which will consider every person in America," Mr. Clinchy said, "and which will conceive of security in very simple and plain ways of living as opposed to extravaganzes of bubble prosperity. We are entering a period which, instead of calling for a joyride at a festival of roses, demands an adventure in hardihood, fortitude and simple living.

"The creative church needed now and in years to come is one which overcomes all sense of futility with a growing faith. We need beliefs which have been tested by everything that can be hurled against them. We need men and womn in the church who will do for religion what Picard and Byrd are doing for science. Churches which begin with the past and go on with constant experiments of belief, forms of worship, definitions of God and adventure in human relations can face the years ahead with confidence and faith.

"We are in a turmoil today because we have not accepted the interpretation that Jesus Christ placed upon individual life. We have individual gospels and social gospels, but we can not define Christ either as an individualist or a socialist. He was vitally concerned with the mental, physical and spiritual development of individual lives. But living as though we were in a vacuum is impossible. That is why a so-called individual gospel is always confused with a so-called social gospel. They are one and the same thing.

"The world today needs a creative church which will content itself not merely with pointing to sins, but which can create a bouyant faith in life and its possibilities. The world knows its sins, and that there is a hell which it makes itself. What it does not know, but must know, is whether man really can have hope, trust and faith, even when he faces the truth. Only a creative church can do that, and that must be its message and its mission."

Carson Talks on Tragedy Of Unproductive Life

"The Tragedy of An Unproductive Life" was the theme of the sermon preached yesterday by the Rev. Kenneth B. Carson, pastor of the Garden Memorial Presbyterian Church.

He said: "Jesus pictured life as it is. He was no sentimental idealist. Neither was He a superficial optimist. He had a perfect knowledge of human nature. His parables are life-portraits. They portray life as we experience it, as we know it. His insight into the motives of human behavior is the marvel of the ages. The fundamental urges of life—our wants, wishes, desires, prejudices—are strikingly revealed in every deed and word of the Master.

"Today we are to study together the 'Parable of the Barren Fig Tree.' This tree was planted in one of the irregular patches of a vineyard. It received individual and painstaking care. But it bore no fruit: for three years it had been barren. What right had it to live? The vinedresser angrily demanded that it be destroyed, root and branch. He brought certain charges against the tree. It monopolized a portion of the ground; it robbed the soil of its fertility, and it robbed the vines of sunlight and sustenance. Each charge was true. The vinedresser had good and sufficient reasons for making this demand. The tree was self-sentenced to destruction. It's doom was self-imposed.

"We may take the tale of this tragic tree as a symbol of life. The moral is strikingly obvious. In the first place, this fruitless tree was a botanical parasite. It was imbued with the robber spirit. Selfishly it pushed its roots deep down into the rich soil of the earth and took from it sufficient food for growth and fruitage. It lifted its lofty branches toward the light and extracted from sun and air the necessary chemical ingredients for its continuance.

"In other words, this tree robbed both earth and heaven of their chemistries, yet refused to transmute these riches into luscious fruit. It was always getting but never giving. Its life was wholly parasitical.

"How many people have you heard iterate this philosophy of life? Christianity demands that we produce the fruit of character and selfless service. Jesus found fulness of life in humble service. And there we will find it also.

Rowland Discusses Crucifixion Blame

The Rev. H. H. Rowland, pastor of the Langdon Methodist Episcopal Church, yesterday spoke on the subject, "Christ Crucified in 1935."

He said in part: "Were the Pharisees, the priests and Pilate alone guilty for the death of Christ, or is all mankind implicated?"

"Theologians have tried to prove that all mankind, from Adam and Eve down until the time when the last babe is born, grows up and dies, all had a share in nailing Jesus to the cross. And many of our fathers and mothers firmly believe that doctrine, and there are a few who maintain it.

"But the majority of mankind does not accept this. I presume that a very large part of those who today call themselves Christians do not hold to this belief with any degree of clearness nor with strong conviction. Many scoff at the idea, 'How can we be guilty of the blood of a man who died nineteen centuries ago?'

"'Furthermore,' they say, 'why discuss such matters? We live in another day!'

"Well, what have we to say in answer? Quite a good deal, I believe.

"For example, why pay any attention to the sun, which is tens of millions of miles away from us? The answer is, of course, that we can not help it. Though the sun is far away, it is present with us in heat and light every day.

"Or one might ask, Why study geology? Why pay any attention to anything that happened yesterday? And always we have to come to the place where we see that our present is rooted in the past and we can no more cut loose from that past than a tree can be separated from its roots and still live.

"The Cross of Jesus Christ may be ancient history, but the rays of its power reach us today. Unlike the sun, the rays from which decrease in power, the influence of the Cross of Christ grows in the life of mankind as the centuries pass by. To look into that power, it seems to me, is the most vital study that can engage the mind of man today."

'Dynamic Good Will' Urged by Dr. Pierce

At All Souls' Church (Unitarian), the minister, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., spoke yesterday on the subject, "The Preferred Man."

"It is sometimes said that religion consists in thinking straight and living straight, but important as these are in the religious life, they are not enough," he said. "The fundamental function of religion is to induce and perpetuate a wholesome mood in man. Such a mood consists, first of all, in good will. Such good will is not static, it must be dynamic.

"There is great need in the world today for the rebirth of a passionate good will. With it, thinking and action will be raised to a religous level. A mood of cooperation, also, is needed. Many of the great triumphs of man, the forward steps in better living, have been made in spite of so-called good people.

"In all there must be a wholesome spirit of cooperation; a realization that while others may utilize different methods and hold different ideas, all have a common goal and are making their contribution to its achievement. And finally, there is needed a mood of forgiveness. Forgiveness of others is the condition upon which forgiveness comes to us. By it, we empty our minds of fears and hobgoblins and make room for the spirit of God. It is in church that we find our best moods; ourselves and others at their best.

"There we go to wash off the dust and grime of ugly moods and to have invoked in us the temper of good will, of a cooperative spirit, of a giving heart and mind. And what a blessing such a mood, which religion ever teaches and perpetuates, may be!"

Tests of a Christian Shown by Pastor

Man may know that he is a Christian by believing, trusting, and endeavoring to obey the will of Christ, the Rev. Otho A. Eure, pastor of the Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, Naylor road and Q street southeast, said in a sermon yesterday.

"In those days in which Christianity was born," he said, "they believed, trusted and endeavored to obey the Lord Jesus Christ. That was all. But it was everything. They accepted as unquestionably true the incarnation facts about Jesus. Believing as they did, then they gave themselves in faith to Him. Then in the midst of temptations and persecutions sharp and sore and often repeated, they endeavored to serve him. That is what it was at the beginning, and what it still is, to be a Christian. And the man who can be truthfully described in such language as this may know—not hope, not trust, but absolutely know—that he is himself a Christian."

Religious Prejudices Flayed by Rev. Henning

The Rev. H. M. Henning, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church, Fourth and E streets northwest, yesterday said, in part:

"When the first two disciples of Jesus sought assurance of heart regarding Him, He said, 'Come and see.' When Nathaniel voiced his prejudice in the words, 'Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?' Philip bade him, 'Come and see.' Those thus bidden went, and what did they see? In the first instance, proof sufficient to force upon them the conviction, 'We have found the Messiah.' In the second instance, such a bright ray of divine majesty which called forth the sincere confession, 'Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God.'

"These men, one of whom is described as without guile, whose sincerity was especially marked, yet at first, prejudiced in his mind, felt in no way, as their daily familiar contact with Jesus continued, that He was less than that. The great trouble with so many people today is, they will not 'come and see.' Jesus still graciously invites men, 'Come unto me.' But just that is what they refuse to do. Their prejudices, objections, and arguments blind them against doing the one thing which is able to lead them to the truth, 'come and see.' It is a notorious fact that so many of those who are loudest and strongest in their rejection of Christian truths, have never taken the trouble to read the Bible, or to hear the public preaching of it. The Word of God is still the power of God to make out of a prejudiced soul a believing Paul. 'Come and see.'"

Fire Destroys Home Of Rioters' Opponent

Shelbyville, Tenn., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Fire early today destroyed the home of the Rev. W. O. Largen, Methodist preacher who had urged the law to act against leaders of the mob that a month ago rioted here, burning the Bedford County Courthouse and bringing about the deaths of four men.

City Judge C. C. Smith said an appeal had been made to State fire authorities to investigate the fire in the belief it was of incendiary origin.

Dakota House Claims Votes To Try Moodie

Governor's Suspension Today Aim of Group Seeking Impeachment.

Bismarck, N. Dak., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—A carefully mapped program, designed to complete impeachment action against Gov. Thomas H. Moodie and bring about his immediate suspension from office, was ready today for presentation in the North Dakota House Monday.

At a caucus last night, Nonpartisan League majority House members voted to support plans for acceptance of articles of impeachment being drawn by a board of managers appointed under an impeachment resolution adopted by the Assembly Friday.

Shortly after the Assembly convenes Monday, the group will offer the articles of impeachment, based on charges that Moodie, Democratic chief executive who took office 13 days ago, is guilty of "crime, corrupt conduct, malfeasance and misdemeanors in office."

Specifically the Governor will be charged with "usurping" office when he "knew" he was disqualified to serve.

Sixty votes were mustered for adoption of the impeachment resolution, and majority leaders obtained a pledge from these members that they will support adoption of the articles of impeachment when they come on the floor for a vote.

1,000 Women Coming to D.C. To Urge Peace

Host of Opponents of War to Be Speakers at Annual Parley.

A decade of campaigning for world peace will be marked here tomorrow with more than 1,000 women attending the opening session of the tenth annual Conference on the Cause and Cure of War in the Washington Hotel.

Authorities on international affairs and peace will be paraded before the conference in three days of meetings. These will include Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Ambassador at Large Norman Davis, William Edward Dodd, Pierre de Lanux, director of the Paris office of the League of Nations; Prof. Hans Kohn, of Smith College; Prof. Harold Lasswell, of the University of Chicago, and Senator Gerald P. Nye.

With the munitions inquiry and the Senate's consideration of America's entry into the World Court providing the background, conference discussions have been grouped under the general theme, "The Price of Peace," with the opening session devoted to a consideration of "The World Today."

At tomorrow's session, Carrie Chapman Catt, honorary chairman of the National conference committee and one of its early organizers, will review the organization's work in the last decade in "Ten Years' Work Toward Peace." Mrs. Roosevelt will address the banquet in the evening.

Editorial opinion is to be represented at the sessions by Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, and Grover Clark, former editor of the Peking Leader, who will give addresses.

During the conference, ten regional meetings will be held at which the Senate munitions inquiry and the World Court are to be leading items of discussion.

Other conference speakers will include Senator James P. Pope, Mary Anderson, director of the Department of Labor children's bureau; Leonid Tolokonski, Soviet consul in New York; Professors Parker T. Moon, of Columbia University, and Harry D. Gideonse, of the University of Chicago; DeWitte Clinton Poole, director of the Public Affairs School of Princeton University; William T. Stone, vice president of the Foreign Policy Associations, and Rabbi Louis L. Mann, of the Sinai Congregation of Chicago.

Arrangements for the conference have been made by a Washington committee headed by Mrs. W. L. Darby.

Directed From Sickbed, Kidnap Trial Reopens

St. Louis, Jan. 20 (AP).—From the hospital room where he has been confined since he was injured in an assault last October, Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson tomorrow will direct his staff in the second of the Dr. Isaac D. Kelley kidnaping case trials.

Three defendants in custody, Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, wife of a St. Louis physician, Felix McDonald and Bart Davit, are docketed for trial tomorrow. Angelo Rosegrant was convicted on October 4 of the 1931 kidnaping of Dr. Kelley, and was senttnced to 20 years imprisonment.

Warship Rescues Plane Passengers

Athens, Greece, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—Passengers and crew clinging to the half-submerged wreckage of a French Air-Orient airliner in the Ionian Sea were rescued tonight by an Italian destroyer.

The plane, en route from Corfu to Marseilles, France, plunged into the sea this afternoon about 30 miles west of the Ionian Island of Santa Maura which lies just off the western coast of Greece.

On the Air Today

Rhythm Makers to Broadcast

The first of a series of six Parade of Youth broadcasts sponsored by The Washington Post will feature Betty Beauchamp and Her Rhythm Makers over WJSV at 5:45 p. m. today. Every Washington boy and girl will be listening to the Parade of Youth today because a prize contest will be announced and full details given of a new boys' and girls' magazine supplement to The Sunday Post. Betty and the Rhythm Makers are 15 and 16 years of age and—well listen to them yourself. They put professional acts to shame!

By Katherine Smith.

Every boy and girl in Washington will be interested in a new program on WJSV at 5:45 today. The Washington Post will present the "Parade of Youth," with two local juvenile actors, Phyllis Warner and Banks Murphy, playing hosts to the 50 children invited to the studio. Entertainment will include Betty Banchant, a 17-year-old singer, the Rhythm Boys, a guitar trio, and other features.

Best of all, this program will contain announcements and details of the new Post contest. Some lucky boy will win a streamlined train and some lucky girl electric kitchen equipment. Listen closely for contest information.

This program is the first of a series, running the remainder of the week through Saturday on WJSV at the same hour. Then, on Sunday, the first issue of the new children's magazine will appear in the Post. This magazine and the programs carry the same name—the "Parade of Youth," and are of interest to all children between the ages of 8 and 16.

A new howl-teaser goes on the air over WMAL today at 7:30 a. m. John Shellie, announcer, takes it upon himself to be entire cast of "Air-o-Nuts," the scene of which is laid in the asylum for the irresponsible. Chief Nose-in-bloom, a full-blood Okee-Dokee Indian, gives a weather report! Walls Wontcha is the news commentator; Sir Reginald Tawdry-Beeping takes you into the realms of nature. The whole thing is staged from a cell—done in "pale purple padding," and is as nutty as possible.

Shellie says the program will go on as long as he can make up gags.

Another radio star comes to town. To audiences at a local theater Donald Novis is the young, smiling tenor who runs lightly to the mike, sings, takes his bows, runs back again into the wings. A famous singer, seen a few moments, then gone.

But Donald Novis, away from the footlights, presents a different picture. His white coat is replaced by a long blue quilted dressing gown, he relaxes in a chair, yawns, then between cigarette puffs, tells you that he left concert singing for radio, that he can swim 60 yards under water, that his favorite song is "La Reve" from "Manon."

He will tell you too that he likes radio better than any other type of work he has done, that he doesn't think television will be a good medium for him—"Not with my face."

And then, how the voice was found. "My father found it for me," he said with a smile." He was a good musician, did choral work, and had a real love for it. I thought singing was sort of sissy, but he made me study and I developed a real love for it.

"It's funny how you get jobs. I remember once I was making movie shorts in California. I was practicing in the dressing room one day, and Arthur Hammerstein drifted in to get some music. He heard me and got my name and address. Some time later the phone rang at 7 a. m. A voice said, 'This is Arthur Hammerstein. I'm in New York.' I said, 'You got me out of bed. It's 7 o'clock.' He answered, 'But it's later here. Pack up and come to New York. I've got a job for you.'

"So you never can tell when something might break."

Last night Novis made his regular "Open House" broadcast from WJSV. Was introduced as the "singing waiter" who would serve "Cocktails for Two." . . . Probably the only publicly served cocktails in the city, Sunday being what it is.

His is a voice with splendid training—ten years of it—colored with a vibrant personality and a love of music. Somebody said, "Isn't Donald Novis considered the best radio tenor today?" It's most surprising.

To some listeners, Noble Sissle's orchestra is the only colored band that sounds like a white one. They pluck fiddles, then come out with "Yea, man!" Incidentally, Noble's boys are Cole Porter's favorite musicians.

Richard Himber, musical maestro, went "clean" minded and rattled off a series of song titles that merit either a grin or a groan. They are "You're the Tub." "Why Wash I Born?" "You Water be in Pictures," "Soap Gets in My Eyes," "Soap Beats My Heart for You" and "With Every Bath I Take.'"

Madame Tatiana Tchernavina, writer and reputed to be the only woman ever to escape from a Russian prison, will tell you of the "Fate of the Intellectual Worker in Russia, WMAL, 4:45 today. She will explain the three "horrors" of Russia—"supply of food, terror of the present and fear of the future."

Her book, "Escape from the Soviet," was a Book of the Month Club choice.

Kate Smith presents two more winners, Gabrielle Hunt, contralto, and the Harmoneers, a novelty quartet of singers, comedians, and instrumentalists, WJSV, 8:30 p. m., tonight.

St. Louis Symphony plays Schubert's "Unfinished," prelude to Act 3 of "Lohengrin," by Wagner, Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" and Suite, No. 1, from Lalo's "Nanouna."

Ray Noble, English conductor, composer, arranger and pianist, is signed with a perfume manufacturer and he and his orchestra will present a 26 weeks series of N.B.C. broadcasts, beginning between February 15 and March 1.

A group of today's speeches: National Conference for Palestine, program for the purpose of making Palestine Day a Jewish holiday. Alfred M. Cohen, of Cincinnati, is officiating. WJSV, 4:30 . . . Merchants and Manufacturers program with Sylvan King speaking on "Immediate Full Government Pay Restoration" . . . WRC, 1:15 . . . Public Health luncheon introduces the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Josephine Roche, 1:30, WRC . . . Radio Forum presents Charles E. Paige, Auto Pioneer, Dies in Hollywood

Los Angeles, Jan. 20 (AP).—Fred O. Paige, 71, who founded the Paige Detroit Motor Co. that manufactured the automobile bearing his name, died today in the Hollywood Hospital after an illness of two weeks from a vein disorder.

Paige, who was retired, came here from New York four years ago to reside. His automobile firm several years ago became the Graham-Paige interests. Previous to residing in New York, Paige had lived in Detroit. Surviving are the widow and four children.

Governors Pledge Easier Mortgages

38 Executives to Support President's Plea.

In line with wishes of President Roosevelt and James A. Moffett, housing administrator, Governors of 38 States have signified their intention of asking liberalization of real estate mortgage laws, according to the Associated Press.

The action is held by the Administration to be necessary if the housing program is to succeed. The principal change asked would raise the percentage of the total value of a piece of property that may be represented by a mortgage. In most States this is now 60 per cent. The Administration wants it increased to 80 per cent.

The Federal Housing Administration makes no loans itself, but is now insuring mortgages on real estate up to 80 per cent of the value of the property, the top limit, however, being loans of $16,000 on urban residential property.

Harsh Punishment.

Six years in a reformatory for unauthorized use of an automobile appears to be unusually harsh punishment, especially when it is meted out to 15-year-old boys. Judge Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, may have had some good reason for thus sentencing the lads who took Policeman Maghan's car and drove to Roanoke rather than face truancy charges, but those reasons are not apparent in the action of the court.

The manner in which this case is said to have been handled is even more disturbing than the punishment imposed. Parents of the boys were not called upon to testify. The procedure of the court has led to the impression that the only issue considered was whether the offending boys had taken an automobile without permission. Since they pleaded guilty, evidence against them was not essential, but the public has come to expect a thorough inquiry into the background of juvenile delinquencies before sentences are passed.

Indeed, the model juvenile court bill which Congress will be asked to pass at its present session would permit no formal charges and no "sentences" for children. Each case would be handled on its own merits with the welfare of the child as the foremost consideraton. So far as children are concerned, the old-fashioned idea of a rigid penalty for every offense would be completely discarded. Delinquent minors would be carefully safeguarded against any environment that might be conducive to criminal tendencies.

Judge Bentley's nomination for the juvenile bench was supported by various groups which adhere to this liberal conception of that court's duty. Confirmation of her appointment brought a great deal of satisfaction because of her experience with children. The public has looked forward to an enlightened administration of the Juvenile Court as an agency devoted solely to child welfare. When the court reverts to hasty and what appears to be unsympathetic judgments disappointment is inevitable.

The Post has no desire, of course, to try this case in its columns. But the policy of the court in handling cases of this kind is a matter in which the press and the public can not fail to be interested. When routine procedure results in the imposition upon children of punishment more drastic than that meted out to adults for similar offenses, it is time to reexamine basic principles rather critically.

State Cooperation.

At the opening session here of the Council of State Governments, Gov. Winant pointed to the great need of a coordinating body to promote agreements among the States and to bring them into effective working relationships with the Federal Government. Another speaker, State Senator Henry W. Toll, of Colorado, truly said: "The laws of the States conflict, their practices diverge, their policies are antagonistic. Such chaos can not continue. One of two courses is inevitable. Either many of the remaining functions of the States will pass rapidly into Federal control, or else the States must hasten to cooperate with each other as they have never cooperated before."

The Federal Government will have no option except to extend the scope of its activities, if the States fail to meet the challenge of the times. By facing their responsibilities squarely instead of complaining ineffectively of Federal usurpation of their powers, State authorities can undoubtedly arrest the progress of Federalization, or at least retain unimpaired those powers which should be exercised by the local authorities. An example of the type of cooperation which provides a defense against too much external interference is afforded by the recent endeavors of State planning commissions to recommend programs of local public works which would give employment and meet actual needs. Well thought out plans of this sort, especially if developed after consultation with the authorities of other States, would help to eliminate waste in the utilization of Federal funds and give the local authorities more control over developmental projects financed with Federal aid.

Interstate agreements designed to establish joint control over exploitation of natural resources, such as oil and waterpower, constitute another safeguard against the entry of the Federal Government into new fields. Agreements among the States to reduce tax conflicts, as well better segregation of Federal and State sources of revenue, are also among the needs of the times. The economic wastes and losses of a failure to resolve the numerous existing conflicts are patent.

The questions that require earnest study and call for cooperation among the representatives of our numerous "sovereign" States and the Federal Government are, however, extremely difficult of solution. The Council of State Governments has essayed a task whose magnitude and importance can not be overrated.

Beyond The Saar.

A week after the Saar voted overwhelmingly in favor of a return to German sovereignty that territory is quietly preparing for its momentous transition on March 1. Instead of threatening the peace of Europe, as statesmen have feared for several years, the Saar incident is furnishing a unique example of enlightened diplomacy. Paradoxically, however, the success of the Saar plebiscite is being used as an excuse for agitation that is having a disquieting effect in some other parts of Europe.

No shifting of an international boundary in Europe could possibly be effected without some degree of tension. In the light of the conditions which led to the separation of the Saar from Germany and the historic antagonism between the two powers which face each other across the territory, the degree of order which has been maintained since the vote was taken is remarkable. Because of this dramatic background every repercussion from the plebiscite has been magnified out of all proportion to its significance. Even so, the Saar has remained peaceful; reports of terrorism have been proved false, and there are many reasons for assuming that the final transfer will be effected without serious difficulty.

The Saar plebiscite does not, however, dispose of all the problems between France and Germany. The Reich's demand for equality of armaments is again coming to the fore as the Saar issue merges with history. It remains to be seen whether this victory will propitiate the Hitler regime or encourage the president-chancellor to adopt a more arbitrary foreign policy. Moreover, the current agitation in the Nazi-controlled press for the return of Memel to the Fatherland is a reminder that assurances given France in the agreement on the Saar do not extend to other neighbors of the Reich.

It is natural that the expression of such strong pro-German sentiment in the Saar should rekindle the ambitions of German people in other neighboring territory for union with the Fatherland. But this will not excuse a Nazi drive for further extension of the German border. Incipient movements toward that objective emphasize the desirability of the Franco-Italian pact in which those powers attempt to guarantee Austria's independence. German statesmen who are sincerely desirous of consolidating the advance toward stability resulting from elimination of the Saar problem will find it difficult consistently to avoid adherence to this guarantee.

In much the same way the proposed Eastern Locarno pact, in which the nations of eastern Europe would agree to aid any member of the group against an aggressor, will serve as a test of Germany's willingness to forego the use of military force in bringing about future adjustments.

Removal of the Saar problem as a source of irritation in Europe's international relations undoubtedly affords a basis for better understanding. But obviously the pendulum could swing in either direction. Every movement of the less temperate Nazi element, inside or outside of the Saar, will be scrutinized for concrete evidence that this triumph for self-determination will actually become a mile post in Europe's struggle for stability.

Textile Wages.

Following the recent strike in the cotton textile industry, President Roosevelt ordered the Federal Trade Commission to make a report on the labor costs, investments and profits of textile mills. At the same time the Department of Labor was requested to investigate wages and earnings of textile workers. The Federal Trade Commission published a partial study of earnings and profits of textile concerns a short time ago, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics has now issued a report on wages which throws further light upon conditions within the industry.

The bureau finds that the cotton manufacturers are generally obeying the wage provisions of the codes, although cotton mill workers are still among the lowest paid employes of any major industry. Furthermore, it appears that the real earnings of the workers in August, 1934, prior to the strike, were lower than in August, 1933, having declined 25 per cent in the South and 15 per cent in the North. This, of course, was due to curtailment of production, not to a reduction in rates of pay.

Although the report confines itself to a statement of facts, its appearance brought an outburst from Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, who asserts that "it rips the covers from the naked greed, the inhuman callousness of the mill owners and the manufacturers." To his mind, the showing justifies demands for wage increases and for shortening of the working week. Of course, it does nothing of the sort, although it unquestionably shows the desirability of higher wages. The question at issue is whether the industry can support a wage increase under existing conditions. If the mills should close down, or curtail their operations sharply, because of unduly high labor costs, the workers' earnings would sink still lower.

Before condemning mill owners for inhumanity and greed, labor leaders ought to read the report on earnings and profits. That investigation shows that during the six months after establishment of the NRA, mill profits increased sharply, but were followed by marked declines during 1934. While the returns are partial and fail to cover the final months of the year, they strongly indicate that the mills have been running on a no-profit basis of late.

A deficit of between 3 and 4 per cent was recorded by all reporting mills during last July and August. Since then, according to the chairman of the cotton textile code, the margin between raw material costs and selling price out of which manufacturing costs have to be paid has "narrowed to alarmingly close figures compared to the past." Under such conditions, it is evident that demands for further wage increases together with a shortening of the working week would destroy the incentive to continued production in many cases and throw textile workers out of employment instead of increasing the amount of their earnings.

Expanding The RFC.

Starting as an emergency lending agency to aid weak banks and assist railroads in pressing need of funds, the RFC has steadily expanded the scope and increased the variety of its activities. With the lending authority of the corporation due to expire at the end of this month, Chairman Jones is now petitioning the President and Congress for an extension of that power and for permission to engage in new activities designed to assist railroad reorganization and promote revival in the mortgage field.

Mr. Jones concedes that the "bank repair" work is about completed, while repayments on all loans and investments have amounted to approximately $2,465,000,000, or 51 per cent of the total. Nevertheless, he asserts significantly: "While our repayments are gratifying, indicating the great strength of our country, and in large measure, the degree of recovery already attained, they evidence continued liquidation not necessarily helpful in recovery." Consequently, he recommends an extension of the time during which loans may be repaid up to ten years.

As the RFC already has about $800,000,000 available for use, Mr. Jones says it is possible that it will not need any additional borrowing capacity. He adds that "our borrowing is at all times subject to control of the Treasury and our activities subject to termination by Presidential proclamation." Congress, however, is responsible for fixing the terms on which the RFC shall continue to function. It should take time for reflection before authorizing continuation and diversification of activities that can be justified only in times of emergency. In other words, Congress must decide whether there is any real need for a more powerful RFC or whether that agency is merely embarrassed by a return flow of funds for which it seeks new outlets.

However long the RFC endures, it doubtless can find new fields of activity which would provide an outlet for Government funds. But this very eagerness to undertake the functions that private financing agencies fail to discharge tends to check private initiative. Moreover, the size and diversity of the interests acquired by the Government as the RFC strikes out in new directions, and its growing power of control over private management insidiously lead toward Government domination of hitherto independent enterprises.

Since the most pressing emergency demands for credit have already been met, business should be encouraged to go forward with the aid of a rehabilitated banking system without chronic reliance upon public credit. The solicitude manifested by Mr. Jones because debts are being repaid by borrowers from the RFC is in fact out of place. Such repayments help to clear the way for a revival of private lending which is hampered so long as a preferred creditor like the Government holds heavy liens on the properties of the country's banks and railroads.

Seasonably And Reasonably.

Hearty indorsement awaits any revision of prevailing drinking habits that would tend to minimize the litter of empty whisky bottles to be found daily scattered about our streets. While the somewhat wistful remarks of a visiting Rhineland vintner might appear to suggest the remedy, on reflection it is apparent that his proposal is more beautiful than practical. He has ventured that the United States should become "wine-minded" for the mutual improvement, it may be assumed, of foreign vineyards and domestic culture.

The immediate prospect of the populace shifting from a cocktail-and-whisky standard to one of contemplative oenevolence seems unhappily remote. Too long has New World culture been identified with the jug and noggin to change suddenly to the cask and goblet. Folkways are intricately interwoven affairs, as 13 years of prohibition convincingly demonstrated.

This fact, however, should not discourage efforts to inculcate a civilized attitude in drinking as in all else. The German merchant merits fullest applause when he says, "What you need is to cultivate the art of drinking and the taste for good liquor and to teach this generation to drink seasonably and reasonably."

This can not be denied, particularly if Washington's empty bottles are an index of Washington's esthetic development. It is probably only too true, as some one recently suggested, that the proof of the brew is in their drinking.

It is said that the law of supply and demand governs distribution, but the kind of weather we usually have doesn't confirm this theory.

"Civilization is toppling," moans a philosopher. Oh, no, is isn't—it hasn't risen high enough to topple.

It is reported that Upton Sinclair will get into the newspaper game. If he isn't careful, he'll end Sinclair in poverty.

Social conversation is the art of talking without thinking.

About Time.

Views On The Gold Clause Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are several angles from which the gold controversy may be viewed.

1. The Constitution empowers the Congress to regulate the value of money, thus vesting in it the power to exercise its discretion and judgment as to the public policy involved.

2. This power of deciding upon the public policy as touching the value of money conferred upon Congress by the Constitution is fundamental law and every contract involving money made since the adoption of the Constitution either by private parties or the Government itself was made subject to the power of Congress to pass laws regulating the value of money.

3. The United States Constitution denies to the States the power to enact legislation impairing the obligations of contracts, but there is no inhibition against the United States itself doing so.

4. There does not appear to be any provision in the Constitution providing either for the extension or the suspension of the powers conferred and the restrictions imposed during times of stress or so-called emergencies.

5. Among the purposes enumerated is the promotion of the general welfare which confers upon Congress the power to adopt any policy, not expressly forbidden by the Constitution, that may appear to be best suited to accomplish the purpose.

The question involved is purely one of power and, therefore, the wisdom or unwisdom of the gold policy need not be discussed.

A. F. THOMAS.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the gold cases in the Supreme Court, admitting that no State can pass legislation altering a contract, wherein does the Constitution prohibit Congress from passing such legislation? Congress certainly has power to coin money and regulate the value thereof.

Now that stocks are presumably purified, why would it not be a good idea for President Roosevelt to allot a small portion of his four-billion-dollar relief fund to the boosting of the stock market?

On the question of silver purchases and the disastrous effect thereof to the banks of Shanghai and China, may it not be probable the trouble is caused by the great mass of Chinese people hoarding silver, expecting to get higher prices therefor? The writer likes the present silver legislation, one part silver and three parts gold, and does not approve of Senator Wheeler's 16-to-1 theory, for the Gresham law would prevent our ever going back on gold.

JEREMIAH JOHNSON.

Washington, Jan. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The most startling omission from the argument of the gold cases before the Supreme Court was the failure of Attorney General Cummings and Solicitor General Biggs to cite the only perfect judicial precedent for the Administration's gold-grabbing scheme by which it took from the people and placed in the Treasury nearly three billions of Hoover gold dollars, which now count as over four billion Roosevelt gold dollars, to pay on our skyrocketing budgets.

The perfect precedent which was overlooked is the famous decision of Monk, J. in the case of Cat v. Cat, 1st Aesop's Reports, 17. Judge Monk in that case, like President Roosevelt, was chosen by fighting tom cats, even as you and I, to adjust their common wealth of cheese between them. Monk, J. began to nibble at the shares of cheese to bring the chunks to a parity.

It must be admitted that Judge Monk's method finally equalized the wealth between the two cats—by reducing both shares to zero. If our venerable Supreme Justices approve this first nibble (!), what is to prevent Mr. Roosevelt from following Judge Monk to the last gobble, since the Administration assures us that a 5-cent gold dollar is still "on the gold standard."

More wonders: just when did an offender against the Constitution ever before threaten a high court with chaos from his unconstitutional act if it did not declare that act constitutional, and escape a citation for contempt of court?

ROBERT LEE DURHAM.

Buena Vista, Va., Jan. 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Stripped to the bone the argument of the Attorney General seems to be an admission that the authorities that be may have overplayed their hand in making the gold clause a nullity. But the consequences of what has occurred between then and now are such that chaos to the country in general would result if the Supreme Court dared to declare their action illegal.

And the truth of this statement is plainly evident when rumor alone that such a possibility might occur stampeded foreign exchange markets driving American dollars high and foreign currency low, and causing a general decline in the American securities. If rumor could do that what would a Supreme Court decision do upholding the gold clause!

There is a great political issue in this and its effect can be far reaching. No single factor to my mind could bring greater disgrace on the Democratic party than a decision by the Supreme Court holding that the New Deal set aside the Constitution in nullifying the gold clause.

Except for the crisis now confronting the Nation it is my belief that almost unanimous sentiment would be found in the Supreme Court upholding the gold clause because after all it is fundamental under our law that parties to an agreement should be allowed to specify the consideration they want to exchange their goods or services for, be it dollars, gold, silver, or any other commodity.

It is absurd to assert that such specification hurts either side of a contract and to outlaw dealings in gold in commercial markets as an element of consideration to a contract, all parties willing, is something difficult to argue logically as constitutional.

"Zestful Reading."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since Mr. Raymond Clapper started his column "Between You and Me" in The Post, it has become the first thing I read at the breakfast table each morning. It starts my day off, and in most cases starts it off right. I have mentioned this fact to several of my friends and afterward it has occurred to me that it would not be out of order to write and tell you the same thing.

While I do not agree with everything Mr. Clapper says, I am in hearty agreement with his method of presentation and style of writing. His column really "breathes" fairness; it has no unessentials; no half-baked satirical comment, and no wild, distorted rumors. I get real informative help from the column every day and at the same time find it very zestful reading. His ability to present a clear-cut case, with proper consideration of both sides involved, deserves the heartiest commendation.

More power to him!

Civil Service Careers Or Spoils?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a member of the civil service personnel on permanent status let me thank you and your staff for your admirable editorial on January 14, entitled "After 52 Years." You have aptly summarized the irony of a celebration of the fifty-second anniversary of the civil service, when "a group of Congressmen have launched a brazen campaign to undermine the merit system."

We, of the permanent force of the civil service, are questioning: Why have a civil service? Why give examinations and classifications? Why call the civil service a service? Why not rename it "the Congressional Employment Bureau?"

If you gentlemen of the press would investigate congressional interference in the civil service as you did the "nepotism" at the Capitol two years ago, we, of the permanent force of the civil service, would feel we had a platform which might bring to reason even the boldest of Farleyites. It is to the press that we look for unbiased help!

It surprises us that the press has not before berated this growing scandal which has existed for years under every Administration and is accentuated only now by our present emergency, unemployment and the temerity of wholesale appointments.

The President can not be in sympathy with the late development. Any man who has the courage to veto the bonus and restoration of pay could not subscribe to wholesale appointments in any service. If his party chiefs force the issue, they can consider themselves the instigators of a Federal disgrace. It must be remembered that the President has now five men attached to the nerican Embassy in London studying the British civil service and he has been quoted as having cognizance of the deplorable situation in our own civil service.

I do not believe your statement that "the Civil Service Commission is actively trying to checkmate the spoilsmen." The Civil Service Commissioners are dependent on Congress for their appointments. The commission's hands are tied by the fact that there have always been 110,000 jobs in the civil service under patronage—the "hangover" of the spoils system and one-fifth of the total membership of the personnel. Investigation should prove that this 110,000 has grown beyond its former scope. In other words, the civil services has never been entirely "scot-free" of Congress and a clearly defined service, as the Army and Navy.

Return to the "spoils system" or give the civil service a portfolio in the Cabinet; give u service comparable in standard to the Army and Navy, untouched by political winds; give us a service which will of a career to young men and women and not displacement by disappointed constituents of Congressmen. MISS A.

The Post Impressionist

In Troubled Waters.

Post Office, Monday.

OUR telephone rang. A voice at the other end of the wire remarked:

"About the dole—'the demagogues well knew that the poor were driven to extremity and lacked bread.'"

We asked: "Who's speaking?"

The voice went on:

"And arms manufacturers are like the fishers for eels. In still waters, they catch nothing; but if they thoroughly stir up the slime, their fishing is good.'"

We pleased: "Please, who's talking?"

And then the answer came: "Aristophanes."

Never mind about the dole. That Master of Greek Comedy wrote on many another modern subject: On graft, political oratory, women-in-politics, too. His commentators have all warned us to look for "a serious note" beneath his "rollicking, reckless, uproarious fun"—because his works supplied for his classic audiences "the place of the political journal, the literary review, the popular caricature and the party pamphlet." But we had forgotten that he conducted an investigation of munitions makers—although, he having lived through a bit of the long-winded Peloponnesian Wars, it would have been a wonder had he overlooked the militant industry.

However, our memory doesn't matter—not when there is a kindly classicist like Louise Kidder Sparrow to quote him to us over the telephone.

Mrs. Sparrow reminded us that Aristophanes wrote a whole play about "Peace" — and about the enemies of peace. It tells how Peace, long buried, is exhumed under the direction of the rustic patriot Trygaeus. But it also shows that his job wasn't an easy one.

The makers of armor seize the rope which has been attached to Peace to raise her—and they "pull the other way." There is further hindering by similar folk who "in troublous times . . . line their pockets." There is opposition by persons "greedy for military rank and honors." There are so many malcontents that Trygaeus cries:

"May he who would prefer war, O Dionysus, be ever drawing barbed arrows out of his elbows! . . . If a lance maker or a dealer in shields desires war for the sake of better trade, may he be taken by pirates and eat nothing but barley!"

And, when Peace is at last brought out of the pit, maybe Trygaeus doesn't go for her detractors! He turns to the crowd and says:

"Let us scan the mien of the spectators; we shall thus find out the occupation of each."

Whereupon he gives them the H. I. Phillips "Once Over," and says he:

"Ah, good gods! Look at that poor helmet manufacturer tearing his hair. . . .

"Do you see with what pleasure this scythe-dealer is making snoots at that merchant of spears?"

They lament frankly, all those munitions makers in Aristophanes who have held that "war was necessary to make their calling pay."

The helmet manufacturer cries:

"Alas, alas, Trygaeus, you have ruined me utterly! . . . You have killed my business, my livelihood—and that of this poor lance-cutter, too!"

And a breastplate producer complains:

"Good gods, what am I to do with this fine ten-minae breastplate, which is so splendidly made?"

And no wonder—seeing that 10 minae means about 210 gold dollars!

But all's well that ends well—if you are among the deserving. Mrs. Sparrow well says that the songs of praise by the patriot Trygaeus and by the chorus, when peace comes finally to her own again, contain some beautiful and triumphant lines:

"Listen, good folk! Let the husbandmen take their farming tools and return to their fields as quickly as possible, but without either sword, spear or javelin . . . Come, let every one till the earth!"

You weren't paid, in the days of Aristophanes, for refraining from the cultivation of your garden.

No, sir. Instead, Trygaeus declaims:

"Friends, do you remember the happy life that Peace afforded us formerly? Can you recall the splendid baskets of figs, both fresh and dried, the myrtles, the sweet wine, the violets blooming near the spring, and the loves—for which we have wept so much? Worship, adore the goddess for restoring you so many blessings!"

Old Stuff?

Yes, just about as old as the world, and therefore as new as tomorrow.

We believe we know how to reduce the private manufacture of armaments. We suggest:

That the Nye Committee recommend to Congress an Act whereunder private armament manufacture may be conducted only upon license granted by a Federal Examining Board.

And that this Board examine all applicants upon the original Greek text of Aristophanes' "Peace."

G. O. P. Hails Leader In Governor Hoffman

New Jersey Executive Emerges As National Figure Following Unusual Election.

(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

New York.

UP to recently it has been a little difficult for some readers to distinguish between the names of the Governor-elect of New Jersey and the defendant in the Lindbergh trial at Flemington, in the same State. But now that he has finally been inaugurated, Gov. Harold G. Hoffman emerges as a full-fledged national figure and one of the white hopes of the Republican Party.

Pickings among inaugurations and installations have been thin for the Republicans this year in the politically important States. But an appraising eye will be cast toward New Jersey, which, in the past, has been a President-maker. Up to date the new Governor's greatest feat is in having smashed a 27-year-old tradition that a Republican can not corral the governorship in an off-presidential year. He not only did that but came floating into the executive chair on top of an opposition tidal wave.

What kind of a man is he? A lot of people think they know but no one is exactly sure. Nobody in the State has more friends, nobody knows more voters personally. It is this fact which won him election to office ten times in succession and finally got him drafted for the governorship when he didn't believe he had a chance. Perhaps he could be described as a product of the machine age, for his job as commissioner of motor vehicles made him the candidate of almost everybody with an automobile license.

As a politician he is first of all a joiner. He is an Elk, a Junior Mechanic, a Knight of Pythias, an Eagle, a Tall Cedar, an Odd Fellow, a Legionaire, a Jester and a Veiled Prophet. It is in the latter capacity that he will be watched most carefully. He is a great hand-shaker, a ready smiler and a hearty back-slapper. Yet those who have known him best say he is a good deal more than that.

IN the last campaign, when at first he seemed to be leading a lost cause, he tore in with the energy of ten men, covered the State almost foot by foot and talked himself into tonsilitis. And he worked so fast and furiously that he was able to sprinkle just enough sand in the hitherto relentless gears of Frank Hague's ponderous Jersey City machine—some 12,000 votes in a tally of 1,361,000. It wasn't much of a plurality, but considering the grip of Hague, the former janitor, on the destinies of Jersey, it was a miracle. The effect was much as though the prehistoric man had unearthed himself from the Trenton gravels and walked in to take charge of the State Capitol.

Gov. Hoffman has now turned 38 and has lost his boyish figure, though he still looks like a Horatio Alger hero. He is the son of a railroad man in South Amboy—oh yes, there is such a town. He was graduated from public school there and proved himself a good mixer before he went away to the war. Overseas he saw service in the trenches and helped fight a way to Sedan.

He came back a captain and South Amboy was so proud it made him mayor. As far as a man can be, who is a member of so many societies, he has always remained a home body and worships his wife and three little girls. Lillie, the middle one, aged 7, writes verses, some of them about her father. Here is what she thinks of him:

Just an all-round nifty fella,
With a lot of vim and pep,
And a smile that's broad and catchy,
And the power to keep in step.

The Republican wheel-horses hope fervently that he will retain "the power to keep in step," which assumes a good deal of importance after the lean years they look back on. Even his opponents (he hasn't many enemies yet) admit the catchy smile. His prognosticators think he will proceed cautiously and stick fairly close to his knitting for a while. National issues can take care of themselves until they come knocking at his door. He is fussing now over relief for the needy in New Jersey, of whom there are plenty, and the further development of New Jersey's commerce and business, of which there isn't as much as there ought to be.

RABBI NATHAN WOLF, secretary to the Marriage Brokers Association of the United States, reports to his fellow members that that business is simply schlect with ten kallahs for every chosson. This makes it look very dark, indeed, with business rotten and ten prospective brides for every possible husband.

The rabbi himself is not a shadchan, or broker, but he lectures to them each year on conditions and ethics in their trade. The trouble, he declares, lies entirely in the economic condition of the country. Men are so uncertain of their futures that they are afraid to get married until they are around 35, while girls, for the same reason, want to get married at 15.

Nevertheless, feminine beauty is still an asset in the market, though "if a lady has real love affairs she need never go to a shadchan." For some reason, among the males, lawyers are at a sharp discount. No one seems to want them. Dentists, also, are not much in demand, though they are in a position to spend their evenings at home. But the bidding is lively on doctors. A thriving physician can command as much as $1,200 dowry from a kallah of prosperous parents.

Rabbi Wolf, by the way, has another distinction. He is the solitary resident and the only voter of the Fortieth Election District, which is in the center of the garment industry. At every election the commissioners have to bring out a booth for his special benefit. It doesn't take long, however, to count the vote.

• • • •

FOR most people the most trying job in the world would be that of husband to America's feminine flying ace. George Palmer Putnam, husband of Amelia Earhart, doesn't find it so. He cheerfully follows her about on slower vehicles, just as he did by steamer from Honolulu this week, and glorifies unself-consciously in her achievements.

Mr. Putnam is a direct descendant of old Gen. Israel Putnam, who tackled the wolf in his den and escaped the British in the Revolutionary War by riding down a stone stairway which now debouches on the Boston Post Road. The men of that family have all had plenty of courage of one sort or another.

He started his career, of course, with his father's famous publishing house. Then he organized a publishing business of his own—Brewer, Warren & Putnam. Now he is on the editorial board of Paramount Pictures.

George Palmer Putnam is well known in New York, where he is a member of the Coffee House Club and a half dozen others. He is a big, handsome fellow, doesn't object to publicity, and his home at Rye is one of the loveliest in the metropolitan area.

There are two things, however, which he doesn't like. He doesn't like to be called Mr. Amelia Earhart and he hates to be told that his wife ought to get a trailer. Nor is his favorite nursery rhyme "Lady bug, lady bug, fly away home." As a matter of fact, he makes a smooth and gallant job of a tough assignment.

Nature note: Snowdrops and witch-hazel blooms are lifting their dauntless heads in the outdoor plantations of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden. But the Weather Bureau explains that the flowers that bloom in the cold, tra-la, have nothing to do with the spring. Of course they are going to shrivel pretty quickly at current temperatures and merely represent a minor casualty of last week's six-day fog, which almost gave New York a London accent.

The fog cost the flowers their lives by luring them to a certain doom and cost the Empire State Building a thousand dollars a day by keeping people away from the observation tower. It cost some of the shipping vessels ten thousand dollars a day to keep their vessels idle. And the companies that sell electricity to light Manhattan's topless towers made plenty.

Barrier Asked On Patronage

Civil Service Refore Unit Urges Amendment to Security Bill.

An antipatronage amendment to the Wagner social security bill was urged yesterday by the National Civil Service Reform League, New York. Unless this amendment is provided, the league says, there will be no guard against the use of positions under the social insurance board for political patronage.

A letter has been sent to Senator Wagner by H. Eliot Kaplan, secretary of the league, pointing out that the bill, as introduced in the Senate, authorizes the board, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, to appoint and fix salaries of "such officers, attorneys and experts as may be necessary" without regard to the United States Civil Service act.

The league points out that similar provisions in the past have led to the appointment of clerks with political backing "who were given glorified titles to escape the requirements and competitive examination under civil service law."

The statement quotes the report issued January 17 by the President's Committee on Economic Security which named as one of the conditions vital to the success of any system of unemployment insurance, "selection of personnel on a merit basis."

"Long experience has proved that the only means of insuring selection of personnel on a merit basis is through strict adherence to the civil service law," the letter to Senator Wagner states.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Jesse and Harry.

A CONCLUSION that must be inescapable to those who follow the New Deal's activities is that the administrators of the down-trodden come much higher than the administrators of the vested interests. It is a paradox, although it may be the turn-over in values which the New Dealers have been trying to make us accept.

BARGERON.

We have the two opposite schools of administrators in Jesse Jones' RFC and Harry Hopkins' FERA. They are so different, the two schools and the philosophies of Jones and Hopkins, that one sometimes thinks they were set up by the Administration in order that we might take our choice, that in these topsy-turvy days of breaking from the past, we may study first one and then the other and come finally to settle upon either an underdog Administration or one for the vested interests.

• • • •

Jesse's RFC is for the purpose of helping banks, railroads, insurance companies and corporations, of course. Its sponsors, the previous Administration, contended that this assistance would trickle down to the under dog, that it was primarily for him, in fact. The New Dealers treat this contention with utter scorn. They accept the RFC, they have even greatly enlarged its activities, but not on the theory that it is a great help to the under dog.

To help him, they have particularly, Harry Hopkins. His heart beats for the downtrodden. He would rather feed the people than the vested interests anytime. His enthusiasm in helping them knows no bounds.

But it has been charged that Harry's administration was quite expensive, that in some instances his overhead was as high as 40 per cent. He immediately investigated the charges, agreed they were outrageous if true. It is not known how the matter ever came out.

What is important is that Harry said at the time that the cost of administration should be no more than 12 or 15 per cent.

• • • •

Compare the 12 or 15 per cent then with the cost of administering to the vested interests as just revealed in Jesse's report. Aside from the money which he has had to give to other governmental agencies, and, considering solely the RFC's commercial activities, or assistance to the vested interests, the cost of administration has been 43-100 of 1 per cent of the total amount disbursed.

It readily appears as which of the two groups, the downtrodden or the vested interests, it is cheaper to administer.

This seems all the more strange when one considers the nature of the work.

• • • •

From the enthusiasm of the under dog administrators, the blitheness with which Harry dismisses anyone who questions his expenditures, the gay way in which he says "Hunger is not debatable," one would think that administering to the under dog is a work of love that should cost hardly anything at all.

No one has ever attributed any romance to the business of helping the vested interests. Not once since he has been around here has Jesse beat his breast. He has gone ahead administering day after day. His unpublicized administering comes much cheaper, to say the least.

• • • •

There is the point also of whether Jesse's disbursements trickled down to the under dog. There have been virtually $4,000,000,000 of them. The Brain Trusters and experimenters would probably not admit they have trickled down at all.

But one thing is very sure. They have trickled back, exactly 51 per cent of the total put out. Jesse and the RFC must be very lonesome around here. They are unique and in a class by themselves.

Baptist Pastor Takes Race Relations Post

The Rev. W. H. Jernagin, pastor of Mount Carmel Baptist Church, announced yesterday his acceptance of the chairmanship of the department of race relations of the Federal Council of Churches, to which he was elected recently by the council's executive committee.

He is one of the directors of the National Baptist Convention, a corporation, and president of the Baptist Sunday School and Young Peoples Congress of America.

"This is the road back all right. Here's that man we ran over this morning!"

No End Of Books

Nine-Pins On The Diplomatic Olympus; Queer Ways Of A Stranger; Legal Scalpel At Work.

By Theodore Hall.

VERY little remains to be said, after Mr. Waltman's terse and informed review on yesterday's book page, about Drew Pearson's and Constantine Browns "The American Diplomatic Game." But I want to put in my oar in praise of this dissection of the men, the stubbed toes, "dropped bricks," the headaches and pesky human baffles-ments which go to make up the extraordinary and plenipotentiary realm of diplomacy.

Last week a Frenchman, who had been freed after imprisonment on Devils Island for 26 years, went back to French Guiana in a huff. "What has pardon brought me?" he cried. "Am I favorably impressed by the changes which took place during my quarter century of exile? No! After six months in Europe, I depart forever. Oh, the profound, the illimitable stupidity of a human race which believes itself to be so superior!"

But that is too easy. Most of us have to stay, have to dig taxes out of our jeans and read what the papers can tell us of the nine-pin play on the diplomatic Olympus, and cultivate what gardens we can amid the rumbling and thunder and piplike squeaking which come down the slopes. Messrs. Pearson and Brown translate those sounds with all due irony. Yet their laughter and ours can be too wry, any day, month, or year now—as they say—when the bowling balls themselves get loose and come bouncing down among us, raising a brave commotion of draft cards, brass bands and gold stars.

After the historians have it all snuffed and sifted out that wars are caused by economic rivalries, you might, as a simple citizen ready to take an ax to some unknown neighbor who seems to be playing Hannibal's Elephant Charge in the apartment overhead, be ready to see that something bellicose lies behind the word "stranger."

Margaret Mary Wood goes over the term with magnifying glass and fine-toothed comb in the learned pages of "The Stranger: A Study in Social Relationships" (Columbia U. Press, $4.50). From the primitive times when a stranger was welcomed at the hearth because—first whiff of William Jame's "Will to Believe"—he might be a god in disguise, down to our civilized present in which a Londoner won't tell you the way to St. Paul's without an introduction, Miss Wood enlivens and clarifies the various conceptions of the stranger.

For a studious, academic book, it is refreshingly close to people as we know them. Any scholarly disquisition can furnish pages of solid argument. Miss Wood, though, lights up subject, text, and point in hand with such an anecdote as that of the young stranger who came into a country store and ventured affably to remark to the assembled farmers: "Looks a little like rain."

There was no response until one farmer spoke up: "What may your name be?"

"James Hammond. My grandfather used to live just a mile up the road."

"Oh, Bill Hammond! Ye-es, it does look a little like rain."

Edwin S. Corwin's "The Twilight of the Supreme Court" (Yale U. Press, $2.50) is a legalistic, close-reasoned book to bulwark the emotional notion of any reader who feels that the Constitution is made for us, not we for the Constitution.

Professor of jurisprudence at Princeton, Prof. Corwin gave these lectures at the Yale Law School. He traces in best Blackstone fashion the history of our constitutional theories from the days of the conflict between Hamilton's strong nationalism and Madison's "dual federalism (won, by the former), through the Supreme Court's growing protection of the property-rights concept after the Civil War, down to the court's present position of being "morally answerable for the safety and welfare of the Nation to an extent utterly without parallel in judicial annals, past or present."

He sees that the court has an almost complete freedom of choice to make or unmake the New Deal. But that responsibility can only be met wisely, he says, when it is remembered that there is no going back to Constitutional doctrines which were conceived with the idea in mind of putting the future in cold storage."

"To present-day economic and social conditions the doctrines alluded to have little, if any, relevance for a community which intends to remain democratic, and if 'realities must dominate the judgment,' as the court says they must, the outlook for such doctrines is not bright. 'Back to the Constitution?' The first requirement of the Constitution of a progressive society is that it keep pace with that society."

These rather aloof, juridical statements do not make easy reading for laymen. Lawyers and their ilk, though, should find them stimulating, and judge them—in the time-honored sublunar way—by that combination of chromosomes and early memories which produce emotions, and best-bench opinions as well.

Power Union Threatens Strike in Terre Haute

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Brotherhood of Utility Employes at its national offices here said today that unless the Public Service Co. of Indiana signs a contract with employes by Tuesday noon, a strike will be called for Thursday morning in four power stations in the Terre Haute district.

Thomas O'Shaughnessy, secretary-treasurer of the brotherhood, charged the company with failing to carry out its part of an agreement, made in November, to conclude negotiations within 60 days.

Ickes to Be Honored By Civic Association

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes is to be guest of honor at a planning dinner to be given by Frederic A. Delano, president, and members of the executive board of the American Civic Association at the Cosmos Club, January 28, at 7:30 p. m.

Others serving on the board, chairmen of the planning districts and members of the advisory committee, of which Mr. Delano is chairman, also will attend.

Filipinos to Complete A Charter This Week

Manila, Jan. 20 (AP).—After six months of toil, leaders of the Philippine Constitutional Convention said tonight they expected to complete a proposed charter for the transitional Commonwealth government this week.

This charter, which will serve as the basic law of the Philippines for 10 years or more while the islands pass gradually from American possession and emerge as a republic, will be taken to Washington for President Roosevelt's approval.

Cornell's Shakespeare

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

(Part 1)

AS THE first appearance of Katharine Cornell in Shakespeare is an event of national importance, I make no apologies for writing three successive daily essays on this subject, for I believe that owing to her tour from coast to coast there are people in every State in the Union who take an acute interest in everything she does.

On Thursday night, December 20, I had the great pleasure of being present at what was probably the most important first night of the entire theatrical season; I mean Katharine Cornell and her fine company in Shakespear's "Romeo and Juliet," and may I remind my readers that Juliet in English is a word of two syllables, like Julius, Julian and Julia. Do not ever say Jul-i-et.

• • • •

Katharine Cornell has appeared in many plays, some of which are important and some quite otherwise. But she is at her best in two of the greatest love stories of the world—"Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett," and "Romeo and Juliet."

Although in Verona, Italy, I have stood by what is reverently shown as the tomb of Juliet, it is probable that the whole story is a work of the imagination. Shakespeare took it from well-known sources and produced it on the Elizabethan stage early in his career, perhaps earlier than has been thought. The famous Elizabethan scholar Prof. Tucker Brooke, of Yale, has recently called attention to the extraordinary manner in which the invitations for Capulet's dinner-dance are given out in the first act—I could not help laughing when I thought of it Thursday night. The invitations are taken out by a man servant who can not read, and he invites a few persons on his own hook, after getting Romeo to tell him whose names and addresses are on the invitations he is carrying. Shakespeare would not have done this in later plays. Had he just come up to London from Stratford, unacquainted with the world of fashion?

• • • •

But there is an even greater difference between this early tragedy of Shakespeare and a later one, "King Lear," "Romeo and Juliet" is a hard-luck story; had Juliet wakened a moment earlier, had Paris been able to stand off Romeo two minutes, had the letter not miscarried, there would have been no tragedy. They are well called in the text star-crossed lovers. In "King Lear" no circumstances could have saved the tragedy. It is inevitable in the characters and personalities.

In the great Bodleian Library at Oxford, England, we have some proof that "Romeo and Juliet" was more popular with readers than any other play by Shakespeare. The copy of the first folio edition, containing all the works of Shakespeare in one volume, was during the first 40 years after its publication in 1623 chained to the desk, so that people could read it but could not carry it away. "Romeo and Juliet" showed more wear and tear than any other play, and the pages containing the balcony scene have been torn almost to pieces by the thousands of readers.

Post Dwelling Draws Crowds

Weather Fails to Interrupt Stream of Visitors to Model Home.

Inspection of the newest Washington Post model home, the first exhibit dwelling introduced by The Post for 1935, has not been interrupted by the recent weather. Each day finds delighted visitors being escorted through this attractive residence.

The home directs attention to the latest group of houses constructed by B. H. Gruver, a Washington builder with years of experience. The model home which is a unit of this group, is located at 2454 Thirty-ninth street northwest, in the select Glover Park section.

The display house is furnished by the Hecht Co. and equipped with modern gas appliances by the Washington Gas Light Co. To visit it, drive out Wisconsin avenue to Calvert street, then turn left to Thirty-ninth street and the dwellings.

All of the homes are 20 feet wide and of all-brick construction. They contain eight rooms, two baths and recreation room. The presentation house will be open to visitors each day until 9 p. m. The homes are ideally situated at a point only 10 minutes' drive from Dupont circle.

Religious Pageant Held At Asbury M. E. Church

A religious pageant, "The Holy City," written and directed by Mrs. Edelia Williams, was presented last night at the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, with a cast of 115, representing Biblical characters, participating. The principal role, that of St. Peter, was taken by R. W. Bailey.

Under direction of R. W. Johnson, as a part of the pageant, "The Hallelujah Chorus" was sung by the choir of the church, with Clancy Delaney, bass, as guest soloist.

Legion Auxiliary Plans Program at Mt. Alto

A program of entertainment by radio performers of the National Broadcasting Co. will be provided disabled war veterans in Mount Alto Hospital at 7 p. m. today under auspices of the District American Legion Auxiliary.

Participating in the program will be Phillip Bruno, Lillian Conn, the Jolly Songsters Quartet, Lewis Brown and band, Marion Meitzler, the Casio Orchestra, Les Williams and Charles Kohen, who will be master of ceremonies.

Briton Urges Attack On Internal Problems

Strakosch Believes World Recovery Dependent On Domestic Stabilization.

By Elliott Thurston.

FOR those whose vision of recovery extends beyond national boundaries, the views of a distinguished British banker and economist, Sir Henry Strakosch, as set forth in an all too brief book, "The Road to Recovery," are particularly valuable at this time. This book, or pamphlet, is being published simultaneously in England by The Economist and in the United States by Economic Forum.

In brief, the opinion advanced is that until internal equilibrium is achieved in the major countries it is idle to talk about restoration of an international gold standard. Thus, the writer considers the most important object of policy to be domestic stability as the indispensable prelude to world stability. He thinks the gold bloc countries must revalue their currencies. He implies that the United States should quickly come to decisions which, it is apparent, have not yet been taken, assuming that the problems at stake have been fully realized. He holds the orthodox view that no real or lasting recovery can be brought about by domestic action alone—that policy must necessarily look to world cooperation in order to produce world recovery.

The implications, for the New Deal, are and have long been evident. As long as the New Deal concentrates on price raising, on cutting down production in agriculture and industry for the ostensible purpose of raising prices, as long as monetary policy remains a mystery and the budget is out of control, there can be no stability at home, let alone in the world. There have been numerous evidences that the New Deal is beginning to realize that stability is more important than prices—that the time has come when resort to more expedients, in NRA, the AAA or by monetary manipulation, to force up prices artificially should be abandoned. It is not known whether the New Deal is still dominated by the "nationalists" or the "internationalists," or whether it is still playing one side off against the other.

OLD as the theme of recovery by world cooperation instead of by hermit policy is, it is again well stated by Sir Henry, who adds to the obvious logic a practical demonstration that since the depression became world-wide, those nations which have stabilized their internal economy, after devaluation of their currencies had broken the deflationary cycle, have come the furthest along the road to recovery. He presents the facts and figures to show that the gold bloc countries, still beset by deflationary forces, are still in a downward spiral while the so-called sterling area countries have been moving upward.

"The myth that any country," he writes, "however well endowed with natural riches, can make herself self-sufficient without debasing the standard of life of her people a long way below the limit which any civilized community will permanently accept, should by now have been swept away by the experience of the last few years. That experience can leave no country in any doubt that it is indispensable for the attainment of a full measure of social contentment to create conditions in which international economic intercourse can be resumed on a scale comparable to that to which the world had adjusted itself before the depression.

"The reestablishment of an international monetary system is, without doubt, the most potent instrument for such restoration; for the process of maintaining the exchanges stable imposes a discipline which is probably unattainable without the compelling force of such a system."

He dismisses as unworkable a managed international paper standard. He is convinced, as are most students of the question, that the world must go back to a modernized gold standard, and that the devaluation of currencies in gold has so vastly added to the gold stocks that a permanent return to gold is both possible and essential. However, he makes clear, this can not be done while prices are falling or under pressure in the gold bloc, and while others, including the United States, are driving prices up by artificial devices. This is, of course, the opposite of policy to achieve stability. Similarly, he agrees with the most representative thought throughout the world, that the war debts must be cleared away, that tariff and other strangulations of international commerce must be remedied.

HE appears to be of the opinion that a world economic conference could be profitably resumed. "The outlook," he emphasized, "of the countries of the sterling area and of the United States of America in regard to the ultimate aim of monetary policy does not seem to differ in essentials, judging by the statements repeatedly made by leading American statesmen. They perceive, as we do, the dangers to the economic and social structure of violent changes in the purchasing power of money and the social injustices it inflicts. They are aiming, in the first place, at restoring internal equilibrium • • •

"If, then, agreement were reached with the United States of America on this common policy, the battle against instability would be almost won, for the combined influence of this group of countries on the world's monetary affairs is immensely powerful, not only because it commands more than one-half of the world's total production, but also because the group would have among its members the world's two greatest creditor countries — the United States of America and Great Britain.

"Disaster or recovery? The one or the other is probably nearer at hand in many lands than may appear on the surface—and the dividing line between them is a thin one. If disaster is to be avoided, the central problem of recovery must be attacked promptly, courageously and squarely, by sound economic reasoning free from political or intellectual bias. If this problem is so attacked, its solution is within the grasp of most of the countries who are still in the worst grips of the depression. Then, and then only, will come the dawn of real world recovery, and, with it, a resumption of that increasing measure of prosperity which the march of civilization has given mankind the right to expect."

Presumably the New Deal shares this conception. If so, action must be suited to it. Stability and restoration of a natural equilibrium at home must be its objectives instead of more dollar jugglery, more codes to fix and force up prices more crop curtailment or more of anything that serves only to intensify and perpetuate the very dislocations which caused and continue the depression.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

General Johnson's "Raven."

("General Johnson says the Blue Eagle is dying."—News item.)

Open wide I flung the shutter, when with wings devoid of flutter,
In there limped my friend the Eagle,
of the rescue days of yore;
Not the least obeisance made he, not a minute stopped or stayed he,
But, as if he mourned a lady perched above my chamber door—
Perched upon a bust of NIRA, just above my chamber door—
Perched and groaned and nothing more.

Then this bird once so beguiling that had kept the people smiling
By the optimistic manner and the countenance he wore,
Shook his head in manner sickly, as if needing help and quickly;
And I muttered rather thickly;
"Eagle what's this visit for?"
And he answered: "I am weary and my battered body's sore—"
Only that, and nothing more.

There the Eagle, looking lonely,
Seemed to wish that I would only
Say a word of simple kindness,
Such as he had known before;
Nothing further then he uttered—
Not a feather then he fluttered,
As I scarcely more than muttered:
"Carry on as if to war!
Donald Richberg he is with you;
You have loyal friends galore!"
But the bird croaked, "Nevermore!"

Startled at the stillness broken by
Reply so sadly spoken,
I cried, "Birdie, do your stuff, for I
Would hear the eagle roar;
Strut the way I know you're able
As you did upon the label—
As you did within the window of
The office, shop and store!"
But the old bird looked defeated,
Looked defeated to the core,
As he murmured, "Nevermore!"

"Eagle," cried I, "what's the trouble?
Have they crossed you, crossed you double?
Since I left you what's befallen
That your tears in torrents pour?
Has this Richberg thrown you over?
Are you through with fields of clover?
Are you now a squab or plover?
Tell me truly, I implore!
Doesn't Franklin give you succor?
Tell me, sucker, I implore!"
Quote the Blue One, "Nevermore!"

"Cheer up, Bird of Blue," I shouted, as my desk I slammed and clouted,
"You are still a mighty symbol, and you've simply got to stick;
Say your spirit isn't busted, you in whom I always trusted,
Do not leave me so disgusted; you have still a mighty kick—
You're the leader of a program that has simply got to click"—
But he answered: "Boy, I'm sick!"

Morgenthau Gains In Bootlegger War

Mellott Says Enforcement Merger Aids Cause.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Morgenthau—a Treasury official reported yesterday—is making good on his promise to "lick the bootlegger."

Arthur J. Mellott, deputy Commissioner of Internal revenue in charge of the alcohol tax unit, said statistics showed liquor law violators were having a hard time since all enforcement agencies were unified under one head.

The merger is under the direction of Morgenthau. Mellott reported the 4,000-odd workers of the unit have been responsible for the arrest of more than 30,000 persons since repeal and that there has been a high percentage of convictions.

Secretary Morgenthau premised at the time he took charge of the enforcement personnel to "either lick the bootlegger or resign from office."

Gay Round of Parties for Members of the Younger Set Still Continues

Miss Bette Hartz and Mr. Don Ruble pause for a smoke and a bit of conversation between dances.

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Margaret McMullen and Mr. Farley Smith snapped at one of the small tables at the edge of the dance floor, sitting out a dance and discussing Washington, which is new to Mr. Smith, as he joined his parents, Senator and Mrs. Ellison Smith, here only last week.

Miss Margaret Speir and Mr. John S. Nicoll, who were snapped while dancing to the strains of a popular tune.

De Laboulayes, Embassy Staff Entertain at Tea

Sunday Musical Program Also Given by French Envoy and Wife.

The French Embassy was the scene of a delightful party yesterday afternoon, when the Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye entertained at a tea and musicale.

Tea was served at 5 o'clock in the handsome dining room in which pink roses were artistically and simply arranged. The Ambassador and his charming wife received at the head of the stairs. Mme. de Laboulaye was wearing a black taffeta tunic embroidered with silver discs and a black velvet skirt. Their two young daughters mingled with the guests. Mlle Marie Therese wore a frock of nile green crepe fashioned along simple lines with slightly puffed sleeves. Her younger sister, Mlle. Agnes, had on a frock of pink and white printed silk also made with full sleeves.

Following tea, the guests went into the drawing room, whose walls of gold brocade and green drapery made an excellent setting for the program of music given by Mlle. Madeleine Monnier, violocelliste, who was accompanied at the piano by M. C. Bernier. Mlle Monnier delighted the gathered friends of the Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye with her selections, many of which were sprightly little pieces so typical of the French music. The young artist was wearing a frock of rose and pearl gray chiffon.

At the end of the program, little Master Dominique de Leusse, young son of Count and Countess de Leusse, clad in a dark blue serge sailor suit, presented Mlle. Monnier with a huge bouquet of crimson roses tied with wide satin ribbons of the French colors.

The ladies of the Embassy staff assisted the hostess. Mme. Saint wore a gown of pale gray crepe with which she wore a smart black hat and accessories. Mme Lombard, wife of the military attache, had on a black frock, small close fitting black hat and a silver fox scarf.

Others glimpsed there were Frau Leitner, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy, who was attired in black. Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton had on a gown of brown with which she wore matching hat and accessories. Admiral Mark Bristol was accompanied by Mrs. Bristol who was costumed in brown with a handsome mink scarf. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, the latter wearing black with a smart little turban, and Representative Sol. Bloom.

University Women Plan Friday Dinner

Secretary Perkins to Address Gathering at Y. W. C. A.

The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women will give a dinner Friday at 7 o'clock at Barclay Hall, auditorium of the Y. W. C. A., at Seventeenth and K streets. The guest of honor and speaker will be the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins. Her topic will be "Economic Security." Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, president of the Washington branch, will preside, and Judge Fay Bentley will introduce Miss Perkins. Reservations will be open to guests sponsored by members after the 19th.

Dennis Lewises Give Sunday Night Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Lewis entertained at dinner last evening in their apartment at the Westchester.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Dickensen, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Curry, Mr. and Mrs. William Barnhart, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Houck, Miss Hazel Minnix, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, Mrs. Lee Barry, Mrs. John Butler, of New York; Miss Hildegarde Gray, Mr. Edward Chamberland, Mr. Harvey Perkins, Mr. Charles McDaniels, Mr. John Chapplear, and Mr. Leonard Lyon.

Guthrie - Jones Tea at Ayrlawn

Mrs. Hugh Barclay Is in Receiving Line With the Hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. William Marion Guthrie and Mrs. Catherine Letts Jones entertained at tea yesterday afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock in Ayrlawn, their home on Ellicott street.

The drawing and dining rooms were decorated with early spring flowers in the pastel shades and pink carnations and Buddleia were arranged on the tea table.

Receiving with the hosts was Mrs. Hugh Barclay, in whose wedding Mrs. Jones was one of the bridesmaids.

Mr. and Mrs. Barclay, who make their home in New York, are in Washington for a brief visit and are at the Mayflower Hotel. Mr. Barclay was formerly military attache in Rio de Janerio, and so they have a great number of friends in the diplomatic and official as well as residential circles of the Capital.

Among those who alternated at the tea table and assisted were Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Mrs. Richard Hughes, Mrs. Frank Mondell, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. William Thornwall Davis, Mrs. Edward A. Keys, Mrs. William E. Pearson, Mrs. William Hinton Holloway and Mrs. Frederick Ward.

Diplomatic Corps Aiding Opera Plans

Lady Lindsay Heads List of Patrons for "La Traviata."

Lady Lindsay, wife of the Ambassador of Great Britain, heads the large group of members of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington which has shown warm cooperative interest in Max Rabinoff's plan to bring the Cosmopolitan Opera Association of New York to Washington Tuesday evening, January 29, at 8:30 o'clock, in a complete operatic production of Verdi's "La Traviata" at Constitution Hall.

Among the diplomats who are patrons and patronesses for this performance, in addition to Lady Lindsay, are the Italian Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso, the Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil, the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, the Austrian Minister and Mme. Procknick, the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles Davila; Mme. Ricardo Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama, and Mr. Faik Konitza, Minister from Albania.

The official members of the primary Washington committee, which has Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt as honorary chairman, are: Mrs. James A. Moffett, Mr. Raymond Baker, Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mr. George L. Schein and Mr. Leland Harrison. Mrs. James E. Hughes, chairman on arragenments, also is a member of the original committee.

Nelms - Pearson Wedding Held At Heathsville

Relatives and Few Friends Attend Simple Ceremony at Smith Home.

Westlawn, the home of Judge and Mrs. E. Hughes Smith, of Heathsville, Va., was the scene of a quiet wedding on Saturday when Miss Katharine Rebecca Nelms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Nelms, of Heathsville, was married to Mr. Ollie C. Pearson, of Falls Church, Va. The ceremony was performed at high noon before an altar of evergreens and cut flowers, lighted with tall ivory tapers. Pines and candles were used as decorations throughout the entire house.

The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. D. Campbell Loving, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church of Heathsville, in the presence of close relatives and a few intimate friends.

The bride descended the stairs on the arm of her brother-in-law, Judge Smith, by whom she was given in marriage. She was dressed in white lace, cut on princess lines, with a deep yoke and duchess collar. Her hat was of matching lace. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Dr. Constance O. Haller, of Wytheville, Va., attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore emerald green velvet and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses. Master Hugh Smith Haynie, of Reedville, Va., a cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mr. Vernon Pearson, of Clarendon, attended his uncle as best man.

A wedding breakfast was served following the ceremony. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Nelms, Miss Irene Presley Nelms, Miss Genevieve DeSales Smith, and Judge and Mrs. E. Hughes Smith, all of Heathsville; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence M. Sale, of Falls Church, Va.; Dr. Constance O. Haller, of Wytheville; Mr. and Mrs. George Brown and Mr. V. C. Brown, of White Stone, Va.; Mrs. R. H. Blundon, of Burgess Store, Va.; Mrs. L. B. Rawlings and Hugh Smith Hayney, of Reedville, Va.; Mr. J. Snowden Hudnall, of Ophelia, Va.; the Rev. and Mrs. D. C. Loving, of Fleeton, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Pearson, of Clarendon, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson left later on a wedding trip, the bride wearing a frock of rough crepe in a deep rust color, with seal coat, black hat and accessories. They will make their home in Falls Church, where the bridegroom is in business.

Visiting Student Honored At Tea Given by Aunt

Mrs. John T. Schrott and Mrs. Walter E. Eliff entertained at tea yesterday afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock in the former's home in honor of her niece, Miss Elsie Jean Fitton, of Seattle, Wash., who as a member of the University of Washington Y. W. C. A., was sent to New York to attend the students national executive committee meeting of the Y. W. C. A.

Miss Fitton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Fitton, of Seattle, who formerly made their home in Washington. She will remain in the Capital for an indefinite visit with Mrs. Schrott, before returning to New York to spend some time with her uncle, Dr. Roger Winter.

Miss Mary F. Johnston To Wed F. B. Poe, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Johnston, of Bedford, Ind., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Frances Johnston, to Mr. Francis Bennett Poe, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Poe, of Washington.

The wedding will take place in the near future.

Smart Gowns Feature Gay Party Given at Pilgrim Club Friday

Miss Bette Hartz, Miss Margaret McMullen and Miss Margaret Speir Present at Informal Gathering.

Even though the younger set's so-called "season" is supposed to be over with the last of the holidays, calendars and engagement books are still well marked up with teas, luncheons and dinners, and on evenings when there is no special party already scheduled, debutantes, subdebutantes and their escorts select one of their favorite haunts and descend upon it en masse.

Friday evening just such a party took place within the unique rough-hewn log walls of the Pilgrim Club. Among those seen there were Miss Bette Hartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barge L. Hartz, who will be one of next year's debutantes, and Mr. Donald Ruble, of Berkeley, Calif. Miss Hartz had on a frock of ice-blue satin made with a slightly flaring skirt which was corded and stitched about the bottom and along the slit. To complete her costume she wore an unusual cape of dark blue crystal fringe.

Miss Margaret McMullen was dancing with Mr. Farley Smith, who is a newcomer to the Capital, although his parents, Senator and Mrs. Ellison Smith, of South Carolina, have made their home here for some time. Miss McMullen was attired in smart black crepe with loose-fold sleeve lines with gold and the neckline marked with gold clips.

Miss Margaret Speir, glimpsed with Mr. John Nicoll, was attired in soft green crepe made on flaring lines and with the bateau neckline and cape sleeves traced with bugle beads. Miss Betsy Simpson and Mr. Charles Beale were chatting over their demitasses. Miss Simpson had on a smart tailored dinner gown of bright light blue rough crepe.

Fort Myer Exhibitions Continue to March 1

The exhibition drills presented by the officers and enlisted men of the Third Cavalry and Sixteenth Field Artillery in the new riding hall at Fort Myer, Va., on Friday afternoons at 2:50 o'clock will be continued until March 1, inclusive.

Col. Kenyon Joyce, commanding officer at Fort Myer, stated that the exhibition drills are free to the public, but that, as all seats are reserved and in great demand, reservations for tickets must be made.

Town Chatter

Who's Where—and Why, Around the Capital.

Another departure from the ubiquitous cocktail was the excellent port served at a tea given by the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff (or Petrova, if you go in for Slavonic languages). Only those of us who feared the soporific effect of that British favorite took tea in preference. Anent tea, Per Wijkman, of the Swedish Legation, is thinking of inviting friends to drink tea and nothing but tea, and then count the percentage of refusals and acceptances. He may be surprised at the great number who descend upon him.

While on the subject of the Petroffs, it seems that Mlle. Petrova, the sister of Mr. Petroff, went to England expecting to spend three weeks and remained for three years; we only hope she will repeat this quaint habit now that she is in our midst.

Chief Justice Hughes is wearing a smile even more benign than usual these days. We surmise it is due to the fact that he has a granddaughter about 4 months old, the infant of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gosset, of New York, the latter being the former Elizabeth Hughes. He is unlike that gentleman who resented being termed a grandfather and always avoided use of the word grandchild by referring to his "little kinsman."

Politics Students Hear Miss Richards Today

Miss Janet Richards has returned to Washington from New York, where she lectured Friday before the League for Political Education at Town Hall on "The Revised Policies of the New Deal."

At her weekly review of public questions this morning at 11 o'clock at the Willard, Miss Richards will analyze "The Puzzles and Perplexities of Affairs Political Both Here and Abroad." Her talks are clarified by the use of maps.

Republican Women To Hear Mr. Snyder

Buffet Lunch to Follow Talk on New Bills.

The League of Republican Women will meet Friday at 11 o'clock at the league's headquarters to hear Mr. Peter Snyder speak. His subject will be "New Bills in Congress." Mrs. Peter Snyder is in charge of the educational forum. Mrs. Virginia White Speel will preside and will introduce the speaker. A buffet luncheon will follow the meeting, Mrs. J. H. Branson acting as hostess.

The class in parliamentary law will meet Wednesday, January 23, at 10 o'clock, instead of 10:30, the usual time.

The league will give a card party at the Mayflower Hotel, Monday, January 28, at 2:30 o'clock.

Shop Is Found That Offers $1 Permanents

F Street Store Features Low-Priced Eyelet Batiste Frocks.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

DUE TO REPEATED demands from readers who have asked where they could get good permanent waves for as little as $5 each, an investigation was conducted by this department.

The result was the discovery of a small shop on the fourth floor of an F street building. The proprietor is from Vienna. He once studied mining engineering but later changed his pursuits to chemistry and hairdressing. In the Austrian capital he was highly successful with the unusual coiffures he arranged for people of note. Finally, however, succumbing to the lure of America, he came to Washington and established a shop.

His speciality is permanent waving, and suffice it to say, there is nothing he doesn't know about the art. He gives permanents for as little as a dollar, and makes a top-notch price of $5.

His inexpensive waves are ideal for women whose summer permanents are beginning to show ragged edges. He can touch these up and give them a brand-new look. The $2.50 wave is a boon to those who wear their hair cut close and have to renew their permanents every few months. As for the $5 wave—it's a lovely thing. He curls it tight or loose, according to your desire, and makes every effort to give you a wave which suits your hair and your face.

Eyelet Batiste Frocks.

Many a wary shopper is seeing further than the snow flurries and gray clouds to the warm, lazy days a few months off. They realize that the sales on summer dresses enable them to buy advanced styles for several times less than they must pay later on.

A certain F street store, which prides itself on its new merchandise, is featuring some attractive eyelet batiste frocks in shirt-waist styles. They follow a new motif with their velvet trim. These dresses are available in sizes 14 to 20, in navy, brown, rust, flesh, blue, ochre and maize.

There are still other eyelet batiste dresses in similar styles and the same colors which come in sizes 38 to 44.

Inasmuch as these frocks are selling for only $2.95 it will pay you to remember that spring and summer will inevitably arrive and it will seem fine to greet them with a wardrobe already assembled.

Cleansing Cream Reduced.

A splendid cleansing cream which combines oatmeal with healing oils and unguents has been reduced to 95 cents in a large downtown store. The cream happens to be one of those steady sellers which are preferred by many to the fancier and more expensive creams.

It comes in an immense jar that holds enough—even though you use it in generous quantities—to last for at least a year.

Mascara In Small Containers.

A certain beauty authority, when interviewed on the problem of making up for both daytime and evening, said women should apply a little cream rouge and add to this when they braved the glare of electric lights with a pat or two of cake rouge.

Also she said it is advisable for a woman to carry her mascara in her purse so that she can darken her lashes at the appropriate time and not risk having them artificial looking in the daylight.

A local store meets a woman's need for mascara suited to her purse by displaying one not much larger than a lipstick that comes in a small, neat metal container. It weighs so little that it will in no way burden a crowded purse.

The mascara is a very good quality made on a cream base. This prevents it from making the lashes beaded.

Tuck-Stitch Knit Nighties.

Cold nights become a matter for little consideration to those who keep warm and snug in tuck-stitch knit nighties. These happily combine practical and decorative qualities. They wash well and wear long. At the same time they are attractively made and show how far we are advanced from the voluminous outing nightie stage.

Beer Mugs For 10 Cents.

While there are many who prefer their beer from thin, long glasses, there are still those who like it best from a typical beer mug. For these there is a sale in an F street store where honest to goodness mugs are selling for 10 cents a piece.

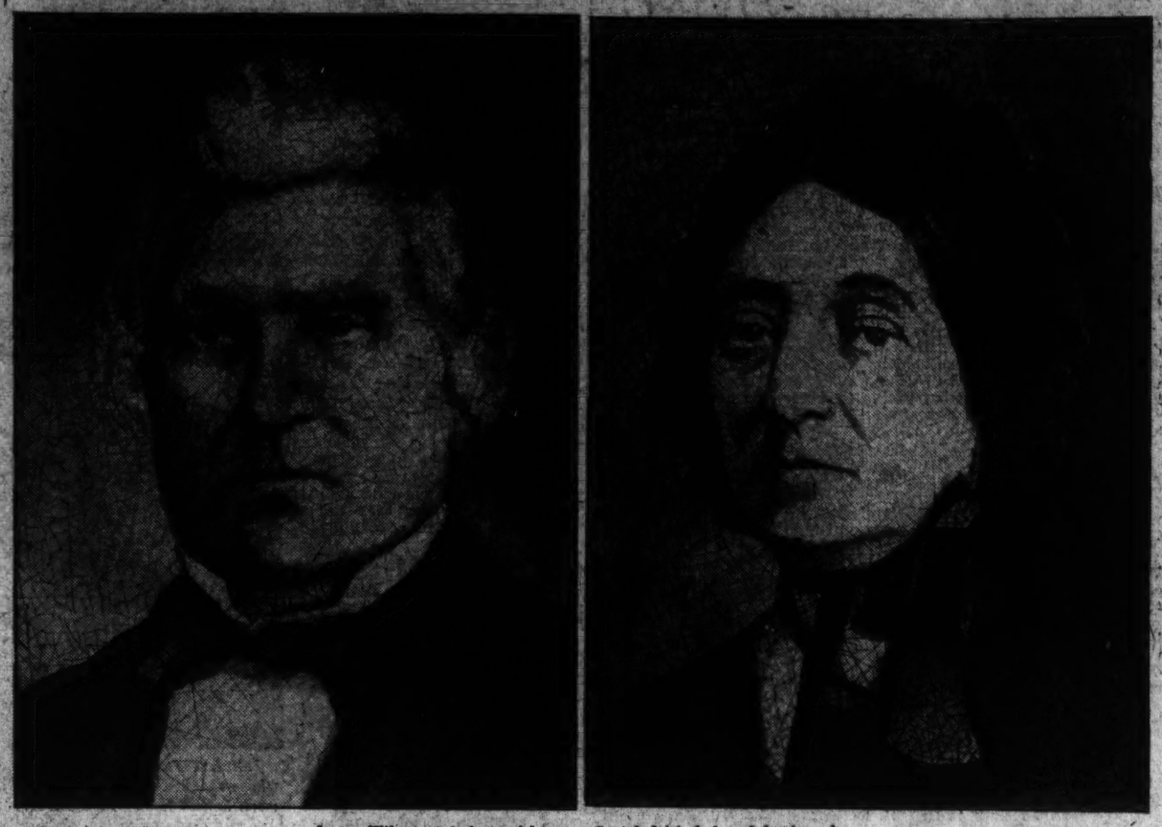
And here's a hint to the housewife. The mugs have wide tops, are hard to break and therefore make attractive and serviceable vases.

The same shop is showing large beer steins with pewter tops which have been reduced from $1 to 50 cents. These are covered with interesting and unusual figures and the majority of them are inscribed with German toasts.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

James Wilson—Anne Adams.



James Wilson and Anne Adams, a Scotch-Irish lad and lassie, who were to go down in history as the grandparents of Woodrow Wilson, met on board the ship that brought them to America. Their romance later blossomed in Philadelphia, where Wilson had a printshop and newspaper. Following their marriage in 1808 they emigrated to Ohio.

Grandparents of Woodrow Wilson Met on Boat on Way to America.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

IT IS NO MERE matter of coincidence that so many notable Americans have been able to say they were of Scotch-Irish lineage. The contribution of the Scotch-Irish toward the upbuilding of the United States was by no means an inconsiderable one as a cursory glance into the history of the Nation can demonstrate.

In the matter of Presidents, the Scotch-Irish have furnished more than its share. Second only to the English strain, six Presidents—Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Arthur, McKinley and Wilson—bore proudly the appellation of Scotch-Irish while two others, Monroe, and Hayes called themselves Scots.

Once Woodrow Wilson, grandson of the subjects of this half-forgotten romance of American history, remarked: "The stern Covenanter tradition that is behind me sends many an echo down the years." And it was Theodore Roosevelt who, with characteristic aptness of phraseology, called the Scotch-Irish pioneers in this country "a shield of sinewy men, thrust in between the people of the seaboard and the red warriors of the wilderness." And continuing in the same strain the first President Roosevelt further declared:

"Full credit has been awarded the Round Head and the Cavalier for their leadership in our history; nor have we been altogether blind to the deeds of the Hollander and the Huguenot; but it is doubtful if we have wholly realized the importance of the part played by that stern and virile people, the Irish, whose preachers taught the creed of Knox and Calvin. These Irish representatives of the Covenanters were in the West almost what the Puritans were in the Northeast and more than the Cavaliers were in the South."

Call of America Heard.

As the vision of human liberty unfolded in the Western World it was natural that men and women in war-worn Europe should glimpse across the seas the dawn of freedom in the new republic that valiant men and true had wrought out of what were English colonies. The call of America was heard by many Scotch-Irish exiled for their faith from their native Scotia.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century there was a lad in his teens in Ulster, Ireland, of this same sturdy Scotch-Irish blood in whose ears the echoes from the New World were heard. His name was James Wilson and little is known even of his immediate family. Tradition says he was an only child, at least the most exhaustive research failed to find any trace of brothers or sisters.

In the year 1807 James boarded a sailing vessel en route for America. Little did that Scotch-Irish boy dream that his grandson would become the apostle of world peace and evangel of a new League of Nations.

Romance rode with him across the bounding main. On the same vessel with him and his mother was a bonny Scotch-Irish lassie, also from Ulster. Her name was Anne Adams. It is but natural to surmise that the long days on the ocean ripened their acquaintance into something stronger than mere friendship.

Marriage Performed in 1808.

Philadelphia was the first American port of call for Wilson. It was not long before he had obtained a post as printer in the shop where Benjamin Franklin had once made his home and where the newspaper Aurora was being published.

Anne Adams must have established herself with her parents in Philadelphia also. Her romance with Wilson must have continued, too, for on November 1, 1808, members of the congregation of the Fourth Presbyterian Church in that town assembled to witness the marriage of the couple by the Rev. George C. Potts, the pastor. Ray Stannard Baker, biographer of President Wilson, has described Miss Adams as follows:

"Family tradition gives assurance of the strong character and determined will of Anne Adams. She was large-featured, with a long nose and a firm chin. In later years, her mouth, as her portrait shows, drooped dourly at the corners, and the tight-set lips and the direct and stern look of the heavy eyes indicate the obstinate strength of her character. She was a woman of strong likes and dislikes."

James Wilson Was Judge, Member of Legislature and Newspaperman.

Within five years after his arrival in Philadelphia Wilson had risen to have control of the Aurora. Perhaps he might have settled in Philadelphia had he not been possessed by the desire to push on to the very frontiers of civilization. By 1816 the Wilson family was in Steubenville, Ohio. Wilson went there, it is said, after an offer to edit its paper.

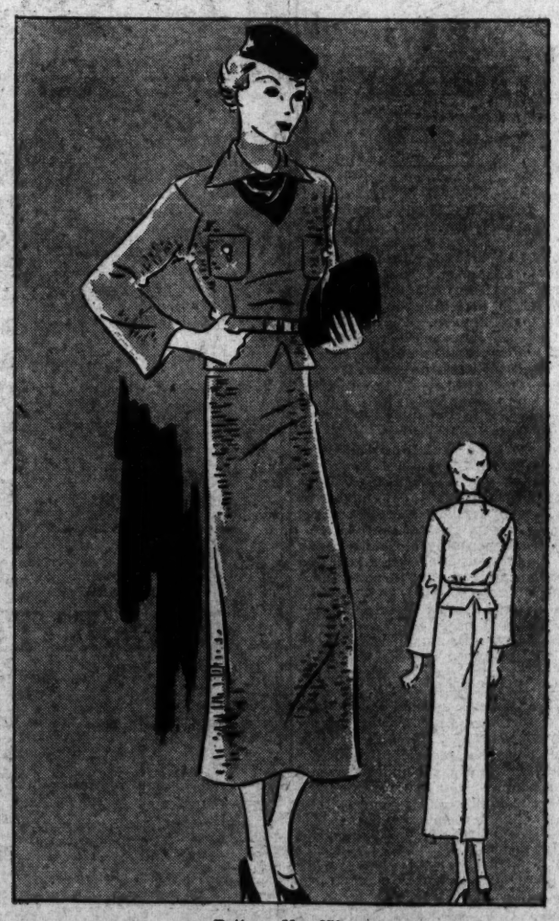
Became Common Pleas Judge.

In such a new country there was opportunity, and before long James Wilson was representing his district in the Legislature and later became an associate judge of the Court of Common Pleas although not a lawyer, so Mr. Baker claims.

The Wilsons had seven sons and three daughters in 12 years. All of their children, including the triplets, gave good account of themselves in after years. Two of the boys, Henry and Edwin were generals in the Union Army during the Civil War, and Edwin, who studied law, afterward was adjutant general of Pennsylvania.

On February 28, 1822, their youngest son, Joseph Ruggles Wilson, was born at Steubenville, Ohio. History remembers that son, not alone for his own distinguishable career a scholar, cleric and civic leader but as the father of Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth President of the United States.

Two-Piece Dress Takes Less Than Seven Yards of Material



Pattern No. 850.

AND THIS two-piece dress takes less than four yards of silk, less than three yards of woolen! The blouse has those easy-to-set-in sleeves, a tiny peplum and a becomingly trim neckline. The skirt is very simple, with a center back seam.

A gay velveteen, a soft light-weight wool or a tie-silk print are excellent fabric choices. There is another version included in the pattern that you will want to use later in the season.

This pattern is accurately cut in sizes 14 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material or 2⅝ yards of 54-inch woolen.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Silicosis, or Stony Lungs.

SHAKESPEARE makes frequent mention of "stony" heart. For example, "My heart is turned to stone" and "Rough hearts of flint." Perhaps Shakespeare was not much of a pathologist, but his keen insight into medical affairs continues to astonish critics. Apparently "stony" lungs were unknown to this great author, as the phrase is not used in his writings. In arteriosclerosis of high degree lime is often deposited on the valve leaflets and in the lining of the heart.

Some people are unfortunate enough to have accumulations of stone in the lungs. This is not lime but fine particles of silica (silicon dioxide) that are inhaled as dust. Many ancient writers describe the condition and in 1577 Agricola wrote: "When the dust is very corrosive it ulcerates the lungs and produces consumption. Hence it is that in the Carpathian Mountains there are women who have married seven husbands, all of whom this dreadful disease has brought to an early grave." Bernardino Ramazzini, the first medical writer to describe diseases that occurred in certain occupations, records early in the eighteenth century the finding of gritty areas in the lungs of stone workers.

For many years the disease has been known as pneumoconiosis or miner's consumption, but recently the more accurate term silicosis has been adopted. Lanza and Vance, writing in the American Review of Tuberculosis, state that in the United States more than 500,000 workers are regularly exposed to silica dust in mining, quarrying, rock drilling, pottery manufacture and certain other industries.

Careful estimates have shown that a dust concentration in the air of more than 10,000,000 particles of silica per cubic foot is dangerous. In certain occupations, before protective devices were installed, as many as 92,000,000 particles per air unit were found.

The inhaled silica dust plugs the lymph spaces in the lungs. From the mechanical irritation of these particles inflammation is set up and nodules of fibrous tissue are formed. This process develops slowly but steadily and is sometimes detectable in the lungs by means of the X-ray long before symptoms become manifest.

Chicken Basis For Cold-Day Dinner for Six

Sweet Potatoes Lend Appetizing Flavor to Special Menu.

By Dorothea Duncan.

HERE IS a good idea for the family of six, a dinner to take care of six cold-weather appetites. Your market order will need something like this; one stewing chicken, 4 to 5 pounds; six medium-sized sweet potatoes, a half pint of thin cream; 2 pounds of green beans, one large eggplant, a bit of salt pork, six baking apples, a dozen ginger snaps and a jar of peanut butter.

Transformed, the foods will appear on your table as the following dishes:

Dinner Menu.

Smothered Chicken with Sweet Potatoes
Green Beans, Southern Style
Stuffed Eggplant
Bread and Butter
Peanut Butter Stuffed Apples
Milk

If your oven is large, all the dishes may be prepared in it at once and at the same temperature, but if it is too small, the chicken, apples and eggplant may take turn about and the beans can be just as readily prepared on the top of the stove.

Smothered Chicken

Dress and clean the chicken and split it down the back. Then cut the chicken apart into separate servings. Rub well with melted fat, dredge lightly with flour and place breast down on the rack of the broiling pan under the broiler. Brown thoroughly both sides of the chicken. Remove to a casserole which may be covered. Season with salt and pepper. Add one cup of sweet cream. Peel the six sweet potatoes, dip in melted butter and place around chicken. Cover the casserole closely and place in the oven which has been heated to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Cook the chicken until tender when pierced with a fork—about two hours.

During the first hour that the chicken cooks the other dishes may be made ready for the oven in the following manner:

Wash and cut the fresh green beans. Put in a casserole with a tight-fitting top. Add ¼ cup of boiling water. Season with 1 teaspoon salt and ½ pound of salt pork, cut in squares. Cover and place in the oven until tender.

Stuffed Eggplant.

Cut large eggplant in half, take out center and place in a saucepan. To the pulp add one-half medium-sized onion, sliced thin; 2 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper to taste, and ¼ cup of water. Cook on top of the stove 15 minutes. Mince the pulp with a fork and add ¼ cup of toasted bread crumbs. Mix well and return to the eggplant shell which has been soaked in salt water. Cover the top of each refilled half well with buttered crumbs and sprinkle with paprika. Place the two halves in a shallow pan and place in the oven during the last 20 minutes that finishes the cooking of the chicken.

Peanut Butter Stuffed Apples.

6 cooking apples.
¾ cup peanut butter
½ cup water
1 dozen ginger snaps, crumbled
½ cup sugar

Core the apples, and peel only one-third of the way down. Blend the ginger snap crumbs with the peanut butter and stuff the centers of the apples.

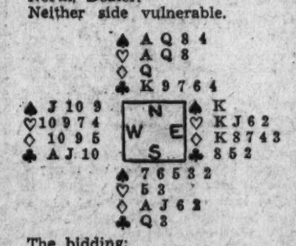
Simmer the sugar and water together for 5 minutes and pour over the apples. Bake covered in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until tender. Uncover to brown. The apples will take about 45 minutes to cook and the cover may be removed during the last 10 minutes of baking. Serve the apples hot with the sauce that is in the bottom of the pan.

Culbertson on Bridge

King of Beasts.

The bete noire of the bridge player is the singleton king held by opponent over the Ace-Queen. It may be guessed by the expert when the closed hand and dummy show great length in the suit or it may drop when declarer must use the safety play on the first round of the suit. It's a roaring as well as royal lion in any case.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1♣(1)	Pass
1♠(2)	Pass	3♠(3)	Pass
4♠(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—It is a close question whether to bid the black suits in the reverse order. One pade is certainly a good alternative.
2—A fragile suit, but to bid anything else would mean entire abandonment of the spades unless North were able to force on the second round.
3—Again a close question. The hand is really worth more than a single raise and less than a jump.
4—Responding to the call of duty.

West opened the ten of hearts, Dummy played the Queen of hearts and East won with the King. East returned a heart, Dummy winning with the Ace. The Queen of diamonds was led, East played small and South won with the Ace. South led a small trump and when West false-carded with the Jack, Dummy played the Queen. Now declarer was bound to go down one, losing two trumps, one heart and one club.

It must be recorded that declarer blamed himself for not having made the safety play of the trump Ace on the first round.

Let us look at the situation after the opening lead. The losers are one sure club, one probable heart and unknown number of trump losers. This as yet takes no account of the diamond suit. We have a choice of several lines of play. The first is to cash the Ace of diamonds and attempt to ruff out all the losing diamonds with Dummy's trumps. The second is to take the diamond finesse in the hope of having one less loser to ruff. The third is to try to establish some long clubs for the discard of losing diamonds. That is to say, we have a choice as to whether to establish the South or the North hand.

We decide against the first line of play except as a last resort because to use all of the Dummy's trumps under the Ace for ruffing diamonds, may lose too many trump tricks to make contract. On the other hand, the diamond finesse is not inviting since it may prove unnecessary. The best choice is the third line of play—the establishment of the dummy. It is important to observe that upon the fall of the club suit depends the decision on how to play the trumps.

On the first trick we lose the heart finesse and take the Ace on the second trick. But at the third trick we start the club at once with a small lead to the Queen. West is compelled to win and can do no better than to lead a third heart which South trumps. A club lead to the King and a small club back for South to ruff reveals the fortunate split. Now that Dummy is solid outside of trumps we can afford every correct safety play to minimize the trump loss. We therefore take the Ace of trumps on the first lead and when the King drops we concede one trick to West. Correct analysis thus produces the contract without difficulty.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST.

Irene Gardner, pretty young nurse, is madly in love with Dr. Bartlett Ralston, an interne with a promising future. She is stunned when he reluctantly informs her that they can't be married. He plans to work with a prominent surgeon, Dr. Stephen Reagan, and mentions that his opportunity would be enhanced if he married Reagan's daughter, Peggy.

Looking up at a plane flying overhead, Irene decides that it is the way out for her. It would be impossible to work in the same hospital with Bart, yet her nurse's training fits her for the job of air stewardess. She consults Dr. Williams, head of the hospital staff.

IMPRESSED by Irene's earnestness Dr. Williams finally advised her to telephone the air line and make an appointment at the airport. After she had gone he did some telephoning himself. Irene never suspected how many wires had been pulled to secure the customary 10 days' trial for her ahead of dozens of other applicants.

Yet that first flight was a disappointment. Unable to sleep the night before, she arrived at the airport apprehensive and nervous. San Francisco was blanketed in fog. She could scarcely see across the street, and buildings a block away might as well have been across the continent. The motor trip from the city even at low speed seemed far more hazardous than that in the airplane afterward.

Fear Was Momentary.

She knew a momentary sensation of fear as she saw the huge ship soaring aloft getting ready to land, but once inside, it was like riding in a bus or any other conveyance.

From the door of the plane another girl in a trim green uniform greeted her smilingly. She was directing passengers to their seats and folding coats which were tucked into racks above their heads. As the door slammed shut and the plane began to move, she went up and down the aisle with small packets of cotton for sensitive ears and pellets of gum for incipient air sickness.

Not at All Exciting.

The plane was now in the air, rapidly gathering both speed and altitude and the air hostess, whose name was Virginia Cathcart, was distributing magazines and newspapers. Then she collected the tickets, chatting with the passengers in a cheerful manner calculated to convince the skeptical that air travel was a casual and uneventful method of transportation.

Irene, keyed to an expectation of something more spectacular, felt a relief mingled with disappointment.

"There isn't any kick to this," she thought.

It was so much less exciting than the sight of that airplane had been. She didn't feel as if she were doing anything dangerous or unusual at all.

Trip Was Rough.

Her second trip, however, was different. Shortly after the plane left Sacramento on its way to Portland the cream-colored sea beneath them changed to storm-whipped clouds. The air hostess in charge strapped the passengers in their seats and brought pillows and sedatives. The plane was bucking headwinds which forced it up and down like a fractious horse. But there was no hint of alarm in the smiling poise of the green uniformed girl who moved briskly up and down the dipping aisle.

Irene's pocketbook bounced from her lap to the top of the plane.

"How do you feel?" the other nurse inquired, rescuing it. Irene grinned, "As if I'd like to get out and walk."

"It is a bit rough," the little air hostess admitted blithely.

Passengers Were Nervous.

Tilting her perky hat more firmly over one eye, she held the hand of the frightened old lady in the front seat, laughed at the fears of the profane gentleman in the third from the rear and managed at the same time to give Irene an occasional reassuring nod.

By this time a fog had set in. As the plane was piloted skillfully between the snow tipped peaks of the Cascades the stewardess confided that they were going to make an emergency landing.

"We never take unnecessary chances," she explained.

As the lights of the emergency landing field blinked up she busily computed refunds on tickets and issued checks to cover the untraveled mileage.

"Being an air hostess isn't as simple as it looks," Irene reflected.

When they had landed, the baying passengers went on to their various destinations, but the two nurses remained with the plane until the storm had abated.

Surmising that her companions were curious to know her reaction, Irene affected a nonchalance she was far from feeling. It really had been a nerve shattering experience but her hospital training helped her to conceal the evidences of it. Powdering her nose with a hand which shook, she managed to keep up her end of a conversation about everything under the sun but aviation, and she was rewarded as they ferried the ship to Portland several hours later.

Her First Thrill.

"Still going to be an air hostess?" the pilot teased.

She lifted a determined chin.

"Naturally!"

"Good kid!" he approved. "Lots of 'em change their minds after a trip like this."

But it was after that, on their way back to San Francisco, that she felt her first real thrill. Although it had been cloudy on land, within ten minutes they were flying in sunshine with the white fog billowing far below.

The co-pilot, stopping at her seat for a moment, explained that the top side of the clouds was always white no matter how dark they might appear from beneath.

"The light, unable to penetrate the clouds makes them look black from the earth, but it is that reflected light which gleams so brightly from above," he said.

Package Arrived.

Sitting in the rear of the plane Irene looked out and made the symbolic application. Far below were cities like crowded anthills with worried men creeping through miniature streets. If only they could soar above their troubles they might be free. For looking down upon difficulties like clouds made their brighter side visible. Flying unsupported through space gave one a godlike impersonality.

Such sublimity was temporary, of course! It couldn't keep her from turning quite white several hours later at sight of her name on the outside of an envelope addressed in Bartlett's handwriting. The letter was accompanied by the same small package she had mailed to him earlier in the week and both lay side by side on a table in the living room.

"Please keep this, dear!" Bart had written in the letter he sent with the returned ring. "Perhaps it is only vanity on my part, but I can't bear for you to forget entirely what to me shall always be a most precious memory."

Gave Ring to Betty.

"Words! Nothing but words!" Irene thought scornfully.

In a blind rage she crumpled the letter in her hand and looked up to see her younger sister.

"Aren't you going to open your package? It looked so exciting I could hardly wait for you to come home."

"It's only that old jade ring of mine," Irene replied indifferently.

"But it has Dr. Ralston's name on it," Betty cried, disappointed.

"I sent it back to him. I don't want it any more."

Irene dropped the package into her sister's eager palm.

"How would you like to wear it?"

"Oh, Irene, may I? I'm crazy about jade."

As Betty tore the paper wrapping from the box, their mother entered. Round-eyed and far more sophisticated than either of her daughters, she exclaimed, "Why, Irene, what's happened? Surely you're not giving away your pretty ring?"

"I am, and what's more I don't want to discuss it."

Elizabeth Was Hurt.

Elizabeth looked hurt and retreated to the kitchen where an instant later Irene followed her to fling repentant arms around her neck.

"I'm sorry, darling! I didn't mean to be cross."

Mrs. Gardner sounded like a curious child.

"Are you mad at him, honey?"

"Worse than that. He's going to marry someone else."

Elizabeth held her closer in an embrace that comforted, even though the girl in her arms knew her mother would never be able to understand the burning agony caused by the desertion of the man she had adored.

"Never you mind," crooned Elizabeth like a little girl to her doll. "He wasn't good enough for you anyway."

A week later Irene successfully completed her ten days trial and became an air hostess.

Professor Offers Tips on Make-up

Suggests Green or Blue Eyebrows With Colored Wigs.

Women have failed to get the ultimate results from cosmetics, in the opinion of Prof. Curt J. Ducasse, of Brown University. He is convinced cosmetics are used for decorative purposes and not to simulate youth and that women have never realized the possibilities along the decorative line.

If scarlet lips are decorative, green, blue, or golden ones would be even more so, the professor reasoned recently in an address before the Rhode Island Philosophical Society.

"Why not green or blue eyebrows, cheeks, or ears?" Professor Ducasse asked. "With the addition of colored wigs to match, some wonderful effects undoubtedly could be achieved."

All beauty tricks such as false eyelashes, plucked eyebrows, and lacquered nails are for decoration and not for youth illusion, he declared.

British Launch Drive On Overcrowded Homes

A nation-wide drive on overcrowding in homes outside of slum areas has been launched in Great Britain. A new housing bill makes it a punishable offense for more than two persons to occupy a single room, for more than three to occupy two rooms or for more than five to live in three rooms. The bill also provides government subsidies for rehousing families now living in overcrowded conditions.

Gleanings from Current Verse

Sea Talk.

WALK WITH ME over glittering sand
To the yellow dunes' far reaches.
Then back to where the sapphire hand
Of ocean fingers drowsy beaches.

Stray to the weathered harbors where Great ships lie anchored, rising, falling,
With surge of tide. Watch white birds there
Above the tall masts flying, calling.

You will forget yourself awhile,
Be as a seamew, strong of wing,
Feeding on space, blue mile on mile,
And eager for adventuring.

Beauty Growing Old.

O CARELESS YOUTH—and now that you have died—
Was it for this, we sang our roundelays
Of Spring? For this—forgot the autumn tide?
With you, I wasted beauty's joyous ways;
With you, I spent the crimson, coursing wine
Within my veins, we lived a heedless maze
Of pleasure—plucked the lotus anodyne
Of perfumed-petaled dreams for me to wear;
I thought your fleeting charms forever mine,
And viewed the passing time with no despair
That destiny might keep a hidden page
From me—O, had I planned with better care,
I should not weep today in helpless rage
Before the mockery of bleak old age!

How Many Times?

HOW MANY TIMES have men, in raw Novembers,
Wept at the flutter of the last red leaf,
Mourning that hope expires like dead wood-embers
And life and loveliness are autumn-brief!

How many times, when clouds of bashful flowers
Dappled the new-green slopes with puffs of white,
Have men, beneath the budding forest towers,
Laughed in the resurrected April light!

How many times! Then why has spring's revival
No charm to hush the old disconsolate sighs
Of some who, in the mounded snow's arrival,
Read the dark ending of all earths and skies?

Poetry.

I AM THE proud
Breast of the pigeon,
Important with love,
That struts
Through the heart.

I am the song,
The whir
Of many colored wings,
Beating
At the edge of sunset.

I am the hunger
Of winter birds,
That settle on the heart,
Ravenous
For the scattered crumbs
Of a remembered feast,
After a day
Of proud wings
Against the sky.

For Sale.

FOR SALE AT THE market, a thousand dreams
Of gossamer lightness and threads of gold,
And shadows designed by a dead moon's beams,
Fine woven of faith that the lost years hold.

There are dreams of love and a world's acclaim
And dreams of a home that never could be;
A dream where a little child called my name;
My heart aches again with the memory.

I offer these at the counter today
At whatever price the treasure will bring.
I want to sell quickly, and go my way,
Forget that I sold them, and everything.

For sale at the market, a thousand dreams!
I'm selling them only because I must
Buy practical things that the world esteems,
And strange, other things that will fade and rust.

Frivolous College Girl Replaced By Studious Type, Dean Declares

"Any girl who wants a college education enough to undergo some hardships can get it," says Miss Marjorie Nicholson, dean of Smith College, who recently attended the Smith College Alumnae Association held here.

Serious Minded Misses Active In School Life

Dr. Nicolson, Smith College, Notes Changed Attitude From Boom Days.

THE GIRL who went to college "for the thrill" or simply because she had nothing else to do is now out of the picture. In her place is a more studious individual who has probably felt the tightening of the family purse strings and realizes she must make the most of her opportunity.

These are observations of Dr. Marjorie H. Nicolson, dean of Smith College and professor of English, and formerly a teacher in the University of Minnesota and Goucher College.

Dr. Nicolson was recently in Washington to attend the meeting of the Smith College Alumnae Association.

Her wide experience in educational work has led her to believe the average college woman of today is more studious and more intensely interested in college organizations than her predecessor of the boom days of 1928 and 1929.

Spent Week-Ends away.

"But as to whether the depression is the cause of this, I don't know," she said. "We are apt to attribute such a change to current conditions when things always move in cycles. It was time, for the pendulum is now swinging back."

Dr. Nicolson said that the present state of affairs is better for the average college student.

"Back in the days when college girls had plenty of money to spend," Dr. Nicolson said, "they considered the campus a place to get away from. They spent most week-ends away from the college, visiting in New York or Boston. They didn't take an active part in campus activities because it wasn't 'the thing to do.'

"But that type of girl probably has a younger sister now in college, a girl who hasn't too much money to spend—because of the depression—and who is vitally interested in college life because it costs very little to take part in college organizations. Furthermore, this younger sister may live in one of the cooperative houses because in this way she can save money."

Handicaps Vanishing.

Dr. Nicolson feels there is no longer any excuse—except in rare cases—for a girl to miss going to college.

Finances have ceased to be a handicap since so many of the highest type of students in every institution are earning their way, she said.

"Any girl today who really wants a degree from college can get it," she went on, "provided she wants it enough to undergo some hardships."

She feels the hardships are of advantage in helping to develop college women. "How often I have heard a self-made parent say, 'I don't want my daughter to have the struggle I did. I want her to have every advantage without having to undergo any hardship.' And I have always thought it would be so much better if college girls of this decade had a few more struggles. Now many are having them, and many as a result will be far finer persons."

Won Coveted Yale Prize.

Dr. Nicolson has had wide experience in college work. A graduate of the University of Michigan, she later attended Yale Univsrsity, where she received her Ph. D. degree. There she was the recipient of the John Addison Porter prize, the only woman ever to be so honored.

She has been professor of English at Smith since 1926 and was appointed dean of the college in 1931.

In addition to her work as a faculty member of three colleges, she has found time to write for the Atlantic Monthly, the Yale Review and a number of other "quality" magazines. She is, also, the author of "The Conway Letters," which has received high praise from critics, and has edited selections from Keats, Shelley and Tennyson.

Small Offices Pay Girls More Than Large Organizations

Woman's Labor Bureau Survey Finds That Young Workers Have Better Chance of Job Than Experienced Elders.

WOMEN who work in small offices draw better salaries than those employed by large firms. The young, inexperienced girl stands a better chance of getting an office job today than does the experienced woman. In most offices women still receive lower wages than men when they do exactly the same work.

These facts are revealed in a survey on women office workers, just completed by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor. Results of the study are being announced today by Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the bureau.

Although about 2,000,000 women are employed in offices in the United States, the study was concerned with only 43,000, giving a close-up of feminine workers in advertising, banking, insurance, investment, mail order, publishing and public utilities offices. These 43,000 are employed in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Atlanta, St. Louis, Hartford and Des Moines. All figures in the survey are based on data gathered from January, 1931, to March, 1932.

General clerks, forming the largest group, are near the bottom of the scale, with an average monthly salary of $90. The only groups receiving less pay are messengers with a median of $55, file clerks with a median of $81, and key punch operators with a median of $89. Secretaries form the smallest as well as the highest paid group. Their average monthly salary is $156. Stenographers, second largest group, receive an average monthly salary of $114.

The reason given for women in small offices drawing higher wages than those in large offices is that jobs in small offices require knowledge of several lines of work while jobs in big offices are highly specialized and concerned with routine work.

The average age of the workers studied was 25. Although the survey shows young, inexperienced workers are much more in demand than women with experience, it also indicates that long experience in the same job means higher earnings. The average salary for women with 15 or more years' experience is $149 while the average for those with less than 10 and more than 5 years' experience is $109. Those with less than one year's service have the low average salary of $77.

In all age groups the workers with only grammar school educations trailed the others in amount of earnings. As the workers grow older this difference in earning capacity becomes still more pronounced, the survey shows. Although most employers insist upon some high school training they do not consider a college education necessary for stenographic or clerical workers.

Chicago was the only city where data was secured on the difference between men's and women's salaries for the same work. This data proves that the proportion of men earning as much as $150 a month is at least three and a half times larger than the proportion of women earning the same amount. The men's median salary is $135 while the women's is $99.

Coiffure Art Now Enhanced By Brilliants

DIAMONDS—or at least rhinestones—are shining in new roles.

They are highlighting smart coiffures like so many stars in the sky as they shine and sparkle up and down parts, across hairlines, over the temples and even interspersed in coronet braids.

Each brilliant is set separately in tiny mountings much resembling bobby pins. These clip on, here, there, and yon, as the wearer sees fit.

Cartier, who began the fad with real diamonds set on platinum clips, got his idea from Indian princesses who bedeck their headdress with myriads of single jewels. The Americanized version sees rhinestones in the lead and crystaline cutglass tinted green, lavender and gold as close seconds.

New Deal Urged For Human Race

THE HUMAN RACE is in a bad way, Prof. Ernest A. Hooton, of Harvard, declared at a recent meeting of the American Anthropological Association. The whole thing, he said, is a result of natural selection for propagation.

"Intelligent artificial selection should replace natural selection," the professor said, adding, "we need a biological new deal."

Until the human race is governed by artificial selection, civilization will continue to degenerate and crumble, the educator pointed out. He has made studies of criminals in 10 States and has found a direct relationship between the inferior mentality and the inferior physical condition of society's outlaws. He also said he has proved that children in excellent physical health are also superior mentally.

Bad Housing Breeds Disease And Crime, Expert Declares

THE AVERAGE American housewife, according to popular conception, sits in idleness in her modern home while all her housework is done by electrical devices. But a different picture of the majority of American homes is drawn by Miss Helen Alfred, secretary of the National Public Housing Conference.

"One-third of the total population of this country resides in substandard areas," she said. "In the majority of homes there is virtually no sanitation. I recall a certain district in a city in Alabama where 20 families in one tenement share the same bath. There is one spigot and this gives only cold water. Don't imagine though that this is a unique case. Far from it! There are similar conditions in almost every large city in the country!"

Miss Alfred said that in thousands of cases families of 10 and 12 live in two rooms. "The kitchens are barely more than closets which are lighted by a dim electric bulb," she declared. "There are no sinks, and worst of all, no garbage disposal. A survey of East Side tenements in New York revealed that such a thing as a closet was regarded as a luxury. The result of such conditions you can easily imagine.

"Women living in such surroundings," Miss Alfred said, "lose all urge to keep up their personal appearance. They have no facilities for keeping house, much less keeping themselves," she pointed out.

It is deplorable but purely understandable that few of them bother with any kind of beauty culture. In a great many cases life is a succession of childbirths and a daily routine of cooking and dishwashing. Naturally, the mortality rate among children is alarming. They have improper food, live in congested rooms, have little fresh air and have to survive all manner of filth and dirt."

The lack of proper living conditions inevitably results in innumerable cases of tuberculosis, juvenile delinqency, adult crime and immorality, Miss Alfred believes. She said it was the purpose of the National Public Housing Conference to educate people to the necessity of better conditions and then to promote the actual work of reconstruction.

She said that many people viewed the housing plans in the light of rebuilding domiciles here and there about a town, while in reality the conference was eager to rebuild whole city districts and do a wholesale job of improving. It has been argued, she said, that if slums were torn down and decent homes built in their stead, within five years these would be slums again. "This just isn't true," she declared. "People always react to their environment and better conditions would make better citizens. Certainly there would be an end to such crime-breeding nests as we have now.

"Besides," she said, "slum areas are costly to a city. Policing, fire precautions and health measures mount up to millions of dollars."

Woman Reader Defines Style; Two Men Engage in Odd Debate.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your definition of style reminds me of one I read some time ago in Whitehead's "Organization of Thought." I copied it down as a good motto for one interested in plans—and this is the Golden Age of the Plan, isn't it?

* * * *

It says, in part, ". . . . the sense for style . . . is an esthetic sense, based on admiration for the direct attainment of a foreseen end, simply and without waste. Style is the ultimate morality of the mind. . . . With style you attain your end and nothing but your end. The effect of your activity is calculable and foresight is the last gift of gods to men." H. W.

* * * *

DEAR H. W.: An excellent, if somewhat abstruse, definition of style as applied to clothes. Thank you for submitting it. M. H.

* * * *

Brains or Brawn!

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a big, slightly corpulent man in the early thirties. I know from experience and observation that women are attracted by men of commanding stature. There is a puny, egotistical little fellow working in the same office with me who claims he can always tell what women think of him, and that his physical insignificance is always mirrored in the blank gaze they give him.

* * * *

This little fellow has made the remark that the only role he can ever expect to play in a woman's life will be through the medium of written thought. How can I, without jeopardizing our friendly professional relationship, get the idea across to him that he is all wrong, and that no woman would waste time or thought on a man without physical favor in her sight? ATLAS.

* * * *

DEAR ATLAS: As a matter of fact, it isn't true that all women everywhere inevitably favor masculine brawn instead of brains. Uncounted thousands of women place a great premium on certain sympathetic intelligent qualities of mind and heart in men, which have nothing to do with appearance.

* * * *

Probably the biggest obstacle in the way of this man's attracting the interest of women is his self consciousness about his small stature—not the fact itself. If you really want to help him, do so by building up his confidence concerning his appearance.

* * * *

To tell the truth, I think the whole discussion rather silly.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

What TODAY Means

"Aquarius."

IF JANUARY 21 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m.

On this January 21 agreements, written or verbal, should be strictly adhered to, if an unpleasant aftermath is to be avoided. Business may be conducted more advantageously if basic values are considered as the main issue, instead of prices. In a social contact it is advisable not to allow a sudden surge of emotionalism to cause a loss of rationality. It might be well to remember discretion never creates complications.

Love is probably indirectly going to be responsible for a decided change for the better in your financial affairs. Married and engaged couples, as well as those enmeshed in Cupid's snare, may avoid embarrassing misunderstandings on this date if they are careful not to be the least way ambiguous in what they have to say.

If a woman and January 21 is your birthday, you have an unusually fine brain. It is a veritable storehouse for general information. Your faculty of remembering events and people probably is recognized by your family and friends. Your active imagination may be responsible for many a happy hour and possibly keeps you from ever being very lonely. If you take up the writing of either verse or prose, you may find a profitable source of income. Office or educational work also should offer opportunities to make a satisfactory livelihood. Matrimony should prove satisfactory in every respect.

The child born on January 21, when it reaches school age, generally displays a high degree of efficiency in all of its studies, with the exception of mathematics, which usually is its weak point. Physically as well as mentally the child should develop satisfactorily.

If a man and January 21 is your natal day, work such as contacting the buying public may be best suited for your genial personality. You have the ability to sell your individuality and make friends. Politics, law, medicine, engineering, as well as journalism may offer you the right field for activity. You possess the qualifications essential to make a woman happy, so matrimony is recommended as an excellent medium through which to secure a happy home life.

Florence Kahn Lauds California Friends

Owes Her Reelection to Them, Says Woman Representative.

(Associated Press.)

REPRESENTATIVE FLORENCE P. KAHN, of California, sturdy survivor of Democratic landslides, says she owes it all to her friends, but others credit her ready wit and an Edison-like work week.

"The loyalty of my friends and the faith they have in me is what brought me back to Congress—and that's no joke!" was Mrs. Kahn's answer to a question on the subject. "For if there was anything my opponents didn't do, it was because they forgot it!"

She was sitting at the huge table of the Appropriations Committee, of which she is first and only woman member. Her brown eyes blazed again with the fire of a finished battle.

Mother Is 89.

One of the most interesting echoes of the San Francisco fray that crossed the continent to Washington was a story that some one said Mrs. Kahn was too old for public life, and her reply was: "Wait till my mother hears of that!"

With Mrs. Kahn every day of her like walks her mother, Mrs. Mary Prag, aged 89, active member of the San Francisco Board of Education. From her black bag, at any moment, Mrs. Kahn can take her mother's last letter, penned in the most exquisite script. And she writes to her mother every day.

"My mother has been one of the makers of California educational history," said Mrs. Kahn proudly. "She was the first person in the State to advocate equal pay for equal work for woman teachers. And she fought for the teachers' pension law." Close, too, is Mrs. Kahn's correspondence with her two sons.

One reason Mrs. Kahn can find time to write daily letters, which contain many a mention of her grandson, aged 3, is that she finds five hours of sleep each night plenty for her. The only relaxation she allows herself is an occasional dinner with friends.

Coffee at 6:30 a. m.

Bedtime is midnight or 1 o'clock, yet she wakes at 5 or 6, reads the morning papers, and watches for the clock to say 6:30, when room service at her hotel opens and she can order that first cup of coffee. She sips it lying in bed, finishing up the news.

Before 8:30 a. m. she is up on Capitol Hill, where she usually breakfasts in the House restaurant before plunging into the work of the day. She has been on the subcommittee considering State, Justice, Commerce and Labor Department appropriations.

"Just as an example of the intense interest of this work, we had our ambassador to Soviet Russia, William Bullitt, talking to us in executive session for more than an hour. It was as vivid a view of living conditions there as one could get without actually going," she said.

On the floor, Mrs. Kahn has that most important advantage—the ability to make herself heard. She uses her voice sparingly, but effectively. She's a "sixty-niner"—one of the sixty-nine members who came in on the Sixty-ninth Congress — Representative Norton, (Democrat), New Jersey, and Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, were also of the group.

"And I still wear the same sized hat, I still wear the same sized shoe, and, unfortunately, I weigh the same," was the final comment from Mrs. Kahn.

MRS. FLORENCE KAHN, whose ready wit and capacity for work helped her survive a Democratic landslide.

Cheap Power Is Promised West Virginia

Utilities Act on Heels of State Preparations for Inquiry.

Cities Plan Demand for Equal Distribution of Tax Revenues.

By Robert H. Horner.
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 20.—Almost on the heels of an announcement by the West Virginia Relief Administration late in the week, that it planned to begin at once a survey into every corner of the State to ascertain needs for rural electrification, word came from N. M. Argabrite, vice president of the American Gas & Electric Co., that his subsiding companies, which supply many West Virginia cities with power, were making arrangements to eliminate inequalities and make material reductions in charges for services in the municipalities.

Mr. Argabrite sent the cheering word to Gov. H. G. Kump, who, only ten days ago, wrote to the utilities, telling them for a second time to do something about reducing charges to municipalities. The companies that will carry out Mr. Argabrite's order to reduce, are the Appalachian Electric Power Co., which supplies southern West Virginia, and the Wheeling Electric Co., which supplies Wheeling, Moundsville, Benwood, McMechan and several other towns. Both companies are subsidiaries of the American Gas & Electric Co.

Citizens' Warning.

As Gov. Kump made public Mr. Argabrite's assurance, official representatives of West Virginia's cities were meeting here to demand of the Legislature that it take steps to provide a more equal distribution of tax revenues among them, or else most of the municipalities, now heavily in debt, will become completely bankrupt. While the cities lost sources of revenue under the adoption two years ago of the tax limitation amendment to the constitution and were unable to find new sources to make up the difference, the State also lost revenue, but made it up in ways that the cities could not emulate.

The relief administration's electrification survey, according to Administrator W. N. Beehler's announcement, is to be in line with President Roosevelt's plan to electrify the farms of the country, as one great step toward national recovery. A total of 475 enumerators will be employed in the 55 counties to make the survey, Mr. Beehler said, and about four weeks will be required to complete the job.

In view of West Virginia's natural resources and electric power, a move has been launched in the Legislature to invite industry to locate in the State on the promise of exemption for "unfair" taxation. A resolution extending the invitation and pledging exemption, as introduced by Delegate E. E. Righter, of Clarksburg, is being considered in the House finance committee.

Aside from completing organization of the two houses and receiving a volume of bills on a variety of subjects, the Legislature made little progress last week. Both houses will reconvene at 2 p. m. tomorrow to begin where they left off last Thursday, when adjournment was taken in order to give the leaders time to map out a program.

Before adjournment, however, the lawmakers passed an emergency measure to restore to the justices of the peace jurisdiction in misdemeanor cases, which had been taken from them in an opinion handed down by the State Supreme Court, holding that they could not collect fees from persons they fined. Until the high court ruled, it had been a custom for magistrates to collect fees from persons they tried ever since West Virginia became a State 70 years ago. Action by the court, however, came as the result of recent agitation by newspapers that charged certain justices were abusing the right to collect fees. The emergency act, which was drawn by Attorney General Homer A. Holt to save congestion in other courts, provided that the justices would be allowed a fee of $1 for each misdemeanor case tried, payable from the county general fund or school funds.

A plan to turn over to a select joint committee of 16 delegates and senators the liquor problem, which was approved by the House of Delegates early last week, will bob up in that body again on Monday, with a Senate amendment, providing that the two judiciary committees, having a joint membership of 43, be constituted as a committee to handle the subject of liquor.

Blow to Monopoly Plan.

As originally drawn and sponsored by Delegate James Kay Thomas, of Charleston, the resolution calling for a committee of 16 was believed to have been a move on the part of the State administration to have its plan for a State monopoly of liquor handled by a group of select men. The Senate's amendment therefore, was taken as a blow at the monopoly plan, which will cause delay, though not defeat, for generally, it is believed, Gov. Kump's idea of adopting a plan modelled after the Virginia control plan, will prevail.

Frederick Tax Revisions Seen By County Body

Efficiency Committee Will Urge Installment Payment Plan.

Middletown, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—That the newly appointed economy and efficiency committee for Frederick County, composed of T. Poole Jones, chairman; William T. Delaplaine, Richard Potts, Frederick; Daniel S. Guyton, of near Burkittsville; Alvie M. Etzler, Mount Pleasant, and Daniel White, of Urbana, plans to recommend a number of changes in the present county tax laws, was indicated by a member of the committee today, who stated that the committee has turned its attention to a study of the tax collection system.

It was pointed out that the present system, which provides for the employment of someone to prepare the tax sale notices, which are advertised each year at the expense of those delinquent taxpayers whose property is advertised for sale, is very ineffective and that the county has to pay a large proportion of the advertising bills each year. It was also stated that very few of these properties are actually sold and under the present procedure the court will not ratify the sales.

Those advocating changes in the system contend that the present methods of advertising for sale property of delinquent taxpayers costs the citizens of the county approximately $1,000 annually and that the purpose of the law is accomplished in but few cases.

It is also said that the committee will recommend a law for Frederick County which will permit taxpayers to make payments for six months at a time. At present, the law requires all tax bills to be paid in full at one time. The installment plan, it is pointed out, will insure earlier payments of taxes, thus avoiding the necessity of advertising many properties for sale, and eliminate the need of borrowing funds to meet expenses of the county.

Another plan under consideration by the committee calls for the abolition of the present county audit ssytem and provides for an annual audit by a certified public accountant. Under the present system, three taxpayers of the county are appointed each year by the court to audit the books of the various officials. Russell E. Lighter, of Middletown, chairman of the present auditing committee, told the committee yesterday that during 1934 only about one-third of the amount of money required for the operation of the county government was received during the first six months, and as a result the county commissioners were required to borrow money to meet expenses.

The 1935 budget figures reveal that the commissioners owed approximately $96,000 to county banks, with but about $63,000 of this amount on hand at the close of the year's business December 31. At that time approximately $76,000 in uncollected taxes remained on the treasurer's books.

These figures, it is pointed out, make it advisable to seek some method to insure earlier tax collections, as well as a need for strengthening of the present tax sale law.

Social and Club Notes
Of Towns and Cities in Nearby States

By Elizabeth C. Taylor.

The coming week for club women seems quite active, suppers and other entertainments being scheduled, as well as the countless other offerings of the clubs' regular activities. Luncheons and banquets are being given for visiting speakers or newly elected officers of the clubs.

On Wednesday the Hagerstown (Md.) Women's Club will give a literary luncheon. The speaker will be Dr. W. B. Stehl.

The College Club of Waynesboro, Pa., of which Mrs. Walter Y. Grove is president, will hold their annual banquet and election of officers on Tuesday of this week. The club expects to have an out-of-town lecturer present at this meeting.

A new subject, or rather a novel form of presentation of a club program, is becoming quite popular with the women's clubs. It takes the form of a debate on some question of importance to the members or the various sides of a political or social problem. This week will find the members of the Jug Bridge Women's Club lined up in debating the question: "Resolved that our country has shown greater improvement since women's suffrage than before it." This meeting is sponsored by the citizenship section of the club. Two discussions will be held at this meeing as well as the debate. Mrs. Harry Hamilton will lead the discussion on "Legislation," while Mrs. E. D. Michael will talk on the subject, "Citizenship." The hostess of the meeting, which will be held on Wednesday, is Mrs. Langdon Ward.

The Ballenger (Md.) Women's Club schedules a meeting for today. Mrs. L. C. Horne is hostess of the meeting which is to be a social affair and open to guests of members of the club.

In Martinsburg, W. Va., the home department of the women's club will hold a meeting at 2:30 in the clubroom. The chairman of the department is Mrs. Ethel T. Feller.

Mrs. Reuben Leese will be hostess to the Lewistown (Md.) Women's Club at their meeting on Wednesday. The Point of Rocks (Md.) Women's Club will meet on the same day as will the Spring Mills (W. Va.) Club.

Nice Explains Tax Program 'Suggestions'

Message to Legislature Misunderstood, Says Governor.

Relief to Be Discussed at Conference Today With Hopkins.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Stirred by apparent misunderstanding of his proposals for financial relief in Maryland, which, he said, "has resulted in some loose and totally unfounded criticism," Gov. Harry W. Nice tonight issued a statement to correct such impressions.

The Governor emphasized that what he incorporated in his message to the Legislature the day following his inauguration were merely "suggestions" and not "recommendations" concerning the financial situation.

Meanwhile, the Governor is preparing to go to Washington tomorrow for a conference with Harry L. Hopkins, director of the Federal Emergency Relief, to learn the exact situation of Federal relief, as regards to Maryland, in view of the plan outlined by President Roosevelt, since the Governor submitted his message. The conference has been arranged for 4 o'clock, and the Governor will be accompanied by Senator J. Alan Coad, Democrat, St. Marys County, and Representative Kent R. Mullikin, Democrat, Prince Georges, chairman of the finance and ways and means committees, and majority floor leaders in the respective branches of the Assembly.

Text of Message.

The Governor's statement follows:

"In my message to the Legislature of January 18, it was my purpose to advise of the situation which confronts the State of Maryland regarding the necessity of raising revenue for emergency unemployment relief and other emergencies over and above the amount required for the normal expenditure of the State. I, therefore, submitted in advance of the presentation of the budget, first, such information as I had concerning the amount of new revenue necessary, and, second, suggestions as to sources from which such revenue may be derived.

"It appears that there exists some misunderstanding as to whether I had definitely committed myself to the proposals set forth in that message. In order to clear up this misunderstanding, which has resulted in some loose and totally unfounded criticism, I desire to call attention to the language used by me which was, 'suggestions as to the sources from which such revenue may be derived,' and in referring to a method of raising revenue through a State income tax, I distinctly said that such a method had its advantages and disadvantages. I desire it to be perfectly clear to all the citizens of Maryland that, the fact that I offered the several suggestions contained in my message, did not, in any sense of the word, commit me to the wisdom or advisability of such methods of taxation in preference to others which might be later suggested. My purpose was to impress upon the Legislature the grave necessity of prompt action; and that they might know that I, in my humble way, was anxious to cooperate with them in this very serious and important problem which now confronts Maryland. I think it only fair to say that I do not pretend to be a tax expert and, consequently, my proposals should not be taken to mean that I submitted them as being the best methods of raising revenue or that I was committed to them.

Up to Legislature.

"It is, of course, unnecessary to repeat that the methods of raising revenues rests upon the shoulders of the Legislature, and not within my province. I felt sure, however, that it was my duty to transmit to the Legislature such information as I had been able to gather concerning the necessities of the different revenues particularly in view of the acute situation which confronts our State in the matter of relief to the unemployed and also to the deficit of $2,229,000 indicated by the comptroller. In doing this I thought that any suggestions of possible sources of revenue would be welcomed, and would at least have the effect of providing a starting point.

"And, with that thought in mind, certain bills were submitted to serve as guides or to be suggestive of the mechanics to be employed."

Lee Honored In Ceremonies At Stratford

School Head Urges Youth to Follow Example of General.

Stratford Hall, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.) The great decisions of Robert E. Lee as a soldier and as a private citizen were set forth as examples that should guide the present generation in its conduct, this afternoon by Blake T. Newton, superintendent of schools in Westmoreland County, speaking at anniversary exercises at Stratford, Lee's birthplace, here.

From the examples of Lee both while in private life and in the army we should draw a lesson which should guide us in our conduct," Newton said.

Attended by a fair sized crowd, considering weather conditions, the exercises were held in the old mansion with Major General B. F. Cheatham, U. S. Army retired, resident superintendent of the home, presiding.

Following group singing a tea for the visitors was served before the open fireplace.

A campaign to raise $53,000 to liquidate a mortgage on the plantation and manor where Lee was born got under way yesterday in 32 States where chapters of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation are located.

The famed house located 50 miles from Fredericksburg in Westmoreland County where Lighthorse Harry Lee and later his son, Robert E. Lee, were born, as well as many other of the famous Lee family is now more typical of the day in which the Lees made it their home than it has been in many years due to much work through the Lee Memorial Association.

Stratford was built between 1727 and 1730, by Col. Thomas Lee. It is a striking example of Virginia architecture.

Snowstorm Delays Trek Of '96 Auto

1-Cylinder 'Buckboard' to Be Shipped by Boat to Baltimore.

Slick Roads Too Much for Driver Planning 138-Mile Trip.

Baltimore, Jan. 20 (AP).—Lee Webster Selfe, who set out from Ocean City yesterday to make the 138-mile drive to Baltimore in an 1896 model automobile, rested in a Baltimore hotel tonight and waited for the automobile—which arrives here by boat tomorrow.

Selfe gave up the trip at Hurlock, 40 miles north of Salisbury, early today after snow, rain and sleet proved his undoing, and the narrow wheels and one-lung engine in the car were unable to manage the slippery roads. He said he would meet the "Orient Buckboard"—as the machine is named—at the dock.

"I'll drive here from the dock if she'll turn over," Selfe said "and if she won't, I'll get a mule."

Selfe is certain he will bring the Orient—or what's left of it—to Baltimore's city hall tomorrow.

Nine Miles Per Hour.

She'll only do about 9 miles an hour—and if the snow keeps up, moving will be a problem. She's reinforced with oak now, in several places, and I'm afraid if she starts to skid, the frame'll break in two on me."

Selfe plans to drive the buckboard in the auto show's ancient automobile race here this week, and is anxious to have the strange-looking one-seated vehicle in running order.

Despite its queer looks, however, Selfe will hear no criticisms.

"Why, you'd be surprised at the modern improvements she's got," he protested. "There's three things on that car right now that were there when they made it at Waltham, Mass., in 1896.

Has Knee Action.

"First, she's rubber-insulated; second, she's got knee-action; and third, believe it or not, she's got floating power.

"It's all crude, of course, but every one of those features is there."

Selfe condensed his own experiences during the journey to the statement:

"Boy—I've had my troubles."

Confederate Sons Reelect McIntosh

Hatcher Camp Plans Picnic for Daughters' Unit.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Bruce McIntosh, president of the Peoples National Bank, at Leesburg, was unanimously reelected commander of the ninth consecutive year of Clinton Hatcher Camp, Sons of Clinton Hatcher Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, at the annual meeting held here today. Other officers reelected were Walter Everhart, first lieutenant; Joseph Shumate, second lieutenant; C. W. Atwell, third lieutenant; A. Dibrell, adjutant; M. B. Costello, assistant adjutant; J. T. Hourihane, treasurer; Dr. J. A. Gibson, surgeon; J. W. Mitchell, color sergeant, and Rev. A. S. Peeler, chaplain.

The following committee was elected to draft resolutions on the death of N. R. Heaton: W. M. Everhart, J. T. Hourihane and J. H. Shumate.

The camp again decided to honor the Daughters of the Confederacy with a picnic during the summer and appointed the following committee to work out details: Rev. A. S. Peeler, W. M. Everhart, J. T. Hourihane, Claude Saffer, J. K. Reynolds, W. S. Steele, J. W. Mitchell and Bruce McIntosh.

Good morning! Topcoat weather will be starting again in about a month or so; as a matter of fact there are topcoat days all through the winter. Topcoats are a special feature in our Pre-Inventory Sale. A splendid variety of fabrics and styles.

Dinner Tonight At Alexandria To Honor Lee

Judge Covington, Georgia, Will Deliver Main Address.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A Robert E. Lee dinner will be held at 7 o'clock tonight in the George Mason Hotel when Judge A. A. Covington, of Georgia, will be the principal speaker, paying tribute to Lee. This dinner is a substitute for the annual Lee birthday banquet on January 19, in the Confederate Veterans' Home, Prince street, served under the direction of the late Gen. Edgar Warfield, and given by the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Special tribute will be paid Gen. Warfield, who died on November 26 last, and who had for many years been the sole surviving Confederate veteran in Alexandria.

J. William May, J. Kent White and Edgar Warfield, jr., are in charge of arrangements for the dinner, which will be attended by a number of citizens, principally members of Robert E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Molly Pitcher Council, No. 43, Daughters of America, will send a delegation to the twenty-eighth session of District No. 1 on January 31, with Kenmore Council as hostess, Mrs. Marie Mills, the presiding officer of the council, will head the delegation.

The Ladies Auxiliary of Engine Company No. 4, Alexandria Fire Department, has installed the following officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. Ruby Smith, president; Mrs. Rose Finney, vice president; Miss Mary Corbin, secretary; Mrs. Mary Smith, treasurer; and Mrs. Doris Greenwood, chaplain.

Mrs. Walter Pierpoint will be the hostess at the meeting at 7:45 o'clock tonight of the Willard-Pierpoint Union, W. C. T. U., at her home, 114 South Patrick street.

The Catholic Daughters of America will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in Lyceum Hall, 300 block of Duke street, with bingo games featured. Miss Minnie Jenkins is general chairman for the gathering.

The January meeting of the John Alexander Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will be held this evening with Miss Frank Wood Smoot and Mrs. Charles M. Seaman, at the home of the former, 219 South St. Asaph street. Miss Anne Carrington Stump, program chairman, has announced the topic of the meeting will be "National Defense."

Citizens to Discuss Bus Service Report

Cheverly Group Completes Poll on Extension.

Reports on the status of the movement to obtain through bus service from Cheverly to downtown Washington will be given at the monthly meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. of the Cheverly (Md.) Citizens Association in the school.

Results will be announced of answers to questionnaires sent some time ago to members of the association in connection the campaign. It is stated that a substantial number of citizens who do not now use the bus indicate that should through service be provided they would avail themselves of it. L. C. Rosenkrans is in charge of the poll.

Capt. Richard H. Mansfield, of the Metropolitan Police Department of Washington will be in charge of the entertainment program. Bert H. Wise, president, will conduct the meeting.

Hen Anticipates Easter, Lays Eggs Already Colored

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.). Mrs. D. W. Clem, Sharpsburg pike, won't have to dye her Easter eggs if a hen in her flock continues laying the kind of eggs she has been turning out for three consecutive days.

The shells are of pluish color and look like dyed eggs. The hen is eating the same food as others in the flock, all of which are laying white eggs.

Firemen to Confer On Appropriations

Washington County Board to Hear Volunteers.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 20 (AP).—A committee representing the Washington County Volunteer Firemen's Association will meet with the county commissioners here Tuesday in connection with preparation of a bill to secure a fixed appropriation for each volunteer fire company in the county.

Glenn Williams, of Funkstown, will head the committee.

The firemen are considering plans for presentation of a bill to the State Legislature asking that the fixed appropriation be made each year through the board of county commissioners. State Senator Ernest W. Miller has announced he would "do his duty" if such legislation is asked.

Prominent Realty Man Arrested in Rockville

George Peter, Rockville real estate man and member of a prominent Montgomery County family, was arrested early yesterday and charged with disorderly conduct.

Police were called at 4 a. m. and told that Peter was causing a disturbance in Weems' Restaurant on Frederick road outside of Rockville. Officer Windsor Poole went to the restaurant and placed Peter under arrest. Peter was released on his personal bond and ordered to appear in the County Police Court Friday.

Stories About the Pictures You're Seeing.

Hollywood, Jan. 19.

"CLIVE OF INDIA:" This picture of India was filmed almost entirely at the United Artists studio; unlike "Bengal Lancers," there were few location shots. The famous Battle of Plassey, one of the biggest scenes in the flicker, was fought right in back of the studio. India seems to be an expensive nation to do a picture about because both Paramount's flicker and this Twentieth Century picture cost a million dollars apiece to produce.

How does a picture get to cost a million dollars? Here are some of the items which go to make that total. "Clive of India" is a play, still running in London, and the screen rights cost Darryl Zanuck $70,000. Mr. Zanuck imported the authors, W. P. Lipscomb and R. J. Minney, to do the screen adaptation. They each received $1,250 a week for several months. There are the salaries of the cast and the salaries of the mob of extras. Fifty elephants and 25 camels had to be hired for the Battle of Plassey. The costumes for the elephants are figured at a cost of $2,200 apiece—which should give you an idea of how the items begin to total.

There are the costs of the sets and then there are the thousands of pieces of war material: Rifles and lances and native weapons which had to be purchased or hired. Movie accountants figure the shooting time of a film at $1,000 a minute—meaning that the cameras in an 8-hour day actually turn only 15 minutes per day. The shortest scene in "Clive" is the most expensive, the Black Hole of Calcutta sequence. This scene takes only 15 seconds on the screen and cost $30,000 to film—or $2,000 a camera second. It's when you start adding these trifles up that a flicker costs a million dollars.

THERE were probably more debates on whether Ronald Colman should shave off his mustache or not than there were on the story. He finally consented to do so and it is the first time Colman has appeared naked on the screen. It must be all right, for Loretta Young continued her romantic role with Colman off the set and without the director's instructions.

You may wonder how Clive's men stand up against that charge of armored elephants. If it hadn't been for those fools who call themselves stunt men, the scenes would never have been filmed. They first tried to film the elephant charge with 300 regular extras, but it didn't take. Finally every available stunt man in Hollywood was hired. They took one look at the costumed elephants and doubled their price. They got it.

Caesar Romero, who is now Marlene Dietrich's leading man, and will be Mae West's leading man, has only a small role, Colin Clive, who plays the enemy of the hero of this story, would have played the role of Clive if Colman hadn't been a bigger name at the box office.

"The County Chairman": This one cost about $2,000,000 to produce, one of the most expensive items about it being Will Rogers' salary. It was shot in 28 days. Cameraman Hal Mohr photographed his gal friend, Evelyn Venable, and didn't spare any film to get good closeups. He just kept taking them. It was immediately after this flicker was completed that Mr. Mohr and Miss Venable eloped and became Mr. and Mrs. There was a scene in the flicker in which Will Rogers was to twirl a rope. Rogers absolutely refused to do it. He said that was his vaudeville act and he wanted to keep it, just in case he had to go back to vaudeville.

"DAVID COPPERFIELD": Another flicker which cost $1,000,000 or more to make. Where do they get the money? It was 14 months in preparation and took three months of shooting time. Producer David Selznick, Director George Cukor and Scenarist Howard Estabnook went to England to get in the atmosphere and collect Dickens data. They returned with atmosphere, data and Hugh Walpole, who did the adaptation and played the role of the vicar—he delivers the sermon from the pulpit—in the flicker.

The censors read the completed script and readily approved.

There was much hullaballo about finding a youngster to play David Copperfield. About 500 boys were given screen tests for the role—and a screen test costs about $500.

Freddie Bartholomew came all the way from England because he claimed he was meant to play David Copperfield. He arrived in Hollywood with his aunt, purely on speculation. It is his first picture work. While you watch the picture, it may seem to you that Freddie is too conscious of the camera and is always looking into it. Really, Freddie is looking at Director George Cukor, who is behind the camera and who is acting away and Freddie is trying to mimic him.

Hagerstown Wants Curfew!

Children Off Streets at 10 P. M. May Be Order Soon, Because of Complaints of Juvenile Delinquency Now Reaching Police Department.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Hagerstown is going to have a curfew law, if the police department has anything to say about it.

Numerous complaints of juveniles roaming the streets late at night and an increase in juvenile delinquency will be brought to the attention of the mayor and city council at its February meeting, with the recommendation that a curfew ordinance be enacted ordering children to be home at 10 p. m. in the winter, with an hour more allowed in summer.

Hagerstown, many years ago, had a curfew law which prohibited children being on the streets, except if accompanied by an adult, after 10 p. m. at night.

"The time to prevent children from becoming criminals is in their tender years," said William Peters, chief of detectives here. Juvenile delinquency has been responsible for many crimes here, Peters pointed out.

"Once a boy is put behind prison bars he automatically becomes a criminal in the eyes of the law," he said, "and it is the duty for parents to keep their children off the streets late at night and the chances are they never will be placed behind the bars."

Prison Sentences Check Business Of Moonshiners

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.)—Washington County moonshiners were reported today to be closing shop as a result of penitentiary sentences given in Federal court to two of their number.

Judge W. Calvin Chestnut sentenced Luther A. Eaton, Eakes Mill, to a year and a day in the Federal penitentiary for the illegal operation of an untaxed still and George Dietrich, an old offender, was sentenced to 15 months for a similar offense.

The moonshining business has been anything but profitable in recent months, not alone because of the harassment by Federal agents, but because there is little market for the illicit manufactured liquor, it is said. The price has dropped from $10 a gallon during the prohibition period to as low as $2 a a gallon.

Salesmen are finding it almost impossible to make sales of various commodities in the moonshine district now. Moonshiners, when the trade was brisk, were reported to be good spenders and usually bought a new automobile every year.

Red Men Honor Twilley, 40 Years With Order

Salisbury, Md., Jan. 20 (AP).—National and State officials of the Order of Red Men will attend special induction ceremonies here tomorrow night, in honor of E. E. Twilley, sachem of the degree team of Modoc Tribe, No. 104.

Twilley will retire after 40 years with the organization. He is a past Great Sachem of Maryland, and is credited with having adopted more "pale faces" into the order than any three comparable officials.

Floyd Crowe's Will Leaves Eldest Son $1

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 20 (AP). When the will of Floyd Crowe, of Frostburg, was filed for probate here, it was revealed that Crowe's eldest son, Eldridge, was to receive $1—after his expenses had been paid.

The remainder of the estate was to be divided among five other children.

Janitor, Judge Trade Seats

Courthouse Attendant Takes Place on Bench, While Former Jurist, Retiring After Contest, Gets Job as Overseer at Martinsburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—From courthouse janitor to membership on the three-man Berkeley County court for one man, and exactly the reverse process for another, was the record made here yesterday.

Amos Dunham, until last year, had been serving as overseer of the courthouse. He announced during the summer as a candidate for an unexpired term on the county court, and after a test case had been made as to whether there was such a short term, he was elected. He took office shortly after the November election, and January 1 he was made president of the court.

He took the place previously occupied by J. O. McKown, Democrat, whom he defeated at the election. McKown previously had been named to the bench after a long-drawn-out court process in which ultimately action of the State Legislature and the Governor was necessary. The contest was between him and William M. Johnson, Republican, who was seeking reelection. The vote at the 1932 election—approximately 13,000 ballots—had been divided exactly even, so established after court tests. Johnson retired after McKown's elevation.

Yesterday the county court named Johnson attendant at the courthouse, in the place which Dunham—now on the bench—had previously filled.

Johnson is at present in a hospital suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Grange Files Protest Against Military Camp's Target Range

Fairfax and Falls Church Plan Joint Birthday Ball; Kiwanis Trustee to Be Speaker at Rotary Dinner Scheduled for Tonight.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 243, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

A resolution protesting against the establishment of a target range at Fort Humphreys military reservation near Accotink Bay was adopted by Mount Vernon Grange at its meeting held at Sherwood Hall Saturday night. The secretary was instructed to write to Maj. R. W. Crawford, Corps of Engineers, notifying him of the action of the grange.

William J. Cleveland, of Pioneer Grange, outlined to the organization plans of the Fairfax County Welfare Board to establish a child welfare center in the old county almshouse building, west of Fairfax.

H. M. Gaston, past master of Pioneer Grange, installed the newly elected officers as follows: A. Harmon Roberts, master; Herbert Baker, overseer; Mrs. Margaret Cox, lecturer; Walter Dinsmore, steward; Stephen Taylor, assistant steward; Kenneth Baker, chaplain; George C. Gillingham, treasurer; Miss Margaret Williams, secretary; Alex Williams, gatekeeper; Miss Mary Gillingham, Ceres; Mrs. Mary H. Scheeler, Pomona; Miss Dorothy Smith, Flora; Mrs. N. J. Collins, lady assistant steward, and N. J. Collins, member of the executive committee.

Mrs. Martin T. Webb, William J. Cleveland and W. H. Carrico, members of Pioneer Grange, assisted in the installation.

Montgomery County Reports Gain in Relief

Rockville, Md., Jan. 20 (AP).—The monthly report of the Montgomery County Welfare Board, prepared by Miss Dorothy Everson, executive secretary, shows 657 families in the county received relief during December either in work or in cash.

An increase of 90 cases over the November figure was reported.

Crash at Hagerstown Kills V. M. Meredith

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.). V. M. Meredith, 86, proprietor of a local marble plant, died at the Washington County Hospital two hours after being struck by the automobile of Orville T. Beachley, Williamsport, while he was walking in the street this morning.

Beachley told authorities he was blinded by the snow.

Paralysis Victims Treated

Berkeley Springs Unit of State Foundation Inaugurated; 20 Youngsters Go to School, Receive Muscle Buildup.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—A group of children, chosen from needy families of West Virginia, are taking a new lease on life here where they, victims of infantile paralysis as the result of infantile paralysis, are being treated by the new West Virginia Foundation for Crippled Children.

The first group to be treated is composed of 20 youngsters ranging in age from 6 to 14 years. All are children who have recovered from infantile paralysis within the last five years, but who are left with infirmities which, if neglected, would prevent them from earning a living.

Business men of Berkeley Springs have pledged themselves to provide food for the first group of children for a six-months' period. The house, donated for a year by the group of Berkeley Springs men who own it, has been remodeled under the West Virginia Relief Administration as a project in health and rehabilitation. The staff who care for and teach the youngsters is composed of graduate nurses and teachers, headed by Miss Mildred Brock, graduate of the Charleston General Hospital School of Nursing.

The new clinic was established at Berkeley Springs because of the mineral waters in the springs of the State Park here. Here the children will receive muscle reeducation, or exercises and massage, since the high mineral content of the water in the pools lessens the pull of gravity, enabling the children to exercise in the water with comparative ease.

Regular classes in school work are held daily, and Sunday school in addition. Special classes in weaving, basketry, manual training and other vocations will be suited to the individual, thus providing a trade for the future and stimulating the desire for accomplishment. Efforts of the staff are directed not only to physical rehabilitation but to mental training as well, in adjusting the youngsters to a world from which they have been kept by illness and the inability to join in the everyday life of others.

Maj. Francis W. Turner is head of the State advisory board for the institution, while J. A. Proctor, of Berkeley Springs, heads the local advisory board. Dr. Howard G. Weiler, of Wheeling, is the orthopedist.

Stafford Farmer, Ill, Ends Life With Gun

Robert Campbell Shoots Self in Head.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Despondent because of a lengthy period of ill-health, Robert Lee Campbell, 57-year-old farmer, of Rock Hill, Stafford County, ended his life yesterday by shooting himself in the head.

Campbell left his home to go hunting. When he did not return in a few hours relatives became worried and began a search. His body was found beside a tree, a single-barrel shotgun at his side.

Dr. J. C. Gordon, Stafford County coroner, rendered a verdict of suicide.

Mrs. Essie Racey Hurt As Her Car Overturns

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Mrs. Essie Racey, of Kenyon street northwest, Washington, sustained lacerations early today when the car in which she was riding skidded on the Richmond-Washington highway, 12 miles north of here, and overturned twice.

Mrs. Racey was treated at Mary Washington Hospital here.

Old Church's Repair Sought

Rector at Leonardtown Is Raising Funds to Restore St Andrew's.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.). The Rev. Jesse M. B. Woodrow, rector of St. Andrew's Parish here, is raising funds for repairs to Old St. Andrew's P. E. Church, 4 miles from Leonardtown.

This brick edifice was built in 1766 and is one of the handsomest old colonial churches in the State of Maryland. It has been found that new piers are needed to replace those now decaying and several pillars need to be repaired. The interior also needs a new coat of paint. Later repairs on the outside of the building will be undertaken.

The records of this parish are intact and perfectly legible, dating back to 1753 and record the plans for the building of this church in 1766. On this church register are the names of many prominent men, who took active part in the colony and some of them and their descendants are buried in the churchyard. Owing to bad roads and a dwindling congregation the old church was closed some years ago and only used intermittently, but it is hoped to repair it now and hold services there each Sunday in warm weather.

Bishop Freeman of the Diocese of Washington, which also includes southern Maryland, has expressed a desire to make a shrine of this old church in memory of those pioneer builders of long ago.

Aid to Braves Presages Pay Cuts

Many Slashes, Including Those of Giant Stars, Already Made.

Brooklyn May Escape; Bob Quinn Considers Player Auctions.

By George Kenney.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Wholesale salary cuts will be in order virtually throughout the National League this summer, affecting players, coaches, scouts, trainers and, in fact, all employes of the eight clubs in the circuit, it was indicated today.

The decision to cut salaries was another aftermath of last Friday's 18-hour ear-bending endurance contest by the older major circuit's magnates and Ford C. Frick, perplexed new prexy of the league, in their efforts to save Boston from the racing greyhounds which threaten to evict the Braves from their ball park. The cuts will be justified on the plea that the magnates again had to rescue Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves, and his fellow stockholders from financial difficulties to preserve the league as an eight-club organization.

Many Already Made.

Many of the cuts already have been made, particularly in the case of the New York Giants, whose contracts were drawn after Fuchs stormed the major league meetings in December with his threat to turn over Braves Field to the greyhound promoters unless his colleagues came across with fresh financial help.

Among the first of the athletes to have their earnings trimmed—and thereby forced to contribute to the rescue of the Braves—were Butter-fingered Gus Mancuso, the Giants' No. 1 catcher; Carl Hubbell, the league's leading southpaw and most effective hurler in point of earned runs, and Hughey Critz, star second sacker.

Others on the Giants, notably Joey Moore and Mel Ott, respectively the left and right fielders, have not returned their contracts and are reported holding out for restoration of the salary cuts said to have been made in the papers offered them. Ott has been quoted as saying he has yet to receive his contract, but the Giant officials say it went out many weeks ago to his Louisiana home.

Dodgers May Escape.

That the cuts are general, with the possible exception of Brooklyn, was further indicated when Chuck Klein, Chicago's fence-busting slugger, got his first glimpse at the contract offered him by the Cubs a few days ago and forthwith announced he would not sign, and by the fact that several others have sent back their contracts unsigned. The Cubs sought to justify the cuts by pointing to the $600,000 lost by the club in the last three years and the new outlay of money necessary to save the Braves' firm from ruin.

Brooklyn's Dodgers, however, may escape, Bob Quinn, business manager, announced today there would be no wage cuts by that club this year. He added, however, that instead he may dispose of several of his players to the highest bidder.

Ired Carnera Fans Rip Down Rio Ring

23,000 on Hand; Bout Off Until Tomorrow.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 20 (AP).—An infuriated mob tore down the ring in Fluminese Stadium today when refused rainchecks after Primo Carnera's heavyweight match with Ervin Klausner had been postponed because of rain.

About 23,000 spectators had gathered in the stadium to see the former heavyweight champion box Klausner. A sudden downpour forced postponement of the fight until Tuesday night.

Through a misunderstanding, it was explained, officials declined to issue rainchecks to the customers. Enraged, the spectators poured out of their seats and tore down the ring.

Naval fusileers answered a riot call and prevented further damage after a vigorous battle in which clubs and stones were used.

Hall and Bell Win Nassau Net Crown

Defeat Rainville, Hendrix in Straight Sets.

Nassau, B. P., Bahamas, Jan. 20 (AP).—J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., and Berkeley Bell, of New York, won the men's doubles of the First British Colonial tennis tourney in straight sets today, defeating Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, and Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., 6—0, 6—1, 6—3.

Rainville-Hendrix rallied to lead the third set, 3—0, but Bell and Hall then bore down and took six straight games and the match.

Hall defeated Bell for the singles title yesterday.

Faces Furr

JOHNNY JADICK.

Jadick Arrives To Meet Furr Tonight

Asserts He Has Never Lost Title Ross and Klick Will Battle For.

AT his physical peak and admittedly on edge for tonight's scheduled 10-round boxing feature with Phil Furr at the Washington Auditorium, clever Johnny Jadick breezed into Washington late yesterday. He was accompanied by Manager Johnny Burns.

"How can Frankie Klick defend a junior welterweight boxing title against Barney Ross when he never boasted a claim to it in the first place?" Jadick asked local sports writers last night.

"The title was abolished after I had won it from Tony Canzoneri," Jadick declared, "and if anybody's going to defend it now it'll be me. I retired undefeated as the junior welterweight champion. Klick claims to the contrary.

"If Klick or Ross want to fight for the championship they'll find me ready. And right here in Washington would suit me fine."

Jadick Is Favorite.

One of the classiest little fellows in the ring today, Jadick will be an established favorite over Furr tonight, being quoted at odds ranging from 2 to 1 to 3 to 1.

Former world's junior welter king and twice conqueror of Canzoneri, Furr must spot the Philadelphia phantom plenty of class. From the standpoint of pure punching potency, however, Phil is far the more impressive, his booming right hand and improved left hook proving dynamic weapons when they connect.

That Furr will stake a two-fisted attack against Jadick's ring generalship was admitted by the Southwest youngster last night. Furthermore, it was obvious in workouts last week that Phil would resort to pile driving, the District welterweight champion abandoning all semblance of defense and going in

Bowser, Bowdoin Grid Coach, Out in Shake-up

Brunswick, Me., Jan. 20 (AP).—The post-season shake-up in football coaches today added Charles W. Bowser, of Bowdoin, to the list of the "outs."

Gridiron mentor of the Polar Bears for five years, Bowser relinquished the reins by resignation. Kenneth C. M. Sills, president of the college, announced last night after a meeting of the executive committee of the governing board.

Grid Helmet Ruling Hits Schools

Virginia and Maryland Are Among 33 States Facing Order.

Step Taken to Reduce Injuries; District Is Not Affected.

By John R. Vosburgh.

LIKE a fertile spot in the desert, the District now stands as the sole surviving area in this section of the country where a high school boy may play football bareheaded.

The recent decision of the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations prohibiting schools in 33 States from allowing schoolboy gridders to play without helmets cracks down on more than 10,000 high and prep school football players in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

While all four of these States are under the control of the federation, the District, a nonmember, is totally unaffected by the ruling. In Virginia, where scholastic football has thrived for years, approximately 200 high schools and 15 prep schools must obey the federation's orders, with about 100 schools in West Virginia doing likewise, 40 in Maryland and at least 400 in Pennsylvania.

To Affect Alexandrians.

Feeling the new regulation especially will be Alexandria's fast high school eleven, of which at least four or five players went through the season without headgear. Lee Fones, of the Twins, one of the flashiest backs in the Washington area, played every game on the schedule with a blond pompadour as his cranium's sole protection.

Washington-Lee High, of Ballston, also will feel the ruling, for several of the Little Generals displayed a preference to playing without helmets. The Episcopal High eleven of Alexandria is another team affected in nearby ranks, and Georgetown Prep also.

The District escaped another federation ruling calling for "revision of the unnecessary roughness clause providing greater safety for the forward passer after the ball has left his hands." It was the continual, but legal hurrying of the passer by Tech which last fall served to produce the lamentable Tech-Western "riot" and cancellation of the interhigh series.

Move to Cut Injuries.

The rule now reads that a player "obviously out of play" can not be run into or "taken out," as the term is known in football, and specifies that the forward passer "often is out of the play." The federation apparently would have the rule read that the forward passer is "always out of play," feeling that this precaution as well as the headgear rule would cut down the number of injuries and fatalities to high school players, which showed a marked increase in 1934.

Applying particularly to the smaller Virginia and Maryland schools, another rule was recommended calling for elimination of unkempt playing fields which invite injuries otherwise preventable. The Allegany High School field in Cumberland, Md., for instance, is so notoriously raw, having a surface of stony, rock-like dirt, that Alleghany's fine teams is attributed to the fact that the boys carrying the ball are "ground shy."

John Paul Collins, chairman of the interhigh faculty advisory board, asserted that the District would not subscribe to the federation's rules, saying that the coaches have always followed safe and sane tactics here, although a certain number of boys have always played without headgear. Blackie Heatwole, Tech's All-High half back, and Bob Hart, Eastern's star back, were two of the five or six gridmen playing without helmets for much of the season.

Need Games? See Joe.

Unlimited and 145-pound basket ball teams seeking games may secure opponents by calling Joe Cohen's Columbian League Sandlot Booking House, Columbia 2817, between 5 and 6 p. m.

North Carolina Leading With Five Wins

Clemson New 'Dark Horse;' Gains Technical Tie for First Place.

RICHMOND, Jan. 20 (AP).—North Carolina's fast-moving White Phantoms counted five consecutive victories today in their race for the Southern Conference championship.

Picking up decisions over Virginia and Maryland during the week, the Tarheels continued to show the class that has kept them at the head of the procession since they outpointed Washington and Lee's defending champions earlier in the season.

Meanwhile, trouble broke out in another quarter, with Clemson's Tigers showing surprising strength in overwhelming N. C. State—conqueror of Duke—44 to 21, to give them a technical tie with North Carolina for the leadership.

Checks Late Rally.

State had to withstand a second half rally to outpoint Duke, 28 to 25, in the most closely contested game of the week, but Maryland and North Carolina put on the headliner at College Park, with the undefeated Tarheels easing out a 39-to-31 victory before 4,000 spectators.

Jason Glace, North Carolina center, in addition to a brilliant floor game, scored 13 points to pace the Tarheels. North Carolina led 24-16 at the half and was never headed.

Virginia was easier for the North Carolinians who triumphed, 36-20.

Washington and Lee moved up into third place behind North Carolina and Clemson with two victories and one defeat. In their only conference game of the week, the Generals overpowered Virginia Tech, 49 to 19.

Three Games This Week.

Virginia Tech will participate in all of the three games on the week's lean card, starting with Virginia at Blacksburg, Wednesday, and then moving South to play North Carolina State at Raleigh Friday and Duke at Durham Saturday.

The standings:

Gridiron Staffs Face Dozen More Changes

By Alan Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP).—Although the precarious profession of college football coaching, on the whole, seems to be approaching greater stability with the advent of the new year, it is a fact that nine changes of major importance have been made since the tumult and the shouting of the 1934 season subsided.

At least a dozen others in various parts of the country will be replaced before another playing campaign puts the damper on the reform wave or silences the anvil chorus of alumni.

Latest among the vacancies is the head coaching job at Colorado University, where W. J. Saunders struck a new note by resigning yesterday, with two more years to go on a five-year contract, in order to take up the business of rounding up cattle instead of football talent. Another major spot to be filled is at Southern Methodist, where Madison (Batty) Bell seems a logical candidate to replace Ray Morrison, newly installed as the veteran Dan McGugin's successor at Vanderbilt.

Morrison follows Francis Schmidt, Ohio State's successful new coach, out of the Southwest Conference, where two of the best first-year coaching jobs of 1934 were turned in by Jimmie Kitts, of Rice, and Jack Chevigny, of Texas.

Records Stressed.

Amid all the altruistic talk heard from the academic side of the collegiate fences, it is noteworthy that dispatches have stressed the successful records of the following figures in the coaching shake-up: Dick Harlow to Harvard from Western Maryland, Don McCallister to South Carolina from Waite High, Toledo; Lynn Waldorf to Northwestern from Kansas State, and Don Fauhot to Missouri from Kirksville (Mo.) Teachers.

In the general analysis of these shifts, not so much has been written about McAllister, but there is excellent reason for believing South Carolina knew what it was doing when it plucked this 31-year-old coach from interscholastic ranks.

McAllister and his first assistant, Frank Pauly, a former Washington and Jefferson line star, have been in charge at Waite High for four years and won four city championships in a town where the schoolboy competition is as keen as any place in the country. As a result, Waite High now has a stadium which seats 15,000 and would do credit to any college. McAllister, a University of Illinois product, coached school teams at Palatka and Miami, Fla., and his home town, Carmi, Ill., before attracting unusual attention at Toledo.

Filled From Ranks.

It is notable, from the standpoint of stability, that four major vacancies have been filled, so to speak, from the ranks. Wes Fry was elevated from back-field coach to head coach at Kansas State; Leonard (Stub) Allison replaced William (Navy Bill) Ingram at the University of California after serving as an assistant; Maj. W. H. Britton stepped up to replace Maj. R. R. Neyland at Tennessee, and Louisiana State picked its track coach, Benny Moore, to fill the post vacated by Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones, the Artilleryman who defied Huey Long.

Mississippi State is looking for a successor to Capt. A. R. MacKechnie who resigned recently. Duquesne must replace Joe Bach, the former Notre Dame star who left to take the job of coaching Pittsburgh's professional club. Knox has narrowed down to ten the list of candidates for the job of pulling old Siwash out of the ruck. Other colleges where head coaching changes have been or will be made include Swarthmore, Dickinson, Loyola of the South; John Hopkins, Western Maryland and University of Rochester.

Richmond Five Leads Rivals In Virginia

Spiders Are Only Unbeaten Team in State as Wasps Topple.

RICHMOND, Jan. 20 (AP).—Richmond's Spiders today boasted the only unbeaten college basket ball team in the State, a team that has run its victory string to eight games without a reverse.

While the Spiders won three in a row, Emory and Henry's fine basket ball team that has made a phenomenal record in recent years, amazed Virginia's sports followers by dropping three consecutive contests.

After starting the week with a victory over Catholic University, the Wasps lost to George Washington, 35 to 28; Richmond, 38 to 31, and were nosed out by Tennessee last night, 32 to 29.

Meanwhile, the Generals of Washington and Lee, who have shown one of the strongest teams in the Old Dominion, kept pace with the Spiders in the State race by bowling over Virginia and V. P. I. while Richmond was whipping V. P. I., Emory and Henry and Roanoke.

The Generals, defending the Southern Conference championship, they won in last year's sensational tournament, have been whipped this season only by North Carolina's Tar Heels and then by the scant margin of 2 points.

Giants Conquer Coast Stars, 21 to 0

New York Pro Eleven Is Victor in Charity Gridiron Clash.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—The New York Giants professional football team today defeated Ernie Nevers Pacific Coast All-Stars, 21 to 0, in a charity game at Kezar Stadium.

Approximately 25,000 people saw the smooth-working Giants coast to easy victory over the Western squad.

Pojello Resumes Londos Bout Quest

Will Oppose Stan Sokolis Here Thursday.

A five-year search for a title shot at Jimmy Londos will be resumed at the Washington Auditorium Thursday night when Karl Pojello, Lithuanian wrestling master, opposes Stan Sokolis in 30-minute support of the Ed (Don) George-Jim Browning feature.

Ranked as Londos' most persistent challenger since the golden Greek finally has condescended to resume hostilities with his old enemy, Dick Shikat, Pojello furthermore intimates he would lik nothing better than to corner King Londos right here in Washington.

Though barely topping the 190-pound mark, Pojello's nimbleness afoot and general skill have established him as a villian of long standing, some of his brightest victories being registered over opponents outweighing him from 40 to 50 pounds.

Bullock, Quarles Meet in Norfolk

Billy Bullock, young Washington lightweight, and Norman Quarles, the scrappy North Carolinian, have been matched for a return bout for Wednesday night at Norfolk, Bullock's manager, Harry Groves, announced last night.

Groves has completed arrangements with Joe Cline, Norfolk promoter, to have Bullock take another crack at the former University of North Carolina ace and Southern Conference intercollegiate champion. They will fight eight rounds.

Two other local leather-pushers will be on the card, Bullock said. Sammy Seaman, Alexandria, will pair off with Billy Landers, Norfolk, in a bantamweight eight-round semifinal, and Mickey Flanagan, Washington, is matched for eight sessions with Reds Journee, Portsmouth, Va., in a middleweight clash.

Kansas Star Breaks Par By 5 Shots

36-Hole Score of 140 Best in Tourney at Sacramento.

Texan Shoots 68 for Second Place; Two Tie With 143's.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Jan. 20 (AP).—Irons and a putter which defied a cold winter day brought Harold McSpaden, slender young Kansas City (Kans.) professional, into the lead of the $2,500 Sacramento open golf tournament at the end of 36 holes today.

McSpaden, who has a reputation for streaks of brilliant golf, gave it an airing despite the chilly weather and toured the 6,787-yard municipal course in 67 strokes, five better than par. With his 73 of Saturday, he leaped into the lead at 140 strokes.

Finishing under the last rays of a sun which tried hard but succeeded miserably in warming the atmosphere, Kim Demaret, of Galveston, Tex., who had 73 yesterday, shaded par by four strokes and landed in second place with 73—68—141.

Lacy Tied at 143.

A stroke back of him appeared the first of the quartet that led the field yesterday with 70's, Charles Lacy, of Great Neck, N. Y., who added a 73 today for a 36-hole score of 143. He was tied by Emory Zimmerman, of Portland, Oreg., who turned in a 68 to lead his 75 of Saturday.

Gene Sarazen, of New York, another of Saturday's quarter, could do no better than a 74, two over par, and his 36-hole score of 144 was matched by John Perelli, who mans a golf course at picturesque Lake Tahoe. Perelli was one of the select few who broke 70 today, turning in a 69 to go with a 75 shot on Saturday.

Five more players were grouped at 145, five strokes behind the par-shattering McSpaden, and three included the two remaining members of Saturday's front-runners, Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., and Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., Each slumped to a 75 today where each had taken but 70 strokes Saturday.

Three in 145 Class.

Bracketed with them at 145 strokes were Ted Longworth, another sharpshooter of Portland, who had 73—72; Clarence Clark, the husky Blumfield, N. J., professional, who added a 74 today to his 71 of Saturday, and Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh, 74—71.

Back of these leaders but within striking distance of them were a group of the game's outstanding players. Jimmy Thomson, the long-hitter from Long Beach, Calif., had 71—75—146, while Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., winner last week of the Los Angeles Open, shot par today for 75—72—147, and Willie Goggin, San Francisco, cut a stroke off perfect figures on the second 18 holes with 76—71—147.

Johnny Revolta, the Milwaukee flash, turned in 76—72—148 and was tied with Walter Hagen, the old master from Detroit, who shot two 74's.

Shute, Runyan Trail.

With hardly more than an outside chance were Ky Laffoon, Chicago, 76—73—149; Abe Espinosa, Chicago, 75—74—149; Denny Shute, Philadelphia, 72—77—149, and Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., P. G. A. champion, 75—75—150.

McSpaden, who shot a sensational round last winter in the Santa Monica, Calif., pro-amateur best ball matches, an individual 62, 9 strokes under par, and captured the Pasadena Open this winter with a 72-hole medal score of 281, had six birdies on his card today.

The end of the day's play found the low 50 professionals and low 10 amateurs and ties qualifying for the final 36 holes of play tomorrow. It took 155 strokes to get a place in the last night.

Pro Boxing Out At Gym—Heurich

Owner Refuses to Permit Bouts This Season.

Professional boxing matches will not be held in Heurich's new gymnasium this season, Chris Heurich, jr., owner, last night said.

Heurich said that he had been approached by several promoters with respect to renting the place for weekly bouts, but turned "thumbs down" on each one.

Heurich does not plan to promote boxing bouts himself, he declared, but said he might lease the gym in 1936 to some matchmaker.

The District A. A. U. is expected to seek permission from young Heurich to stage its annual boxing tournament in the new gym and Heurich already has indicated that he might consent to such bouts.

For boxing matches the new gym could seat close to 3,000 persons.

Politicians' Bellows of 'Where's Our Cut?' Checked Judge Fuchs' Plans for Dog Racing

Dissension in N.Y.U. Ranks Reported; What, With 27 Wins in Row?

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The real lowdown on the Boston baseball mess is that Judge Fuchs saw a sudden fortune in the pooches, but when he phenagled his lease and new corporation papers to get it he found a row of politicians with well-manicured dukes out whispering, "Where's our cut, Emil?" . . . If you thought John Heydler, as National League head, was a stuffed shirt, get a load of those windbaggy statements his successor, Ford Frick, is now making.

English Fighter Holds Freddie Miller to Draw

London, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, Ohio, who has boosted his claims to the world featherweight championship in a victorious British campaign, met his first setback tonight in boxing ten rounds to a draw with Benny Caplan, of London.

Miller won the early rounds and had Caplan on the floor in the fifth, when the bell saved the British boxer, and also was winning handily at the close. Caplan, however, a smart boxer, frequently made Miller miss and made a great battle.

Hargaden, of G. U., Supplants Howell for City Scoring Lead

Ollie Tipton Boasts Best Average

Goldfadden Is Fourth; Lieb, Keyser Enter First Ten Group.

MOVING along with the same dull ruggedness of a marathon runner and the persistence of a steel drill, Ed Hargaden, of Georgetown, finds himself out in front of the field as the local dribblers strike off another lap in their individual scoring race.

The Georgetown captain ousts Capt. Jimmy Howell, of George Washington, who drops to second place with 90 points—3 less than the steady, unexcitable Hargaden. Howell's position is precarious, with Ollie Tipton, of Wilson Teachers, a scant 6 points behind, and improving with each game.

Tipton, incidentally, boasts the best scoring average, a distinction he shared with Hargaden last week, with an even 12 points a game. Hargaden is next with 11.61, an average that has varied only a fraction of a point over a period of three weeks.

Ben Goldfadden, who ranked second to Howell last week, drops to fourth, followed by Hal Kiesel, who was third a week ago, and Hermie Schmarr, of Catholic U. The former two are G. W. men.

Two newcomers enter the first ten group as Bernie Lieb, C. U. center and an All-District selection last year, ranks ninth with 58 points, and Cliff Keyser, Wilson center, tenth with 50.

with Bill Bennings.

Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 20.

Dear Al:

Things picked up yesterday from a Bennings angle. We were lucky enough to supply three winners. Epaulet, $22; Foxy Agnes, $14.80, and Wha Hae, $3.50 were the day's successes. Pardon me for bringing it up, but Peedeeque ran that race I have been predicting. Beaten two lengths at 27 to 1, he paid $32.80 to place. It seems there was a tip going around yesterday on Old Judge. After he stepped home at a $28.50 mutuel, Trainer Joe said, "I had that thing given to me this morning." Clocker Mike asked, "Well, why didn't you play him?" "I was waiting for more definite information," replied Joe. "You got it," came back Mike. "There it is on the results board." I expect Mike and Joe to set the date for their foot race around the track on any day now. There is a rumor that Mike worked a quarter the other morning in 1:05 3-5. I'm trying to verify it. In the meanwhile, try these.

BILL.

First race—Protagonist probably will draw Wayne Wright for the saddle work and I expect the pair to cut a keen figure in the running of this sprint. The colt is asked to give away weight to most of the field, but I believe he can make the grade. Buy Straight has been well backed several times. Gets in very light tomorrow and will have Georgie Watson up. Easter Nation for the show end.

Second race—Laura S. is said to be a promising filly. She has worked kindly and appears to be one that will not linger long in the maiden ranks. Anything can happen, of course, in this limit field of youngsters. Glory Greenock would have to be dealt with if allowed to run. Westys Duchess for the show.

Third race—Highest Point is far too fit to be trifled with, even in this kind of company. All I ask is a good ride from Lynch. My Purchase is ready to run and will have something to say about the purse distribution here. Erebus would be dangerous if in action.

Fourth race—Dancing Doll showed her real form over at the other track and if Meade rides as he can, I'm expecting a set of brackets. Currants has worked well and may press the top one. Enthusiasm to take care of the others.

Fifth race—The Aenead gets one more chance. I know this one has the speed, but I can't explain his racing. Unknown Soldier will be the one to beat. Kissinbug, in with only 98 pounds, could make her presence felt.

Sixth race—Stone Martin may be sent to the post with his ears pricking. If he is, look out for one of those front-running efforts. Haggerson's last deserves consideration. Band Wagon may make a money appearance.

Seventh race—Al Neiman will have Arcaro to do the guiding and I'm going to string along. Foxland Hall and Guiding Light to take care of the place and show awards.

Friedman Off to Get Doyle, Irish Fighter

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Walter Friedman sailed aboard the Deutschland today for Cork to escort Jack Doyle, large Irish heavyweight, to the United States.

Doyle, according to Manager Friedman, has won 36 of his 37 professional fights by knockouts. In the other bout, the Irishman fouled Jack Peterson, British heavyweight champion, and was disqualified.

Defeat of Iowa Gives Big Ten Open Race

Indiana's Late Rally Wins; Northwestern Ends Losing Streak.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (AP).—Thanks to Indiana's Hoosiers, who have declared themselves in the running, the Big Ten basket ball title race is an open affair instead of an Iowa runaway.

The Hawkeyes appeared well on their way to a fifth straight victory last night at Iowa City, enjoying a comfortable lead midway of the second half. The Hoosiers, however, staged a furious rally which accounted for a 40-to-35 victory, and Iowa's first defeat of the season. Indiana's attack was well rounded, with Willard Kehrt and Lester Stout showing the way, while John Barko, the leading scorer of the league, again paced the Hawks.

Northwestern Wins.

Northwestern finally got started after losing three straight, defeating Wisconsin, 36 to 31, to take a reef in the Badgers' championship hopes. The Wildcats used only five men in handing Wisconsin its second defeat in five games, and for the first time since the title season started, played up to form. Lyle Fisher led the Wildcats with 13 points, but a pair of sophomores, Tug Blume and Hi Bender, contributed the speed lacking in previous conference games.

Minnesota also remained in the running by trouncing Chicago, 42 to 33, at Chicago, in spite of some heroic shooting by Bill Haarlow, the Maroon's star forward. Haarlow accounted for 22 points, the high scoring mark of the campaign, but could not match the combined efforts of George Roscoe, Gordon Norman and James Baker. Minnesota moved into fourth place with two victories and one defeat, while Chicago suffered its third straight defeat.

Michigan Folds Up.

Michigan's patchwork line-up gave Illinois a stiff tussle for 20 minutes, but folded up in the last half and the Illini won, 34 to 22, for their third victory in five games. The Wolverines held Illinois to a one-point advantage at half time, but were outscored, 21 to 10, in the second period. Coach Franklin Cappon, of Michigan, refused to lift the suspension on five veterans who failed to heed training rules, and Michigan played with only one regular, Center Matt Patanelli.

Minnesota and Wisconsin meet in the top of tomorrow night's program, while Northwestern goes to Michigan, and Chicago tackles Ohio State at Columbus. Ohio State meets Northwestern at Evanston Saturday, while the Maroons play Notre Dame at South Bend, in the only other games of the week.

McLean Beaten, 31-25, By Company F Varsity

Company F, Hyattsville, broke even with McLean A. C. in basket ball yesterday at the Hyattsville Armory. The Company F varsity trounced McLean's varsity, 31-25, while the McLean reserves turned back the Soldier second team, 26-23.

Rufus Vincent, former University of Maryland star, starred for Company F varsity, scoring 10 points.

1,600 See Mules Beat Heurichs, 43-34; Gym Opened

Russell Tops Attack With 17 Points

Bucky Harris Tosses Up First Ball Before Capacity Crowd.

By Dave Herman.

CHRIS HEURICH's new basket ball emporium was dedicated yesterday before 1,600 fans, who jammed every available nook and corner of the gym to watch the Heurich Brewers absorb a 43-34 defeat at the hands of the high-powered Newark Mules, of the American League.

It was the largest turnout for a professional game in several years as Washington went back on the basket ball standard in a big way—a way quite reminiscent of the days when the old Palace team held sway.

A rousing ovation was given Bucky Harris, Washington baseball manager, when he tossed up the first ball to the opposing centers, Tiny Hearn, of Trenton, and Joe Croson, of Heurich. The applause was almost equally as thunderous when 92-year-old Chris Heurich, sr., and his young sportsman son, Chris Heurich, jr., were introduced. The elder Heurich was viewing his second basket ball game.

Other Baseball Men.

Among others occupying prominent seats were Joe Judge, Mike Martin, Eddie Eynon, Billy Smith, Frankie Baxter and Nick Altrock.

The game was thrillingly contested despite a nine-point difference at the finish, and the visiting stars more than lived up to their names.

Honey Russell, Trenton guard, supplied the scoring fireworks. He rang up 17 points, 7 of his goals being of the long range variety. So unerring was his eye for the basket that nearly every time he let fly a toss the ball swished through the hoops for a two-pointer. Russell probbaly would have scored 25 points had he remained until the finish. He had to catch a plane for Yonkers, N. Y., to fulfill another pro engagement, and retired with five minutes left to play.

Another dead-eye dick was Lefty Kintzing, a forward. He banged in five field goals.

Lou Spindell Stars.

Although failing to score but two field goals, one in each half, Lou Spindell, Nate Holman's C. C. N. Y. protege, starred with his passing and floorwork—some of the best seen here in many a moon. Spindell, suffering with a torn ligament in his arm, took only five cracks at the basket the entire game, but unquestionably he was an important cog in the team's attack.

A whirling dervish, he lured in the Heurich sentinels time and again with his clever bounce and bullet pass, and paved the way for goals by Benny Borgeman, Kintzing and Russell.

Moon Evans, coach-captain of Heurich, led the home team in scoring with 11 points, while Ralph Bennie chalked up eight. Especially commendable was the work of Center Croson, who held six-foot seven-inch Tiny Hearn, former Georgia Tech center, to two field goals, both from mid-floor.

Takes Lead of 7 to 0.

Trenton drew first blood and led, 7-0, after five minutes. Heurich came to life and trailed 11-8 after 10 minutes. Evans, All-American Bozey Berger and Ralph Bennie fired away with deadly skill at the hoops, and five minutes later Heurich moved into a 14-13 lead. With 30 seconds to go before half time, Heurich led, 18-16, but Spindell dribbled through the opposition and sank one from near the free throw line to deadlock the count.

It was nip-and-tuck for the first few minutes of the second half, but Kintzing and Russell found the range of the basket, and Heurich went ahead, 29-23. It was Russell, Russell, Spindell, Russell and Kintzing in rapid succession, and the Mules trotted far into the van, 35-26, with 10 minutes remaining to clinch the game.

Sullivan, center, with 15 points, led the Flashes' attack, while Scrivener, with 12 points, starred for the Comets.

Ninety-two-year-old Christian Heurich, sr., his young son, Chris, jr., and Bucky Harris, Washington Baseball Club manager, were among those who took part in the dedicatory ceremonies yesterday at the new Heurich gym located on the second floor of the brewery. Pictured above just before the toss-up, left to right—Tiny Hearn, Trenton center; Heurich, jr., Heurich, sr., Harris, who threw up first ball, and Joe Croson, Heurich center.

Sleuths Down Sholl's Five, 31 to 28

Lead Changes Frequently; Rinaldi Victor Over Baltimoreans.

BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION got off to a flying start in the Metropolitan Amateur League yesterday at George Washington University's gym by defeating Sholl's, 1932-33 District A. A. U. champions, 31 to 28, in a thrill-packed game.

In the semipro game Rinaldi Tailors won from S. Dominic Crescents of Baltimore, 25 to 20.

The Investigation-Sholl's battle was hammer-and-tong from start to finish, with the lead shifting virtually every two minutes.

With four minutes to go, Sholl's lost its star player, Sammy Hook, guard, who was ejected for committing too many fouls. With less than two minutes left, Sholl's led by a point, but Downey Rice, forward, and Jim Thompson, center, sank rapid-fire goals for the Sleuths.

Jim Thompson's 15 points won scoring honors.

Rinaldi held a 15-11 advantage on the Crescents at the turn. Taylor, center, scored 8 points for Rinaldi, although Understein and Ronkin featured with their all-around play.

Minneapolis, Jan. 20 (AP).—Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee, United States 500-meter skating champion, won the 800-meter race featuring the invitational meet here today. His time was 1:28.4.

Among the Hunters . . .

By M. W. Meier.

SCORES of Washington sportsmen who meant to spend the week-end down in Virginia after quail, had their holiday spoiled by the unexpected snowfall.

One of these men we are especially sorry for, because as an important public official he has stuck to his desk all the past year, meaning to spend the last fortnight of the hunting season down at a favorite spot along the Virginia shore.

Conference Pulls Many.

More than a score of Washington officials, conservationists and sportsmen left for New York yesterday to attend the three-day session of the American game conference, which opens at the Hotel Pennsylvania today.

The Biological Survey will be represented by J. N. Darling, chief, and Messers Col. Sheldon, Callahan and Young. The United States Fisheries will have present its own chief, Frank Bell, who has an important place on the program as he outlines the cooperation his department plans to extend to sport fishermen.

Nature Magazine will be represented by Richard W. Westwood, editor, and the American Game Protective Association by Seth Gordon, president, and C. M. Palmer, jr.,

Plans Predatory Hunt.

Peter Nyce, the attorney, is planning something unusual for this section—a predatory hunt at his imposing country place, Wicomico Fields Manor, near Mount Victoria, to be held in the near future.

His guests will be given opportunity to show how good they are on crows, hawks and other predatory vermin which infest the Maryland countryside.

The shoot will be in the nature of a competition and Game Warden Le Compte, of Maryland, has been asked to serve as judge. There will be a few prizes and a Dutch lunch.

Distemper Warning.

Bird dog owners, whose animals have not been innoculated against distemper, are hereby duly warned that these are the days when this dread disease takes it worst toll.

Distemper can be eradicated by vaccination and the simple treatment today is harmless and effective.

119 Army Youths Awarded Insignia

Two Washingtonians Are Among Recipients.

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 20 (AP).—For participation in fall sports, 119 youths at the United States Military Academy have been awarded athletic insignia, Maj. L. D. Worsham, graduate manager of athletics, announced today. The awards were divided into 22 major "A's" for football, 21 minor "A's" for soccer and cross-country, 34 monograms for three sports, and 42 class numerals to plebes for football and soccer.

Of the major football "A's", six were awarded for distinction in two major sports, entitling the recipient to two gold stars on the bar of his "A." Those so honored and their other sport, in addition to football, were William H. Brearley, Robert M. Stillman, and Clinton U. True, lacrosse; Thomas E. Clifford, basket ball; William R. Grohs, baseball, and William R. Shuler, track.

Among those receiving minor "A's" for soccer were Thomas J. Hayes and Alvord Rutherford, both of Washington.

Duquesne U. Offers Clipper Smith Job

Due for Line Coach Post Under Flanagan.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 20 (AP).—John P. (Clipper) Smith, former Notre Dame University football star, tonight said he had been approached on the possibility of going to Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, Pa., as line coach under Christy Flanagan.

Smith, now coach of the Newark Academy team, said he was considering several coaching offers and could not say definiteily whether he had decided on any of them. Close friends, however, said he was certain to go to Duquesne and would announce his acceptance as soon as Flanagan's appointment as head coach becomes official.

Bruce High Splits In Double-Header

Westernport, Md., Jan. 20 (Spl.). Bruce High School split even in Western Maryland Interscholastic League double-header with Central High of Lonaconing here.

In the opening game Central's girls won, 19 to 16, while in the nightcap Coach John Laughlin's Bruce boys were victors, 33 to 15.

Beall High School, of Frostburg, celebrated the opening of its league campaign by defeating Barton High School in both ends of a twin bill.

Beall trounced the Barton girls, 34 to 9, and the boys won, 40 to 36.

Public Courses In Dixie Note Increases

Atlanta Municipal Links Report $10,000 Rise in Receipts.

ATLANTA, Jan. 20 (AP).—The "man in the street" golfer who stored his clubs during the depression is swinging them again.

Reports from municipal courses of the South reveal that interest in golf increased generally throughout 1934 as compared to the previous year.

Swanky courses, however, still feel the results of the "hard times" that caused patronage to suffer as the public turned to more economical pastimes offered by municipal links.

Among the larger cities, Atlanta and New Orleans showed the greatest increase in "gate" receipts, the former leading the trend with figures for 1934 totaling more than $10,000 above those for 1933. New Orleans collected approximately $3,000 more in 1934.

Figures for several representative Southern cities for the two years follow:

	1933	1934
Jacksonville	$10,000	$12,000
Atlanta	27,977	38,216
Nashville	7,282	8,281
Knoxville	5,836	5,915
Louisville	26,000	24,209
New Orleans	13,981	16,718

The increase shown by Atlanta was due primarily to the opening of Bobby Jones Course in 1934, during which that layout alone collected $11,869. This city has four other municipal links.

Louisville and Charlotte reported decreases in receipts at some of their muncipal courses.

Montgomery Teams Face 8 Teams

Rockville - Bethesda Fray on Friday May Decide County Title.

EIGHT contests, four of them league encounters, are scheduled this week for the Montgomery County courtmen, with the Rockville-Bethesda game on Friday likely to decide the title.

The Rocks went into the lead last week with their victories over Poolesville and Damascus. Sherwood made its league debut, bowing to Poolesville, and Bethesda trounced Silver Spring to remain a half game behind the leaders.

The Bethesda-Rockville game on Friday at Bethesda will be the only one between the clubs this season. Both have won eight out of nine games and even choices to capture the circuit lead.

Bethesda will play Eastern today, and is conceded its best chance to stop the District champs in years. Two series contests are on tap tomorrow; Silver Spring and Damascus clash at Damascus, and Rockville entertains Sherwood.

Bethesda Plays W. and L.

Bethesda visits Washington and Lee Wednesday, Silver Spring plays Landon at the Kensington Armory on Thursday, and Poolesville goes to Damascus in a second contest on Friday. Silver Spring concludes the week Saturday night, entertaining Mount St. Joe of Baltimore.

Francis Cubitt, Poolesville forward is leading the county scorers with 59 points, mainly due to the fact that he has played in six games. Gene Ochsenreiter, of Rockville, has the best average with 50 in 4 games.

Kentucky Leading Dixie Court Loop

Victorious in Four Tilts, Defeated in None.

Atlanta, Jan. 20 (AP).—Triumphing twice over Tulane last week, Coach Adolf Rupp's Kentucky Wildcats forged into undiputed leadership of the basket ball campaign in the Southeastern Conference.

The smoothly functioning Blue Grass cagers top the standings with four victories and no defeats, having previously conquered the Green Wave twice. Kentucky's hardwood artists, defeated only by New York University thus far, have swamped seven teams to go far ahead in points scored, amassing a total of 417 to 129 for opponents.

Tennessee and Vanderbilt trail closely in the ranks of the unbeaten Southeastern teams through three triumps over member fives. Louisiana State has chalked up two wins and Sewanee one to remain unconquered within the loop.

Shepherd Turns Back Shenandoah Teams

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Shepherd College's basket ball teams took a double-header from Shenandoah College here last night, the girls winning, 42 to 21, while the boys triumphed, 28-27.

The Shenandoah sextette was outclassed from the start of the preliminary bout. Eunice Bush, high scoring forward from Charles Town, and Ina Irvin, a Harpers Ferry High scoring star, accounted for all the points scored for Shepherd. Each scored ten goals from the field and one foul.

High and Prep Fives to Play 29 Games

Eastern, Tech, Roosevelt Face 4 Contests Each in Six Days.

A TRIFLE dazed but ready for action, the interhigh series staggers into its third week of play tomorrow, prepared for anything from an earthquake to a Roman holiday after that Westen upset of Tech last wee. With such games listed as Eastern-Tech, Tech-Central, Central-Western and Western-Roosevelt, the scedule lookes like a card of feature attractions arranged by a Tex Rickard.

The side-line sages who have been wagging their heads and declaring that Tech has gone stale may have cause for some real wagging by next Sunday. The Techmen, whom Western made appear somewhat ragged last Friday, continue their intensive schedule with four games in six days.

Three More Games.

After meeting Central tomorrow, the Maroon runs into Gonzaga Wednesday, Eastern Friday, and the Navy Plebes at Annapolis Saturday. Despite the heavy program, the boys are not particularly endangered by the staleness bugaboo with Dr. Artie Boyd standing by equipped to meet the threat with various and sundry prescriptions.

Also standing out among the 29 high and prep school games scheduled for the week are the four games facing Eastern which tackles Bethesda-Chevy Chase today, Episcopal Wednesday, Tech Friday, and Riordan (N. Y.) High Saturday. Roosevelt also is slated for four games, with Western, St. John's, Mount St. Joseph's of Baltimore, and the Georgetown freshmen as its opponents.

Western Is Favorite.

Western and Central are confining themselves solely to their series games. On the basis of its win over Tech, Western is favored to defeat Roosevelt tomorrow and stands an even choice to win against Central Friday. The Georgetowners play both of their games at Tech.

Tech, on the other hand, goes into the Central game tomorrow at Roosevelt only a slim favorite to win, and into the Eastern game Friday considerably less than that.

The week's schedule:

Today.

Eastern vs. Bethesda-Chevy Chase, at Eastern, 3:30 p. m.

Tomorrow.

Tech vs. Central (Interhigh series), at Roosevelt, 3:30 p. m.
Western vs. Roosevelt (Interhigh series), at Tech, 3:30 p. m.
Washington-Lee vs. Hyattsville, at Ballston, 3:30 p. m.
Takoma-Silver Spring vs. Damascus, at Damascus.
St. John's vs. Kendall, at St. John's, 3:30 p. m.
Friends vs. Landon, at Landon, 3:30 p. m.
Rockville High vs. Sherwood at Rockville, 3:30 p. m.

Wednesday.

Tech vs. Gonzaga, at Gonzaga, 3:30 p. m.
Eastern vs. Episcopal, at Alexandria, 3:30 p. m.
Roosevelt vs. St. John's, at Roosevelt, 3:30 p. m.
Georgetown Prep vs. St. Alban's, at Garrett Park, 3:30 p. m.
Washington-Lee vs. Bethesda-Chevy Chase, at Ballston, 3:30 p. m.

Thursday.

Landon vs. Silver Spring, at Kensington Armory.
Washington-Lee vs. Falls Church, at Ballston.

Friday.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase vs. Rockville, at Bethesda.
Eastern vs. Tech (Interhigh series), at Roosevelt, 3:30 p. m.
Western vs. Central (Interhigh series), at Tech, 3:30 p. m.

for straightaway slugging in gymnasium drills.

Though refusing to venture a flat prediction, Jadick, upon his arrival here, insisted that he entertained high hopes of decisively outpointing and possibly knocking out the local slugger.

Improvement Shown.

Defeated by Jay McCadon his last time out, Furr nevertheless demonstrated unquestioned all-around improvement. This held particularly true in the late rounds when he came back strong to all but earn a draw with the rugged Brooklyn boy.

In a six-round semifinal, Mickey Landis, slugging Scranton (Pa.) school teacher, ties up with Sid Silas, durable Hebrew welterweight. Both are hard hitters and endowed with a remarkable ability to "take it."

Joe Ferrone meets Marty Bond in another six-round number, while three four-rounders book Charley Breckenbacker vs. Sam Julian, Sammy Sweet vs. Benny Kessler, and Gene Harrington vs. Billy Wells.

Londos to Defend Title Against Lewis Jan. 31

Chicago, Jan. 20 (AP).—Ed. Strangler) Lewis is going to make another attempt to regain the world's heavyweight wrestling championship.

A return match between Lewis and Jim Londos, title holder, was closed here today for St. Louis, January 31, with Ed White, manager of Londos, accepting terms on behalf of the champion. They will wrestle one fall to a finish. Tom Packs, St. Louis promoter, landed the match by outbidding Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia.

The Jewish Community Center lassies defeated the St. Ritas of Alexandria sextet, 41 to 6, yesterday in the winner's gym.

Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

IN the midst of an acute housing shortage in Washington, buildings are being demolished throughout the city to make room for commercial parking lots, it is revealed by a group of Government employes who have just completed a survey of housing and traffic.

BAKER.

The night parking ban now in effect and extension of parking bans in the future are assailed by three committees of the District Federation of Federal Employes. The federation, whose membership extends through every department, is on record as definitely opposing the existing rule forbidding late night parking on about 60 miles of Washington streets on the grounds of a shortage of available parking space and high garage rentals.

Under Chairman Edgar Graham, Treasury, the legislative committee plans to protest to Congress in the event of further curtailment of parking rights.

Sufficient transportation facilities to relieve this and other traffic problems is demanded by the legislative committee together with the public utilities and rent and home buying committees.

William S. Kinney, War, chairman of the latter group, pointed out that lack of parking facilities is resulting in homes being torn down to provide parking lots throughout the city. He assailed this trend as being against the Government's housing policy and in the face of a current serious housing shortage.

W. E. Hoffheins, War, chairman of the utilities committee, and original proponent of a subway system, points out that with this solution of the transportation problem, automobile owners would prefer to leave their cars at home and take advantage of speedy direct transportation to the Mall area.

The Hoffheins plan differs somewhat from that advocated by People's Counsel Roberts, but aims at relieving the same congestion. Mr. Hoffheins would have the Government finance the construction, based on the concentration of Government units in the Mall area.

Dr. Leonard D. White, civil service commissioner, will speak over station WJSV at 4:45 p. m. tomorrow on "The Merit System." The address will be a part of the program of the American Federation of Government Employes in observance of National Civil Service Week.

Bill's Provision Protested.

Exemption from the civil service laws of "officers, attorneys and experts" to be appointed to the social insurance board set up under the Wagner economic security bill is protested by Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

In uncovering this "joker," Mr. Steward declares it to be further evidence of the "continued deliberate flouting of the merit system," and urges that that section of the bill be amended constructively before the security measure is finally passed by Congress.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Maestro Alex Hyde, California Red Heads and other acts; screen Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery in "Biography of a Bachelor Girl"); or to Loew's Palace (Eddie Cantor in "Kid Millions"); or to Loew's Columbia (third week of Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery and Clark Gable in "Forsaking All Others")

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon up to 2:30 p. m.

Another aid to aviation has just been introduced by two War Department employes, Samuel R. Harris, (F), and Harvey N. Lumm, (P). It is a liquid compass bowl, small and compact for special use in limited quarters.

ENTERING its fourteenth year, the thriving Tacomis Club of the Tariff Commission has elected officers for 1935 with Samuel W. Pitts heading the slate as president. Others named are:

Miss Marietta Salvant, first vice-president; Charles E. Swihart, treasurer; Mattie O. Line, (P), secretary. Mr. Pitts and Mr. Swihart held the same positions last year.

Mrs. R. C. Brown, Accounting Section, ICC, is reported recovering at her home from an operation at George Washington Hospital.

New Division Organized.

A new program of research on the fundamental problems of marketing agricultural products and the organization of a Division of Marketing Research are announced by Nils A. Olsen, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The new division will be headed by Dr. Frederick V. Waugh who has been with the bureau eight years as executive secretary of the New England Research Council which conducts marketing research. He has also done research and extension work in marketing with state divisions of markets in Massachusetts, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Logan Man of Red Sox' Million-Dollar Destiny

New Trainer Must Help $500,000 Worth of Skin and Bones.

By George Considine.

WHEN no less an authority than Brutus Hamilton, brilliant Olympic cinder scorcher and present track coach at the University of California, ventures the statement that big league baseball players, as a general rule, are the worst trained athletes in the world, there, you hot stove champions, is something to merit your attention.

With this in mind, let us consider a specific case. It doesn't take much foresight to realize what an astounding responsibility confronts our own Roland Logan, young G. W. trainer, when he actively assumes his position as head of the conditioning department of the Boston Red Sox. In his skillful and velvety hands rests the fate of more than a half million dollars worth of the purest flesh and bone that the game has to offer. Logan's job is to get and keep this human machinery "in the pink," well oiled, and what is most important of all, fit enough to guarantee many additions to the "win" column later on.

Topping Logan's list of charges is Joe Cronin, who recently cost Marse Yawkey the none too paltry sum of 250,000 sheckels.

Next, I imagine we ought to think (if we are able to think after that Cronin sitchyashun) of the national pastime's most absorbing mystery drama, namely, "The Strange Case of Lefty Grove." Here is a man, who stood out like the Durante proboseis for a season or so and then before he was 35 years of age 'died' in every sense of the baseball word.

Mr. Logan has informed us that the great port-sider, whose mental outlook for the coming season is 99.44 per cent brighter than it was last year, is making every effort to regain his magic pitching prowess, even going so far as to have his tonsils removed, several infected teeth extracted and a delicate operation performed on his sinus tract. And, despite his more than apparent debilities, Grove is quoted as a $125,000 commodity.

Then, lest we forget, there is baseball's most versatile family battery—Wes and Rick Ferrell. No matter whom we wrap them up for, they are collectively worth 125,000 of anybody's simoleons, and by that I mean bucks.

Of course, we all are aware of the fact that Wee Willie Werber, the Scarlet Hose's ace third sacker and former Tech High star, wears a six number price tag in this morning's market.

Second base is adequately held to its moorings by a well-known young man named Chalmers Cissel, who became affiliated with Yawkey, Incorporated, only after that firm had made an outlay of some $75,000 in cash and $40,000 in players.

Myomy! That grand total is beginning to resemble the number of molecules in the Washington Post Building already and we haven't mentioned the aggregate worth of the rest of the club, which includes such top notch performers Carl Reynolds, the former Griffman, and the redoubtable Fred Ostermueller.

No longer is Napoleon the man of destiny. The name is Roland Logan. We of the great unwashed can but bare out heads and wish him tons of luck.

Cronin Is Chief Charge; High-Priced Grove Also in Waiting.

Cotton Closes 10 Points Off As Week Ends

Average for Middling Put at 12.45; Spot Sales Continue Dull.

Cotton prices fluctuated considerably during the week and closed on Friday, January 18, about 10 points lower than a week earlier.

Following the announcement by the Secretary of Agriculture on Thursday that the national quota under the Bankhead act would be 10,500,000 bales of 500 pounds of lint cotton for the 1935 season, cotton prices advanced sharply but most of the advance was lost on Friday. Sales of spot cotton continued small and inquiries for both domestic and foreign accounts were reported as less numerous than for the previous week. Although the daily rate of domestic mill consumption in December was slightly lower than in November, cloth production during the first half of January indicates some increase in the rate of mill activity and domestic mill stocks continued low.

Cotton Cloth Less Active.

Cotton cloth markets were less active with prices somewhat lower. Exports for the week increased somewhat but fresh buying for foreign account was reported as somewhat less than for the previous week. Exports of Indian cotton continued large but prices of Indian relative to prices of American cotton continued to increase. Although the general leval of commodity and security prices declined during the week, further increases in business activity are indicated and retail sales were reported as well maintained.

The ten-market average for middling ⅞-inch cotton on January 18 was 12.45 cents, compared with 12.54 cents on January 11, and 11.20 cents on the corresponding day last season. Grade and staple premiums and discounts on January 18 were unchanged from the previous week.

Following the announcement of restrictions under the Bankhead act for the 1935 crop prices of new crop futures contracts advanced relative to prices of old crop contracts.

Year's Quota Fixed.

On January 17 the Secretary of Agriculture announced a quota of 10,500,000 bales of 500 pounds lint to be ginned from the 1935 crop, tax free, under the Bankhead act.

In addition, there are now in the hands of producers unused tax exemption certificates for about 700,000 bales of 478 pounds net issued in 1934. Taking into account the weights involved, it was concluded by the trade that farmers would be permitted to market, tax free, approximately 11,700,000 bales of 478 pounds net weight during the 1935 season.

This with the further announcement of the privilege to producers participating in the voluntary reduction campaign to rent land to the Government up to and including 35 per cent of their base acreage was followed by advancing prices, but force of the announcement was not sufficient to sustain the advance.

Spot Continues Dull.

Sales of spot cotton during the week as reported by the ten designated markets amounting to 53,000 bales, were about 1,000 bales larger than the small sales of the previous week but about 23,000 bales smaller than for the corresponding week a year ago.

Domestic and foreign inquiries were reported as somewrat less numerous than during the previous week and offerings by merchants and shippers, as well as by producers, continued very light.

Exports of U. S. Grains Rise 256,498 Bushels

New York, Jan. 20.—Exports of wheat (including flour as wheat) from United States and Canadian ports, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended January 12, 1935, totaled 1,947,836 bushels, as compared with 1,691,338 bushels in the previous week and 4,042,082 bushels in the corresponding week of last year. For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 88,935,372 bushels, as against 114,953,837 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Corn exports for this week were 2,000 bushels, compared with none in the preceding week and 2,000 bushels last year. For the season, corn exports totaled 8,000 bushels, as against 310,000 bushels for the like period in the previous year.

Business Briefs

Columbia Wholesalers, local distributors of the Norge Corporation, are sponsoring a complimentary performance of the "Freedom of the Shes" to be given on Friday at the National Theater.

The play is designed to form a part of the company's 1935 merchandising program, and will be presented in 57 cities of the United States.

Complimentary tickets to the performance are available through any Norge dealer.

Gerald D. Grosner, leading local men's wear merchant, has left for Chicago, where he will preside at the annual convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers.

The conclave, scheduled from January 21 to 25, will discuss primarily the effect of recent government legislation on the industry.

McKesson & Robbins, Inc., November sales amounted to $10,752,627 against $9,201,890 in November, 1933, an increase of 16.8 per cent.

Motorman Rides Taxi.

Green Bay, Wis., Jan. 20 (AP).—George P. Kriescher, street car operator, did the unforgivable. He rode a 10 cent taxicab to work. His union, fighting cabs as a menace to unemployment for its members, yesterday imposed a "heavy" fine on him.

British Economist Offers Solution In Event Gold Decision Is Adverse

He Would Restore Old Value in U. S., Keep Status Abroad.

By Ralph Robey.

Discussions in financial circles last week continued to center almost exclusively on the gold cases before the Supreme Court. At times other subjects, such as the economic security plan of the Administration, the outlook for further labor troubles in one or two of the leading industries, etc., came to the surface but interest in them quickly gave way to what will happen if the decision on the gold cases is adverse to the Government.

Such a concentration of interest on the gold case decision is well justified. The business statistics made public during the week not only reflected no appreciable change but no longer could be taken as indicative of the present situation. This is because they are as of the preceding week and hence fail to reflect the widespread uncertainty that has been created by doubts as to the decision of the court on the gold cases.

In attempting to appraise the future, accordingly, these trade statistics have to be viewed as stale and relatively insignificant. To judge what is immediately ahead of us one must know to what extent, if any, there has been a cessation of activity and planning pending the court decision. Positive information on this of course is not yet available and never will be in complete form. The virtually unanimous opinion among business analysts, nevertheless, is that there has been a slowing down, especially in the making of forward commitments and plans for future expansion.

Gold Case Discussion Less Hysterical.

In so far as the gold case decision itself is concerned, the discussion last week reflected considerable more level-headedness than in the preceding week. In the first place, while there remained the greatest diversity of opinion as to the probable decision, there no longer was much general fear of wild and incalculable action by the Government should it lose the case. For example, it came to be recognized that most of the plans that had been widely discussed as a possible means of meeting an adverse decision were hopelessly impossible.

Outstanding among these discarded plans was the threat of inflation. When the gold cases first began to attract attention inflation was offered as the almost inevitable result of an adverse decision. Such a conclusion probably was largely a result of the statement of the Attorney General, in his plea to the court, that should the gold clause be upheld the debt of the country would be increased by $69,000,000,000. This claim, in combination with the power of the inflation group in Congress, made it an easy step to view that should the Government lose the case, it simply would start the printing presses.

Now it is almost universally realized that such a procedure would not meet the situation. Regardless of how many billions of dollars were printed by the Government, the fact would remain that a corporation with gold-clause bonds outstanding still would be unable to meet its maturities. That is, the corporation would be unable to meet the maturities unless the Government just handed over to it a part of the money. And even inflationists would oppose that method of getting money in circulation.

100 Per Cent Tax Held Not to Be Answer.

A second proposal that earlier received much attention, but now has been ruled out, is for the Government to levy a tax of 100 per cent on all profits derived as a result of the gold clause being upheld. It now is felt that this suggestion has nothing in its favor. All kind of arguments are advanced against it. Perhaps the strongest is that it would be such an obvious subterfuge that almost certainly the Supreme Court would hold it unconstitutional. And, further, that even if when the case finally was decided the action was upheld, the uncertainty prevailing in the meantime would have created the worst kind of economic conditions.

A third discarded suggestion is for the Government simply to refuse to honor its obligations. This now is viewed as an impossible means of meeting an adverse decision because of the effect it would have on the Government's credit.

Still another of the earlier plans which no longer receives attention is the "packing" of the Supreme Court. And another that the Democratic Party use all of its present power to drive through a constitutional amendment at once. Neither of these suggestions is now viewed as worthy of consideration because in both cases there necessarily would be greater or less of delay and in the meantime we should be suffering at least some of the "chaos" so widely advertised by the Government in the presentation of its case.

Most Ingenious Proposal By British Economist.

The above are all on the negative side in the sense that they indicate what now is concluded would not be sufficient to maintain the status quo in the event of an adverse decision. On the positive side there is much less progress to be noted over the discussions of a week earlier. Perhaps the most ingenious of all the proposals is that of Mr. E. A. Radice, the brilliant young English monetary economist now in this country studying our financial problems.

According to the reasoning of Mr. Radice an adverse decision would cause difficulties in two directions: First, through increasing the debt of all who now have gold-clause obligations outstanding; secondly, through undermining the dollar value of our export commodities and thereby weakening to some extent our entire commodity price level. If, therefore, "chaos" is to be prevented—granting an adverse Supreme Court decision—it is necessary, on the one hand, to prevent such an increase of debts, which means that the present dollars must be made acceptable in the payment of gold clause obligations, and, on the other hand, to prevent a fall in the value of export commodities, which means that the foreign value of the dollar must be held at its present level.

To accomplish these two aims Mr. Radice proposes that—always granting the adverse decision—the old value for gold be restored domestically, but that the present value be maintained in the foreign exchange markets. This is to be done by, first, returning to the old dollar content for gold; secondly, making a handling charge of $14.33 an ounce (the difference between $20.67 and $35) for the export of gold, and thirdly, paying a premium of $14.33 an ounce for the import of gold.

Plan Would Hold Foreign Exchanges Steady.

Under such a plan, if there was complete freedom in the movement of gold in and out of the country, the foreign exchanges would stay at their present level. Or more accurately, they would have no more tendency to move up or down than they have today. At the same time a paper dollar within our borders would be the exact equivalent of a gold dollar from the point of view of purchasing power and debt-paying power. In consequence we should suffer neither the "chaos" that would come from increasing the debts, nor the "chaos" that would come from having the value of export commodities drop precipitately.

This does not mean, of course, that the proposal does not have objections. It does, quite obviously. As an emergency measure for meeting an adverse decision, nevertheless, it has strong points in its favor—strong enough, in fact, for one to conclude that should the Government lose on its gold cases and "chaos" results, it will be not because such "chaos" was inevitable but because the Administration failed to make the preparation necessary to prevent it.

Much of 'Chaos' Fear Is Gone From Minds of Financiers.

Copper Leads Other Metals In Wider Sale

Tin Affected by Rapid Changes in Sterling; Zinc Is Quiet.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Improving demand for copper from domestic fabricators has been reflected by reported sales of Blue Eagle copper by the code authority in excess of 1,000 tons daily during the past week.

The price remained unchanged at the 9-cent basis, but European prices have fluctuated irregularly.

Early declines abroad were thought to reflect disappointment over apparent delays in the pending conference of world copper producers in New York, but later rallies were regarded by the trade as having been influenced by more favorable developments in this situation although definite information was lacking.

Sterling Affects Tin.

Sharp fluctuations in the sterling exchange caused rapid changes in the price for tin here. Midweek declines attracted buying for spot and forward delivery, but demand tapered off as the price recovered.

With spot supplies here scarce, the quotation for nearby metal went to a premium over forward months. Tin-plate mills were expanding schedules on releases from can manufacturers.

Lead experienced a moderate demand as consumers covered part of their February requirements and prices remained unchanged. While sales may have averaged less than smelter ore intake, sellers were holding steady owing to reports of improving industrial activity and expectations of better demand for the remainder of next month's needs.

Zinc Is Quiet.

Zinc was quiet but steady. Although buyers restricted purchases to small lots, there was no pressure to sell. Relatively high ore prices were said to check smelters from offering metal at concessions. While ore production has been resumed at a normal rate, stocks are being strongly held.

Antimony was dull at unchanged prices, which are said to be relatively too high to attract more than hand-to-mouth buying.

Steel operations continued their upward trend to an estimated 46 per cent of capacity on expanding consumption in various industries of which the automotive is still furnishing an important percentage of orders. The upturn in tin-plate operations aided the rate but demand is being received from miscellaneous industries. While there was no change in finished prices or pig iron, scrap prices rose further.

Chemical Prices Mixed In Trading During Week

New York, Jan. 20.—Prices were moved in both directions last week in the markets for heavy and fine chemicals, the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter will say in its January 21 issue. The movement was slightly more downward than upward, particularly in the pharmaceutical group. Spot business was quiet. Contractual movements were irregular and light. Uncertainty had become more evident.

Higher prices were named here for nicotine sulphate and antimoniate of soda, and for several organic fertilizer materials in Chicago. The downward revision comprised quotations on hydrosulphite of soda, dicalcium phosphate, shellac, nitrate of silver and menthol.

Financial Lists Slow Up Under Gold Case Fear

Flurry Ends Quickly as Wall Street Begins to Regain Balance.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Financial markets thought they saw the ghost of the old dollar stalking about the Supreme Court this week, but as the week closed most financial quarters were insisting it was only an optical illusion.

The fact that the gold clause cases were still before the high court, however, was a constant factor in financial affairs, and promised to remain as such until the constitutionality of Congress' abrogation of obligations to pay in the old dollar is finally decided.

Early in the week, the disinclination to buy foreign currencies on the vague possibility that the dollar might go back to its old parity, some 70 per cent higher, culminated in sharp decline in foreign currencies, which sent a deflationary wave of selling through stock and commodity markets.

Support Provided Quickly.

Support was quickly provided to the exchange market, however, variously attributed to the Bank of France or the American stabilization fund, and nerves were quieted. Stocks and staples recovered part of their losses.

The flurry seemed to reflect just another state of nerves, for most conservative quarters in Wall Street reason that whatever the Supreme Court decides as to the constitutionality of the method pursued in abrogating the gold clauses in bonds, Congress does have the power to coin and regulate the value of money, and the old dollar will not return, particularly in view of the strong inflationist sentiment prevailing in some legislative quarters.

Foreign Bonds Decline.

Foreign bonds declined rather sharply for a time, and rail obligations were momentarily under pressure, as it was reasoned that few roads could stand the burden of having to observe the gold clause in most of the railroad bonds. They recovered substantially in the past three days, however.

In the meantime, highest grade bonds of almost all categories advanced further and a pronounced upward movement developed in preferred stocks, both those on a dividend basis and those thought likely to get back on a dividend paying basis.

Commodity markets skidded on Tuesday, and in the main failed to get back to where they started.

Business news remained fairly cheerful. Dun & Bradstreet said retail trade was the best for this time of year since 1931. Steel production continued to quicken. The weekly electric power figures showed a slightly less than seasonal gain after the New Year's holiday week, and railroad freight movements failed by a narrow margin to get up to the levels of a year ago.

Rail Credit Group Will Pay $726,166

Dividend in Liquidation to Be Distributed on January 31.

E. G. Buckland, president of the Railroad Credit Corporation, authorizes the following statement:

The Railroad Credit Corporation announces that it will make a liquidating distribution on January 31, 1935 of $726,166, or one per cent to participating carriers. Of this amount, $344,834 will be in cash and $381,332 will be in credits.

This will be the fourteenth liquidating distribution that has been made to participating carriers since liquidation began on June 1, 1933, and will bring the total amount distributed to $21,353,344, of which $9,442,565 is cash and $11,910,779 credits. The authorized distribution aggregates 29 per cent of the $75,422,410 fund after deduction of the $1,790,190 direct funds in reimbursement of taxes paid on the revenue turned over to the pool.

Seeks Sheriff's Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—W. A. Farmer, former prohibition agent and county officer in Campbell County, has announced himself a candidate for sheriff of that county. His candidacy is subject to the Democratic primary in August.

Fredericksburg V. M. I. Club Elects Harrison

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 20 (Spl.).—Capt. Gunyon M. Harrison was elected first president of the Virginia Military Institute Club, of Fredericksburg, last night at an organization meeting of V. M. I. alumni.

In addition to Capt. Harrison, who graduated with the class of 1907, other officers elected were: John H. Chiles, vice president, and Lemuel W. Houston, secretary and treasurer.

Trade Trend Ignores Fears Of Gold Clause

Standard Statistics Review Reveals Larger Volume of Business.

New York, Jan. 20.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently comments as follows:

"Despite the uncertainties created by the possibility of an adverse Supreme Court ruling on the abrogation of the gold clause, business is continuing to move ahead at a satisfactory rate. News from Washington doubtless will blow both hot and cold during the next several months, but enactment of major legislation of a definitely restrictive nature does not appear probable.

"The combined forces of seasonal influences, well maintained agricultural purchasing power, Government relief and generally improved business morale should find reflection in a gradually rising trend of trade volumes during the next two months at least.

Results for the first 1935 quarter will make a definitely favorable comparison with those of the corresponding period of last year.

"Retail buying during the first half of January has shown the expected reaction to pre-Christmas activity. Most retailers are reported to be planning physical inventories for the spring season 5 per cent to 10 per cent larger than a year earlier.

Restaurants Set Low Mark In Failure List

About 14 Out of 1,000 Retail Firms Default During Year.

New York, Jan. 20.—About 14 out of every 1,000 retail establishments fail each year. This conclusion is based on an analysis by the National Industrial Conference board of the latest available data regarding failures of various types of retail concerns and the approximate number of such concerns in existence.

Restaurants, in this study, show the highest immunity to failure. Other concerns displaying marked resistance to business stress are dairies, food stores, optical and scientific instrument stores, cigar stores, automobile concerns, and garages.

The following table prepared by the conference board presents the most recent statistics concerning rates of failure of retail establishments:

Type of establishment.	Establishments 1929	Failures, 1931 No.	Failures, 1931 Per 1,000 Establishments in 1929

New metals for a new world

THERE is more than usual significance in the impending consolidation that will form the new Republic Steel Corporation.

It means a more efficient combination of forces and equipment grouped together in a basic industry. It means that new capital will release tremendous energy and an adequate supply of the new metals that are bringing into being a new world about us.

Republic leads in the production of these new metals. But the public is not yet fully aware of what this leadership implies.

The automobile industry alone, in 1934, added five billion dollars to the national wealth. The progress of this industry has been dependent upon new high tensile steels and special alloys. Ten years ago the average speed of automobiles was twenty miles an hour less than today, because ten years ago the metals that go into today's cars could not be fabricated.

Ten years ago all-metal airplanes were unknown. The first of them was called, derisively, "the tin goose." True to its name, it proved to be one of the greatest pathfinders in the expansion of a new industry, in opening up new fields for human endeavor.

Ten years ago stream-lined trains were a fantastic dream. Today they are a reality that is bringing new life to the railroad industry. Their basic principle is not merely in design; it is in the utilization of new metals and alloys that combine great strength with lightness.

The Chrysler and Empire State buildings were only the conceptions of imaginative artists, ten years ago. The Golden Gate Bridge was an impossibility. So were the great steamships Normandie and Queen Mary of today. Where were electric-refrigerating, air-conditioning, radio-broadcasting, modern household equipment — only ten years ago?

Republic Steel Corporation has been one of the greatest contributors to the impulse that is carrying America into a new industrial age with rapidly increasing momentum.

Its metals are virtually tailor-made to new conditions.

Back of every industrial advance you will find the engineers. These men are probably the greatest of all idealists because they aim constantly towards a perfection of efficiency — yet they do not deal in theory alone. They must work with facts. They are limited only by the material that industry can provide.

The Republic Steel Corporation is itself a product of the twentieth century. It plans and builds in the spirit of this new age. Where modern industry functions at its best, you will find that much of the framework and the sinews come from the special metals of Republic Steel.

Woman on Trial In Fatal Shooting

Mrs. Rose Accused in Manslaughter Case.

Cambridge, Md., Jan. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Melvina Rose, charged with manslaughter in connection with a shooting at Sandy Hill, near here, is scheduled to come to trial before the Dorchester County Circuit Court here early this week.

State's Attorney J. Gorman Hill will direct the prosecution of Mrs. Rose, who was indicted by the grand jury last week. She shot and killed James Murphy December 15 with a gun she told a coroner's jury she thought was unloaded.

Another manslaughter case and one murder trial are on the court docket. Court reconvenes tomorrow for a special session to consider 15 indictments returned by the grand jury, including cases of murder, manslaughter, robbery, larceny and receiving stolen goods.

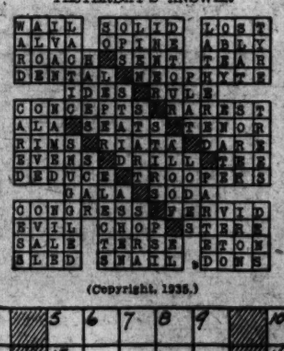
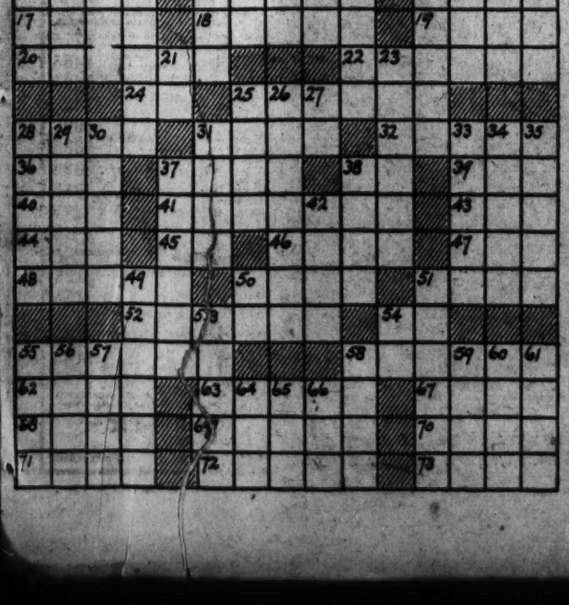
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER



(Copyright, 1935.)



Walt Mason, Himself

Christmas Souvenirs.

I am smoking Christmas stogies, of the sort men don't admire, and they say, the blamed old fogies, that my shoes must be afire. They are wheezing, they are gasping, as they smell the fragrant smoke, and their words are harsh and rasping, and they say it is no joke. In my wanderings and windings through the town I hear them yell, "Prithee smoke some leather findings—they would have a sweeter smell." I am wearing pink suspenders I received on Christmas Day, thay have many striking splendors, they are brilliant they are gay. But I hate that pinkish color, and it gives my soul a stab, and I yearn for something duller, somthing gray or something drab. But I see I'll have to wear them or offend a loving niece; we have crosses and must bear them, all men have a cross apiece. I am wearing handsome slippers and they give my feet a shock; divers blithe and joyous trippers put them in my Christmas sock. They are all illuminated with designs in red and blue, and I see then I am fated to be lame three months or two. For they hurt my fallen arches and they chafe my tender corn; weary is the man who marches in the gifts of Christmas morn. I have handkerchiefs in dozens, they came to me by the score; all my nieces, aunts and cousins sent me six, and sometimes more. Be we princes, be we peasants, be we clerks or belted earls, we must try to use the presents we received from boys and girls.

APPLE MARY Post Comics on the Air—Sundays, 8:45 a. m.—WMAL By Martha Orr

DENNIE HAS MADE A NEW FRIEND. JEAN LIVES IN APPLE MARY'S OLD HOME, AND HAS ASKED HIM TO VISIT HER. HE IS THRILLED OVER THE PROSPECT AND IS TRYING TO PERSUADE GRAN'MA TO LET HIM GO.
BUT, GRAN'MA, IF I VISIT JEAN I'LL GET TO GO INSIDE THAT HOUSE.
YES, BUT WE DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT THOSE PEOPLE, DENNIE—
WHY DON'T YOU ASK MISS HETTY? I'LL BET SHE KNOWS ALL ABOUT 'EM.
THAT'S A GRAND IDEA. IF ANYONE COULD TELL US, SHE COULD.
MISS HETTY, I WANT TO ASK YOU ABOUT THE LITTLE GIRL LIVING AT MR. CRAFTEE'S PLACE?
OH, JEAN? THE HOUSEKEEPER'S CHILD? SHE'S A NICE LITTLE THING. I FEEL SORRY FOR HER—
SHE ASKED DENNIE TO COME VISIT HER, AND—
MY LANDS! I WOULDN'T GO NEAR THAT PLACE. THAT HIGH WALL, AND THOSE VICIOUS DOGS ARE THERE FOR SOME REASON!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Au Revoir, Monty! By Harry J. Tuthill

A MILLIONAIRE BURGLARY SUSPECT WAS NOT THE ONLY VICTIM OF SUSPICION AS PEGGY'S NEW FRIEND APOLOGIZED TO AN AUDIENCE THAT SEES TWO SIDES TO AN EXCITING MISTAKE.
MISS BUNGLE SAID, OH WHAT'S THAT NOISE? WELL, I STEPPED OUT INTO THE HALL HERE AND SAW WHAT I THOUGHT WAS A MAN SNEAKING....
SNEAKING? OH MR. BROWNING, PU-LEASE.
I MEAN THE LIGHT IN THE HALL WAS DIM AND...
WE UNDERSTAND, MR. BROWNING. ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN....
GEORGE, PLEASE DON'T....WHAT WERE YOU GOING TO SAY MR. EL DORADO?
OH, ONLY THAT... WELL, BY JOVE, I STILL CAN'T UNDERSTAND WHY THIS AH....FELLOW, TOOK ME FOR A BURGLAR..
WELL...
GEORGE PLEASE! YES, MR. EL DORADO. GO ON.
BROWNING? THE NAME SEEMS A BIT... HAVE YOU MET ME BEFORE, MY GOOD MAN?
NO, I DID NOT. AGAIN LET ME SAY I'M SORRY FOR...
WELL ANYHOW...
GEORGE PLEASE!
OH MR. EL DORADO, WE ALL FEEL SIMPLY TERRIBLE ABOUT THIS.. WELL, UTTERLY DUMB AFFAIR.
THANK YOU, MRS. BUNGLE. I'M SURE THAT PEGGY TOO, APPRECIATES....AH... EVERYTHING.... WELL, I MUST RUN ALONG NOW. I BID BOTH OF YOU LADIES A PLEASANT GOOD DAY.

DIXIE DUGAN Simple Enough By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

MRS. DUGAN — YOU AND DIXIE WILL BE DOING A GREAT SERVICE FOR SCIENCE IF YOU KEEP THIS CHILD IN YOUR CARE - AT LEAST UNTIL HIS FATHER CLAIMS HIM — AND SAY NOTHING PUBLICLY ABOUT HIM WHILE MY FELLOW DOCTORS AND I STUDY THE CASE
BUT, DR. BROWN — HE'S SUCH A PROBLEM! YOU SAY HE'S THREE YEARS OLD — THOUGH HE TALKS LIKE SIX — AND YET HE'S LIKE A BABY — NOT EVEN ANY TEETH — HOW CAN WE HANDLE HIM — FEED HIM?
THAT'S SIMPLE, MRS. DUGAN — HE CAN HAVE THE SAME DIET AS AN ORDINARY BABY — MILK, STRAINED VEGETABLES, FRUIT JUICES, CUSTARD — POSSIBLY BEEF-EXTRACT
BUT HE'S SO DIFFERENT
WELL, TREAT HIM ACCORDINGLY — IN OTHER WORDS — FEED HIM AS IF HE WERE SIX-MONTHS OLD, EXERCISE HIM LIKE A THREE-YEAR OLD AND TREAT HIM LIKE A SIX-YEAR OLD — THAT'S SIMPLE!
IF YOU THINK THAT THAT'S SIMPLE — I GUESS YOU WERE NEVER TH' MOTHER O' EVEN AN' ORDINARY CHILD

THE GUMPS Now on the Radio—Post Comics—WMAL, Sundays, 8:45 a. m. Old Eagle Eye

WELL-MAMA - IF YOU'LL EXCUSE ME FOR A LITTLE WHILE - I HAVE SOME RATHER IMPORTANT AFFAIRS TO WORK ON - I HOPE YOU'LL FORGIVE ME IF I LOCK MYSELF IN -
NOW WHAT COULD HE HAVE THAT'S SO PRIVATE HE DOESN'T EVEN WANT HIS OWN FAMILY TO KNOW ABOUT IT? DOESN'T HE TRUST US? DOES HE THINK WE'RE TRYING TO SPY ON HIM?
I'D JUST LIKE TO KNOW WHAT HE'S DOING WITH ALL OF THOSE PAPERS - I WONDER IF IT COULD BE HIS WILL - HM-M-WHAT'S THAT HE'S TAKING OUT OF THE BLACK BRIEF-CASE NOW?
OH, JOY - OH, HAPPY DAY - WHAT DO MY EYES BEHOLD - BANKNOTES - A WHOLE BRIEF-CASE FULL - THERE MUST BE TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS IN EACH OF THOSE STACKS - AND NOW HE'S SORTING THEM OUT - ONE STACK - TWO STACKS - THREE STACKS - FIVE STACKS - OH, HEAVENS - I WOULDN'T HAVE MISSED THIS FOR THE WORLD -

DICK TRACY Trapped!

WELL, DETECTIVE — HOW DO YOU LIKE IT IN A CLOSET FILLED WITH CHLOROFORM, EH? WHY DON'T YOU SAY SOMETHING, EH?
OR WHY DON'T YOU FIRE ANOTHER SHOT THROUGH THE DOOR AT US? DON'T YOU FEEL LIKE FIRING A GUN?
WHAT A FOOL I WAS TO LET ARSON MANEUVER MARY STEELE BETWEEN ME AND HIMSELF AND THEN SHOVE ME INTO THIS CLOSET.
THE DECANTER OF CHLOROFORM WAS ON THAT SHELF AND WHEN THEY SHOVED ME IN HERE THAT TRICK ARRANGEMENT PUSHED THE CONTAINER OFF AND BROKE IT. I'M GOING BLOTTO - I CAN FEEL IT!
